There's a magic spell in the fumes of good, pure Coffee, the kind that refreshes and invigorates by the odor alone. In order to make Coffee of that description, there are several things that it is necessary to be very careful about. You must buy fresh Coffee — Coffee that has not been roasted more than a week —Coffee gets stale very quickly after roasting. Have it ground fine and put about a tablespoonful in pot to each cup of water. Fill pot with freshly boiled water. Simmer, DON'T BOIL, for two or three minutes. Serve with cream or hot milk. Runaway Cars Wrecked.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—A serious accident was narrowly averted on the James Bay Railway. Five flat cars got away from Road Hill Station while an engine was shunting other cars down grade from there to Toronto. The cars went as far as Duncan Station, about nine miles south of here. They had attained a speed of 50 or 60 miles an hour, and collided with engine 161. Engineer Chas Quantic coming north with gravel train. Both engineer and firemen jumped, saving their lives.

Something Doing.

Toronto Sept. 1.—The Royal Commission on Insurance will resume its sitting in Toronto on Tuesday, Sept. 4.

The special actuary of the Commission has been in the city for some time, and has made some interesting discoveries, it is said.

The public may expect some startling revelations within a few weeks.

Men who face death to achieve fame not in the line of duty are to be pitied.

ONTARIO BLENDED FLOUR.

Excels Manitoba's Best and Dominion Millers Will Advertise Fact.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—At the annual meeting of the Dominion Millers' Association, the following officers were elected:

President, S. W. Vogan, Walkerton; 1st vice-president, Wm. Monro, Thorold; 2nd vice-president, A. E. McLeod, Stratford; secretary-treasurer, C. B. Watts, Toronto; executive committee, George Goldie, Ayr; J. D. Flavelle, Lindsay; Alex Noble, Norval; Hedley Shaw, St. Catharines and Thorold; E. V. Tillson, Tillsonburg, and D. B. Wood, Brantford.

Secretary Watts reported funds of $19,000, an increase of $4,000. The sum of $1,500 will be spent in advertising the advantages of blended flours. It was stated that, for every purpose excepting the making of pure bakers' bread, winter wheat and blended flour made in Ontario were preferable to pure Manitoba.

A resolution was adopted to the effect that the association express their appreciation of the Dominion Government's action by appointing a commission to enquire into the inspecting and handling of Manitoba grain from the time it leaves the farmer until it reaches the consumer.

Something better always makes its appearance when the old and wornout things fall.—Andersen.

A Santiago Uprising Now.

Bad News From Cuba if it Turns Out to Be True.

Situation Has Assumed a Most Gloomy Hue—Darker Than at any Time Since the Insurrection Began—Only Province Remaining Peaceful Is Porto Principe—Trinidad Surrounded By Insurgents.

Havana, Sept. 1.—The situation was far darker last night than at any previous time since the insurrection broke out. News of an uprising in Santiago Province is causing the greatest concern. When Mr. Sleeper, the American charge d'affaires here, was told the contents of the Associated Press Santiago despatch, he endeavored to verify it through the State Department, but was told it was absolutely untrue. Subsequently the despatch was verified from private sources, and from newspaper sources. It is the opinion here that the worst calamity of all to the Palma Government would be an insurrection in Eastern Cuba.

The Associated Press was informed last night by two reliable eye-witnesses that Cardenas, which hitherto has been considered a perfectly peaceful city, was the scene Thursday of desultory fighting between the police and rural guards on the one side and roving insurgents on the other.

The only province remaining peaceful is Porto Principe. The Associated Press correspondent at Cienfuegos telegraphed last night that there are 3,000 armed insurgents in that vicinity and that all the towns in Santa Clara Province are controlled by insurgents, who attack and loot trains and seize the property of foreigners as well as of Cubans.

Trinidad is surrounded by insurgents, and the Government appears powerless to protect the property of Americans and other foreigners. Railway trains are held up at will and passengers searched. The Cuban Central Railway has declined to assume responsibility for the safety of passengers.

Want 5,000 Chinese In Free.

Montreal, Sept. 1.—J. G. H. Bergeron, M. P. for Beauharnois, who returned yesterday from the Pacific Coast, says that leading Chinese residents out there are getting up a petition, asking the Dominion Government to allow 5,000 Chinese to enter Canada without paying the head tax. The idea is to employ these men in the mountain section of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Celestials to return home at the completion of the enterprise.

England Sunburned.

London, Sept. 1.—The last day of August broke all heat records in this country. The official instruments at 2 p. m. yesterday registered 91 degrees in the shade and 129 in the sun. A number of heat prostrations in the streets were reported.

Indians Raise Objections.

Ottawa, Sept. 1.—A difficulty has arisen between the Department of Marine and Fisheries and the Indians of the Babine agency at the head waters of the Skeena River, on account of the Indians placing weirs or dams in the river. The Department had these dams taken out, and the Indians are now asserting their right to place them there.

Haileybury Merchants Assign.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—Assignee Richard Tew will wind up the business of McCabe & Stinson, merchants, at Haileybury, in whose premises began the recent conflagration. The liabilities will run up to about $2,500. Against this is $1,800 of insurance money and some local book debts.

A Big Attendance.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—The actual registered attendance at the tuberculosis exhibition up to the hour of closing last night was 12,969.

FOSTER FISH AND GAME

Ontario Association Would Prohibit Export of Food Fish.

Sportsmen From All Over the Province Join Together In Formulating a Series of Suggestions—Ask For the Appointment of a Commissioner a Member of Government and Numerous Overseers.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—The convention of the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association met in the main building of the University of Toronto yesterday. About seventy-five keen-eyed sportsmen and patient fishermen from all over the province faced the chairman, Chief Justice Falconbridge, who delivered a scholarly address, replete with good solid information regarding the initiation of the movement, the valuable work at present being done, and outlining what was proposed to be undertaken in the future.

Protection For Game Fish.

Dealing with speckled trout, the committee on game fish recommended that the minimum length for catching be seven, instead of six, inches; that sale under any conditions be declared illegal, and that no change be made from the prohibition against exportation; while bass should not be placed in waters where speckled trout were.

These other recommendations were made by the committee.

Black bass—Twelve inches to be the minimum length for catching; open season to be from June 15 to Nov. 30, inclusive; approval of pond rearing of small mouthed fish.

Silver bass—Not to include them in fishing regulations.

Maskinonge—Open season June 15 to Nov. 30; propagation in fish hatcheries if workable; more Government attention to maintaining lake levels during the spawning season.

Pickerel—Not to include in fishery regulations.

Frogs—To prohibit sale or exportation of frogs' legs for five years.

No Export of Food Fish.

The absolute prohibition of the exportation of all food fish for five years was the radical recommendation made by the committee dealing with food fish. It was proposed that the 5-inch meshes be the smallest allowed for catching white fish and salmon trout, and that from Oct. 1 to April 1 be made a close season for white fish, salmon trout and pickerel, and the close season for herring from Oct. 15 to April 1, also it is asked that the catching of sturgeon for five years be prohibited. Apart from the great lakes it is recommended that the use of nets be not allowed, and that the Government take pains to ascertain that licenses be given only to proper persons. The appointment of a commissioner, who as a member of the Government would have charge of the Department of Fish and Game, was also approved.

Furbearing Animals.

The committee on fur-bearing animals declared satisfaction with the law prohibiting the killing of beaver and otter before Nov. 1, 1910, but believed it was not being sufficiently enforced. It was recommended that there be established more preserves for propagation, and that there be strict Government supervision. It was declared that furs were being exported to the United States, contrary to law, and a remedy suggested was the establishment of reciprocal relations between Canada and the United States. A close season, from Nov. 1 to Feb. 1, was favored. The Government should adopt more stringent protective measures.

For muskrats, an open season in Northern Ontario, from Oct. 15 to May 1, and in southern waters, from Nov. 1 to May 1, was desired; and that 15 days be allowed for disposal after the season's close. The Government should take steps to regulate the taking of marten, mink and fisher, and the close season should be from Nov. 1 to March 1. The Government should establish more preserves for propagation.

Better Inspection.

The committee on fishery overseers and game wardens reported in favor of appointing efficient men to look after both fish and game, one to be assigned to each of the counties, or districts where game and fish abounded, their whole time to be given to the work; that they have power to appoint assistants in special cases, and that two or more special detectives be appointed to investigate, where necessary, and report to departmental Minister. It was also asked that the officers of each branch of the association be appointed guardians by the Government, without salary.

Feathered Game.

A close season for feathered game, from Dec. 15 to Sept. 15, was favored. The meeting declared against duck-shooting in the spring, the use of gasoline or other launches or sailboats in duck-shooting, or routing, and the use of stationary blinds or hides more than 100 yards from the shore line. Boats or punts should be allowed to be used in open water; but decoys not tolerated over 100 yards from any shore line or rush bed. It should be unlawful for plover or any other shore birds to be shot in spring. A law in favor of the cultivation of quail, and making it unlawful to shoot them for three years, was favored. Strong objection was expressed to the sale and exportation of ducks.

The committee on reciprocal arrangements with the United States reported in favor of taking steps to make arrangements to restrict the shipping of fish and game illegally captured in Ontario into the United States, and vice versa; also, that there should be uniform laws for the propagation and protection of fish of the great international waters, and arrangements made, by which the officials of both countries could work together for this object.

Prohibition of Nets.

The committee on nets favored the absolute prohibition of trap, hoop and pound nets, as very destructive. Gill nets should be licensed in non-protected waters only. Nets illegally used shall be destroyed on sight. All licensed nets and buoys should carry the license number. The committee was against the exportation of any kind of fish, and opposed net fishing on all inland lakes and streams.

It was moved and carried that settlers in unorganized townships be allowed to kill deer and other big game during November only. Stringent laws against the use of firearms in lumber, railway construction, or park camps, except during the open season for red deer, were proposed. At survey camps at a distance of ten miles from any supply camp or settlement the killing of game for food should be allowed.

The Fishery Reserves.

The committee on public game domains, parks and forests recommended that the northern and eastern shores of Georgian Bay from Killarney to Penetang be set aside for angling. The importance of setting apart reservations from time to time as needed, as tending to increase the supply of fish and game, and prevent the acquisition by private parties and clubs of large tracts of the public domains for exclusive hunting and fishing privileges was favored.

The committee on the transportation of fish and game by common carriers, made up of delegates of the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association, together with officers of the Grand Trunk and C. P. R., gave the unanimous opinion that it was to the interest of the country and the railways alike to prohibit the export of game and game fish. It was found that the present system of inspection was ineffective, and it was recommended that the Government make it illegal for any transportation company to carry commercial fish for export unless accompanied by a Government inspector's certificate and a detailed service showing the nature of the fish. The Government should appoint inspectors at strategic points, and a nominal fee charged for inspection and certificate issuance. The recommendations are to apply only to fish exported for commercial purposes, and not to fish caught by tourists.

Big Game Hunting.

The matter of big game was not reached till late in the afternoon, and, time not serving consideration of the more important recommendations of the committee was deferred, namely, that the time for hunting be extended to Nov. 30, that every licensee be entitled only to 15 consecutive days hunting in each year, and that the use of dogs be allowed.

The meeting put itself on record in favor of permitting the search of lumber camps for venison, cariboo and moose meat, holding the jobber and license holder liable to heavy fines. It was resolved that one year in every five would be sufficient for the protection of moose and cariboo. Satisfaction was declared, with the prescribed number of deer to be killed by each person, and with the law preventing the carrying of firearms in woods where moose, cariboo or deer were found between Nov. 30 and Sept. 15 following without a permit.

It was resolved that the exportation of deer, moose and cariboo be prohibited except by licenses, such animals to be exported as are killed only by licensees now residents of Ontario.

It was also resolved that hounds should be restricted from running at large where small game exist, between April 1 and Oct. 1.

The association will next meet Easter week, 1908.

EDITORS AT THE FAIR.

Attendance Exceeded That of Corresponding Day of Last Year.

Toronto, Sept. 1.—Ontario editors were the lions at the exhibition grounds yesterday. The scintillations of intellect during the day were equal to the fireworks at night, and of this, unfortunately, no complete record remains. It is wonderful to see the doughty champions of party and principle sitting down together in peace and amity. There was but one note in their expressions, and it was a hearty chord of approbation and praise for the big fair. Prof. Goldwin Smith made the address of the day at the luncheon.

The attendance yesterday exceeded that of the corresponding day last year by a respectable majority, and the weather during the day was perfect, turning cool in the evening. The band of the 2nd Life Guards attracted greater crowds than ever, and the splendid programs were closely followed.

DROVE HIM BACK TO CHEESE.

Result of the Meat Scandals on the British Workman.

Ottawa, Sept. 1—Weddell & Co., London, Eng., importers of dairy products, in a communication to the Trade and Commerce Department, pay a high tribute to the value of Canada's cheese. In their review of the last fiscal year they say that cheese on the British workingman's table was being displaced by frozen mutton and beef until the Chicago, disclosures came, which had the effect of driving the people back to cheese, of which all other countries and colonies combined contributed only 33,000 tons. The quality of Canadian cheese last year was improved.

May Have Been Murder.

Montreal, Sept. 1.—Askel Carlsen, the Scandinavian who was killed on the wharf, as it was supposed by a fall, may have been murdered. Report reaches the coroner that the sailor was beaten and then thrown over Revetment wall. An autopsy is being made.

BISLEY TEAM FOR 1907

In the guaging distance competition the field glass was won by Pte. J. Leask, 2nd Q. O. R., 8 points.

"PRINCESS VICTORIA" BLAMED.

For Collision In B. C. Waters—Damage Suits Will Result.

Vancouver, Sept. 1.—The court of enquiry appointed by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to investigate the cause of the collision between C. P. R. steamship Princess Victoria and Union steamship tug Chehalis on July 21, in the harbor here, in which ten lives were lost, concluded yesterday.

The finding was against the Princess Victoria, and suspended the certificate of Capt. Griffin for six months. Also the costs of the enquiry were against the C. P. R.

The Department will be asked to make new regulations governing shipping here. Many suits for damages are to follow. The verdict was a surprise.

Horticulturalists' Officers.

Guelph, Sept. 1.—At the Ontario Horticultural Association meeting, J. H. Dunlop, A. Gilchrist, W. J. Lawrence and W. Mustein were appointed to wait on the Government and ask to have the horticultural work of the O. A. C. extended; asking that scientific investigation receive more attention.

The new officers are: President, J. Lawrence, Toronto; 1st vice-president, John Walsh, Montreal; 2nd vice-president, E. Dale, Brampton; treasurer, H. Simmers, Toronto; secretary, A. H. Ewing, Woodstock; executive, for one year, A. Pinoteau, E. Annandale, W. Taylor; two years, J. Suckling, J. Eddy, J. Campbell; three years, W. Kehoe, A. S. Stephens, F. Dicke. Representatives to Toronto Fair: H. Simmers; London, A. Stephens, W. Savage; Ottawa, E. I. Hepsted and R. Wright.

Worthy A Good Word.

We seldom recommend any remedy. But because a great many people tell us Bu-Ju, the Gentle Kidney Pill, gives astonishing relief from Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism, we make an exception.

Bu-Ju seems unusually worthy. We know the formula. It is most beneficial and could not possibly produce a "drug habit."

If you have the slightest mistrust of your kidneys, the experience of others warrants your trying Bu-Ju.

Money will be refunded to anyone not satisfied.

Sir William Mulock And Militarism.

The Montreal Star makes the following admirable answer to the speech made at the opening of the Toronto exhibition by that blatant phrase-maker, Sir William Mulock:

"There is something inspiring in such an appeal as that made by Sir William Mulock, in opening the Toronto Exhibition, to keep Canada free from "militarism," remembering that "this is the last spot of refuge on God's green earth where men can come and not pay tribute for the sins of their ancestors." The "sins of their ancestors" in other countries, he explains, take the form of great military national debts. Sir William, his biography tells us, was born of Irish and English parentage; so we may presume that some of the sins of his particular ancestors were committed at Waterloo, and at the repulse of the Armada. It is just possible, therefore, that if his ancestors had not been great sinners in defending that type of liberty, which we have come to regard as British, their descenadnt might not have been the privilege of opening an industrial exhibition—"a triumph of peace"—in the good British city of Toronto.

But Sir William is unduly pessimistic in describing Canada as the only land free from "the curse of militarism." There is — or rather was —Corea. No one could be more beautifully peaceful than the Coreans. When those mistaken "sinners"—the Japanese—were loading themselves with the burdens of "militarism," and when Russia was forcing its way with rude military methods down through Manchuria, the Coreans joined the Peace Society. They did net propose to become sinful ancesters whose progeny would have to carry the burden of "great military debts," to say nothing of having the fighting virus injected into their innocent veins. It is true that sounds escape from Seoul occasionally these days which seem to indicate that these "ancestors" wish that they had been a trifle more sinful when it could have been of any use; but then they can comfort themselves with the reflection that their descendants can—if they regret the illustrious and prostrate virtues of their ancestors — help bear the military financial burdens of Japan.

Then China is not cured by "militarism" in the awful European sense. They have soldiers there; but, until lately at all events, they have not taken the army very seriously. It is true that, as a result, foreigners take possession of sections of their cities and dictate the laws by which they shall be governed. Foreigners interfere with their administration of justice in other ways, and enforce their interference with the assistance of a few gunboats. A foreigner presides over the collection of their customs dues. Recently a column of foreign troops penetrated to their capital, drove their royal family into hiding, and exacted a heavy indemnity. These, however, are mere incidents. The Chinese are free from the frightful burdens of militarism, and know not the sorrows of the oppressed peoples of Britain, France or Germany.

Possibly Sir William might retort that Canada has no "militarism," and yet it does not suffer these humiliations. But, if he should, someone—even in Toronto — might be moved to ask; "Why?" Why is Canada immune from the ills that seem to await the defenceless all over the world? The answer is plain. Simply because the people living in the British Isles are paying for her protection. That is the whole explanation. We are the beneficiaries of the tax payers of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. We are not defenceless. The British fleet and the British army defend us. We are safe upon the highway because our Big Brother will not let anyone touch us.

But it is a trifle amusing under such conditions to hear us lauding ourselves for our superiority to that same Big Brother, because of our escape from the need of "militarism." We can go unarmed because an armed protector walks beside us; and we take advantage of this privilege to assume a superior tone toward all those benighted people who must carry arms. It is to be hoped that John Bull has a greater sense of humor than we sometimes credit him with. Now, of course, no one would advise Canada to shoulder any burden of "militarism" which would impede her development. It is quite arguable—and we venture to think entirely true — that the best thing Canada can do for the Empire today is to become a great nation. As Sir Wilfrid said at Quebec the other day, we have vast transportation projects to carry through and the necessary equipment of a growing nation to provide.

But it is hardly good taste to publicly vaunt our task as builders as superior in morals, civilization and finance to the task of the men who man the outer walls for our protection. It may be that the merchant and the stonemason within the city are "superior" to the soldier who stands in the storm and the peril ouside and wards off the danger. Undoubtedly, when the battle is over, the soldier is often found to have little but his scars while the merchant and the stonemason are very snugly nested. But it is not altogether prudent for the merchant and the stonemason to sneer too audibly at the soldier, lest he propose that they change places. If Sir William should persuade the people of Great Britain to cease from being "sinners" and to abandon "militarism," we may have to turn aside from our railway building and put in some time at drill.

By the Cuban constitution the United States is empowered to intervene for the preservation of the island's independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty and for discharging the obligations imposed by the treaty which ended the war with Spain. JAPANESE BRIDES.

That the movement to free woman from the bonds of overbearing man receives but little encouragement in the sunny land of Japan is evident from the commandments given to Japanese wives on their wedding morning by their mothers. The behests are known as the "Twelve Commandments of the Bride," and read as follows:

"1 The moment you are married you are no longer my daughter. Therefore, you must obey your parents-in-law as you once obeyed your father and mother.

"2. When you are married, your husband will be your sole master. Be humble and polite. Strict obedience to her husband is the noblest virtue a wife can possess.

"3. Always be amiable toward your mother-in-law.

"4. Do not be jealous; jealousy kills your husband's affection for you.

"5. Even though your husband be wrong, do not get angry; be patient, and when he has calmed down, then speak to him gently.

"6. Do not talk too much; speak no evil of your neighbors; never tell lies.

"7. Rise early; retire late, and do not sleep in the afternoon. Drink little wine, and until you are 50 take no part in public assemblies nor mingle in crowds.

"8. Consult no fortune-teller.

"9. Be a good manageress, and especially be economical in your household.

"10. Although you may marry young do not frequent too youthful society.

"11. Do not wear bright-colored garments. Always be neatly but modestly dressed.

"12 Do not pride yourself on your father's rank or fortune. If he is a rich man, never allude to his riches before your husband's relations."

These rules are similar to those which were in vogue in Japan hundreds of years ago.

Hot Shot For Bryan

London, Aug. 31. — The press of India, both Anglo-Indian and native is protesting vigorously against Mr. Bryan's criticism of British rule in India, contained in an article he wrote for a New York newspaper. The Times of India says Bryan's article is made up of emanations of blustering ignorance. "Bryan came to India," says The Times, "as he went to the Philippines, intending to condemn what he saw, and in carrying out his preconceived intention to discredit Imperialism he has appended his name to statements of violent mendacity, such as no honorable and fair-minded statesman would be guilty of uttering."

The Indian Spectator, a native weekly, commenting on Bryan's statement that the Government of India is as arbitrary and despotic as that of Russia, says it is trash.

Referring to Mr. Bryan's inquiry, 'How long will it be before the quickened conscience of Britain's Christian people will apply to Britain's greatest colony the doctrines of human brotherhood which have made the Anglo-Saxon race so great?" The Indian Spectator inquires whether Mr Bryan has ever asked himself when a negro will become President of the United States of America. Preliminary to that stage, it observes, his conscience must be sufficiently quickened not to tolerate hyperboles.

"I think Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill is the best medicine I have ever known," says Mrs. A. V. Green. "For years I have suffered with constipation, and I got so bad at last that no ordinary dose of medicine would help me. I suffered with piles a great deal.

"I am a working woman and always very busy, and I got nothing to help me till I tried Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill. I found this a very satisfactory remedy and can cheerfully recommend it to any who may be suffering as I did."

Right at home here in Belleville is this case, and Mrs. Green will cheerfully testify to anyone in earnest what she knows of Anti-Pill, the Twentieth Century Cure for Constipation.

SUN AND SNOW.

Sometimes Help the Hair to Grow.

In any changeable climate the hair is apt to become brittle and to break off stubby here and there. This makes a hair-dressing almost a necessity, especially to ladies. In using a hair dressing why not get the best, one that combines with it the efficiency in killing the dandruff germ, the germ that eats the hair off at the roots, causing what is called falling hair, and in time baldness. Newbro's "Herpicide" is that kind of a hair dressing. You have no idea how delightful your scalp will feel, and how stylish your hair will appear, after an application or two of Herpicide. It is certainly a wonderful innovation as a scalp antiseptic and hair dressing. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

To-morrow's International Sunday School Lesson.

SEPTEMBER 2 — BARTIMAEUS AND ZACCHAEUS.

Luke 18; 35-19; 10. Memory verses 42, 43. Golden text—"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

HISTORICAL SETTING.

Time—The last of March, A.D. 30; not long after the last lesson.

Place—Jericho, 15 or 20 miles northeast of Jerusalem, in the valley of Jordan.

Place in the Life of Christ—Near the close of the Perean ministry, as He was approaching Jerusalem for the last week of His whole ministry.

35. A certain blind man, named Bartimaeus. Sat by the way side. Because there many people would see his need, and especially now as the crowds were thronging in this main thoroughfare to Jerusalem. Begging. In those days there was almost nothing a blind man could do to earn a living.

36. And hearing the multitude pass (going) by. On the way to the approaching Passover Feast. "How sudden and unexpectedly sometimes our greatest opportunities come to us." Sitting where so many were continually passing, Bartimaeus must often have heard of the wonderful cures Jesus had wrought, but had hitherto failed to recognize him. His hopes now burst into a flame of joy, for (37) Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38. Jesus, thou son of David. That is, the Messiah who was to come, one of whose works was to be the opening of the eyes of the blind (see Isa. 29: 18; 42; 7). Have mercy on me.

39. They which went before in advance of Jesus. Rebuffed him. Remonstrated, told him to hold his peace,—"stop your cries." Why should the great Teacher stop his journey for an insignificant blind beggar! And why should the whole procession of well-to-do people going up to Jerusalem singing "the songs of the Pilgrimage," hastening to the feast of good things, to family gatherings, to the splendid services and sacrifices of the Temple, be hindered and discommoded by miserable beggars, whose cries were as familiar and annoying as the buzzing of insects! But the man was like the importunate widow, he would not cease his importunity, "but he cried out the more, a great deal." (r.v.)

40. Jesus stood, the more needy the man, the more ready Jesus was to help him. Commanded him to be brought. Mark says that they brought Jesus' word to him, and bade him "Be of good cheer; rise, he calleth thee." They had thought more of Jesus' comfort than of his mission. And when he was come. He immediately cast away his cloak or mantle (Mark), in his haste to reach Jesus. Nothing should hinder or delay him.

42. Receive thy sight; thy faith hath saved thee. From his affliction, and more. R.V. has "hath made thee whole," complete, nothing wanting to perfect physical manhood.

43. Note the four-fold result. (1) He received his sight. No longer blind, no longer helpless and useless, no longer dependent on charity, he could give charity and help others. (2) He glorified God. His soul went out in gratitude and praise. He returned all that he could return directly to God. He was not like the nine lepers cured who did not return with the one to give thanks to God. Luke 17: 17. (3) He followed Jesus. He became a disciple. He was "made whole" spiritually as well as physically. (4) He was the means of helping others to a better life, for all the people . . . gave praise unto God.

POINTS OF CONTACT WITH SPIRITUAL LIFE.

1. God wants us to be whole, to be saved, physically; to have sound, healthful, active bodies; and where for reasons unknown persons are afflicted with blindness, there come another kind of healing.

2. Bodily needs are often a means of leading us to seek Jesus.

3. Physical blindness and poverty are a type of spiritual blindness and poverty.

4. Through a knowledge of what Christ has done for others, we learn what He can do and will do for us. This is true of every revival.

5. "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by;" with all His power to help, with all His love.

6. There are always obstacles to be overcome—within, as from a sense of unworthiness and a sense of guilt, from prejudice and passion; without, as from those who sneer, reproach or oppose.

7. But the earnest soul is importunate, and seeks and prays in spite of all opposition.

8. Others help us and bid us "Be of good cheer; rise, He calleth thee."

9. And when we come to Him, He gives us more than we asked, a better life than we ever dreamed.

10. We prove the reality of our change, by praising God, and following His Son. Thus we are prepared to do good, to make known His salvation.

2. A man named Zacchaeus. (1) He was a Jew (v. 9), and, therefore, in his youth he had been trained religiously. Such are much more likely to be restored to a true life than a heathen, or one trained in an ungodly home. (2) For the same reason his conscience was not at ease. (3) He was a chief among the publicans, and, therefore, a social outcast, despised by the good and hated by the patriotic. (4) He was rich, and yet he was not satisfied with his riches. They had not brought him all the comfort and peace and satisfaction he had expected.

3, 4. And he sought to see Jesus. The imperfect tense in the Greek denotes that he "kept seeking," "he was busy seeking." Who he was.

He had restless longings after a better life, which drew him toward the prophet, as the hungry are drawn by food, and the cold by the bright cheer of the fire.

He was little of stature, so that he could not see over the heads of the people to learn where Jesus was. Other people hindered him. The press, r.v., "the crowd."

(2) Another great obstacle was his position as a publican, socially despised, shut away from those who were regarded as religious. If he went into the Temple he would hear the Pharisee thanking God that he was not like that publican.

(3) As he implies in v. 8, some of his business transactions were troubling his conscience. Public confession of sin was a very hard and humiliating thing for him, a chief man of his class.

(4) His riches were, therefore, a hindrance, for as a follower of Jesus he must both restore ill-gotten gains, and be generous with his honest gains.

Compare the rich young ruler and Jesus' parable of the difficulty of a rich man entering the kingdom of heaven.

6. He would be hated by the other publicans for leaving them and throwing a slight upon them, and, on the other hand, despised by the Pharisees, or received with scant courtesy.

5. Jesus . . . looked up and saw him. The action of Zacchaeus was itself a prayer, an earnest prayer. 1. Jesus saw his heart and answered his unspoken prayer. 2. He thrust aside most of the obstacles that stood in the publican's way, by himself offering to be his guest, a request Zacchaeus would not have presumed to make. For to-day I must abide at thy house. "Words of extraordinary grace, for, while the Lord accepted many invitations (Luke 7; 36; 11; 37; 14; 1), yet we do not read that he honored any but this publican by thus offering himself to share his hospitality. The reader will remember the words of the Lord to the church of Laodicea; "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him, and he with me" (Rev. 3; 20). 3. This was a kind of inquiry meeting, for by going to his house, Jesus could guide him, apply divine truths to his particular case, and impress his personality upon him. Thus he would prepare him to be a missionary among his class, as Matthew, the publican, had been before him. 4. The personal presence of Jesus was a great power for his salvation. As Dr. William Adams says, "That is always a memorable time in any man's history when, through a book, a letter, a personal interview, a sermon, a special providence, he is brought into contact with that spiritual power which arrests his waywardness and changes the whole current of his being.

6. And he . . . received him joyfully. When one really wishes to leave sin, and come to Christ, then nothing is so joyful as repenting and receiving Christ, and living in love. 1. This joyful reception was a sign that Zacchaeus had become a true disciple.

7. They all murmured. The Jews. This was so contrary to all their expectations concerning the Messiah. But it was one of the strongest arguments that Jesus was the Messiah. 2. The second proof of Zacchaeus' conversion was his awakened desire to help others.

8. The half of my goods I give to the poor. He made that gift then, and did not wait to put it in his will. Contrast this action with that of the rich young ruler in the last lesson, both as to his readiness to devote his property, and as to the gift which proved true consecration to Christ's service. This was the natural outflow of sincere repentance and conversion to Christ. Thus only would it be a proof. It has been well said that "a personal consecration" should be spelled "a purse-and-all consecration." 3. His repentance and restoration of property unjustly obtained to its lawful owner. If I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation. A sin to which publicans were especially liable.

9. This day is salvation come to this house. The proofs were convincing. Repentance, confession, restitution, devotion of his property to God and man.

I have never known a revival of religion in which these fruits did not appear in the real converts. They appeared in the Revival of Pentecost. This change of conduct has been wonderfully evidenced in the great revival in Wales. "The supreme test of a revival," says the Rev. F. B. Meyer, "is the ethical result." "As to this, the testimony of all on the spot is unanimous. Not merely are all the grosser vices reduced to vanishing point, but the subtler sins of unforgiving rancor, non-payment of debts, dishonest work, are abated."

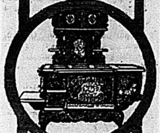
"Four conditions must be observed. They are essential.

"1. Is there any sin in your past life that you have not confessed to God? On your knees at once. Your past must be at peace.

"2. Is there anything in your life that is doubtful? Anything you cannot decide whether it is good or evil? Away with it! There must not be!

"4. Confess Christ publicly before men."

Thus Jesus illustrated his mission, as stated in v. 10.



The Oven That Ends Guesswork

Before you put the roast in an Imperial Oxford oven, let the draft bring the heat to the right point. You'll know when it gets there if you'll look at the oven thermometer. After the roast goes in, you can know (not guess) it will be cooked right in a certain definite time. There's no ups-and-downs to the oven-heat in a range built as this one is,—the diffusive oven-flue takes all the guess work out of cooking, all the drudgery out of oven-use

That Rack That Ends Bother

When the roast needs basting, pull forth the Imperial Oxford draw-out oven rack,—roast and all—slide it right out where you can get at it. Needn't reach in and scorch your fingers nor sear your wrists,—baste it in comfort. That one thing alone—the draw-out rack—ought to make you like this range above all ranges. And that's only one of the twelve better things about this range. Come and look.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Short Lived Insects.

The wonderful brevity of insect life is curiously illustrated in the case of those that prey upon different species of mushrooms. The life of the mushroom itself is measured by hours, yet it is often entirely ruined by an insect which deposits its eggs upon the fungi while it is in the vigor of youth. The entire span of life of this mushroom insect is so brief that the grubs hatch from the eggs and the creature becomes fully developed and capable of laying eggs itself before the mushroom dies, even though the latter's life may not extend over a period of forty-eight hours from the moment it first pushes through the soil.

The Pandora Thermometer

The thermometer on the Pandora range oven means precisely in accuracy to the cook what the square and compass mean to the draftsman. Without the square and compass the draftsman would have to work entirely by guess, just as you do without an accurate and reliable thermometer on your oven.

The Pandora thermometer reduces cooking to an exact science. You know precisely how much heat you have and what it will do in a given time. It is one of the small things which makes the Pandora so much different and better than common ranges.

INTERIOR DECORATING
That's Our Business

And we keep an experienced staff of workmen busy the year round.

True we do outside painting also, but we give preference to decorating.

We have been so busy with our interior work this year that we have found it impossible to do much exterior work.

The service we render our customers is par excellent—better far than is found elsewhere—we have the materials and the methods—have the ideas and the designs. This is why we have so much decorative work continually ahead of us

Most people understand that we do better work and use better materials than is usually used by painters. This is another reason for our everlasting busy-ness.

We use white lead in all our work absolutely better than any other lead that can be found and superior to anything carried on sale in Belleville—and we can prove it Work with this lead will wear longer by 40 per cent and look as much better.

Cures Rheumatism

"I had an attack of Rheumatism—pains near my heart—which increased to such a degree that I became very anxious. I lost my appetite, and an intense itching or heating of the head made life miserable. I asked a druggist, was there nothing he could suggest that would help me, and he replied 'Why not try ABBEY'S SALT?'

I did so, and can now state positively, and without solicitation that the Rheumatism has disappeared—my appetite is grand—and the itching of my scalp has ceased.

I suggested to my aged Father and Mother that they should try ABBEY'S SALT for their Rheumatism—and they tell me they have received immense benefit."

Why We Analyse Orange Meat

You are not half as particular about the food you eat—as we are about the food we make for you to eat.

Would you ever analyze food you buy for the table?

We tested Orange Meat for more than 7 months.

Prof. Waddell, of Queen's University, Kingston made test after test until we perfected Orange Meat—and made it contain MORE wheat sugars than any other cereal in the world.

Orange Meat is the food that builds up healthy bodies and active brains.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Sweet September.

Skidoo August, you were too hot, anyhow.

Now prepare for the pleasantest two months in the year.

Be sure and take your kodak with you when you go to Toronto, and get a snap-shot of the King's horses.

The dear little boys and girls are very joyous these days, we don't think. They'll soon be at school again.

Our worthy Mayor, we rise to remark, is a pretty wideawake man, but he just lost a splendid opportunity to bound into fame by getting up in the Municipal convention at Toronto and moving that Ontario adopt the spelling reform advocated by President Roosevelt. His Worship would have been solid for re-election then.

The Ritchie Company, we notice, celebrates its fiftieth anniversary today. Fifty years is a long time to look back at, and a good many of us were not on the census returns when the Ritchie company started, but everyone of us, to-day, will heartily congratulate the old reliable firm on its record, as showing what pluck, industry and fair dealing can do. Long may it wave.

They are talking about "dates" for the bye-elections. It will be prunes for some of the candidates.

Now that the school season is near at hand, the following, from a contemporary, is timely: Never punish a child by striking it on the head. There are other places.

Russia's last week's record shows 101 officials murdered and 92 wounded, 291 private persons killed or wounded and 150 armed attempts to rob banks. This, says a contemporary, is a state of affairs about as nearly approaching civil war as it is possible to be, short of the real thing. The Czar and his advisers do well to have guards. They need them.

Harvard is to pay a young man $5,000 for a couple of months' work coaching its football team. President Eliot, who works twelve months a year, does not get much more. If this sort of thing keeps up, the Montreal Gazette points out, it will never be necessary for Andrew Carnegie to provide a pension fund for aged college athletic instructors.

What a business some of our hustling life insurance agents could do if they were over among the Russian generals and grand dukes just now! Perhaps they might not consider them good risks, though.

Excuse these tears, which are shed for those poor Conservatives in Nova Scotia who are so incensed over Mr. Fielding's being unseated. The Globe can point them out to you with its eyes shut.

A farmer is said to have swindled a lawyer in St. Louis, which shows conclusively that the age of miracles is not over yet.

Some Yankee women must have a queer fad this summer, according to the following from the Rochester Union: "Just why grown women, of apparent intelligence, should carry imitation bears about, as the children do, passes comprehension. And yet at all the summer resorts women may be seen lugging them about, their main object being to see who can get the most expensive one. At one resort a few days ago nine out of fifteen women sitting on a veranda at one time were seen holding and fondling these little imitations of a dirty, surly, beast that ought not to appeal in any way to a feminine heart."

The surgeon's knife has been found to be a cure for wickedness. Just saw a hole in the skull and presto! the disposition is changed. But why not take the axe? asks the Buffalo News. Amputation just back of the ears is surer and probably less expensive. Never a chicken scratched a garden bed after that treatment.

Banker Stensland, of Chicago, is a wizard. He was reported as arrested in Mexico the other day, and the same day was seen in London. Now it is claimed that he is in hiding in Chicago and has not been out of that city since his disappearance from public view.

The population of Trenton, the Advocate says, has increased 300 during the past year. Naturally our western neighbors are jubilant, and with reason. The growing time seems to have hit Trenton and Belleville simultaneously.

There is a whole lot of truth in the following from an exchange;

"People who go to Toronto for the Exhibition, and incidentally to make a few purchases, should bear in mind that the goods that have been found to be slow sellers in the stores there are put forward as bargains for the strangers. All the old trash in the stores is brought up and sold to people from out of town. Far better goods at cheaper prices can be purchased from local merchants. Read their advertisements and then decide to do your buying in your own town."

It would appear that Belleville is to get C. P. R. connection at last. Well, wonders, as Mrs. Partington said, will never be done ceasing. With C.P.R. connection with Tweed and Toronto, with the rolling mills a-going, and an old-time building boom only just started, it would appear that the good old city will soon be on the crest of the wave. So mote it be.

Beef Cattle and Sheep—W. Whitelaw, Guelph.

Dairy Cattle and Swine — Mr. Stonehouse, Port Perry.

Died At Napanee

Mr. John Walters died at Napanee on Thursday evening, after a short illness. Deceased, who was about 72 years of age, was known to many in this city, where he resided for some time with his brother, the late Mr. Thos. Walters. Deceased was an unmarried man. He was a member of the Methodist church. The interment took place at Napanee this afternoon.

To-day's Market

There was a good attendance upon the market this morning. Prices, as usual, were rather high, butter selling at 28 cents per pound. Eggs also commanded a good price, some of which were sold at 19c per dozen. Dressed poultry has dropped somewhat in price.

Our quotations are as follows;—

Educational Notes.

MR. ANDERSON WILL NOT COME TO BELLEVILLE — NO NEW TEACHER FOR HIGH SCHOOL AT PRESENT.

A meeting of the School Management Committee of the Board of Education was held last evening, and it proved to be rather an interesting session.

Mr. G. W. Anderson, who was selected as a teacher for the High School here, will not come here but will go to Woodstock.

The committee will recommend to the Board that it present no new teacher be employed.

The following trustees were selected to attend the schools on Tuesday, at the opening, to see that the children are properly placed and that everything is all right.

Queen Victoria School — Messrs. W. Johnson, F. E. O'Flynn and H. Walker.

Sports in Napanee.

Monday, Labor day, will be, as usual, celebrated in a red-hot way at Napanee. There will be three horse races, for which liberal purses are hung out, and in which some Belleville horses are entered. A double-header baseball game is also on the card. Yarker and Newburgh will play first, and the winners will clash with Picton. The ball game starts at 12 o'clock and the horses races at 1 o'clock. Those wishing a day's sport will make no error in going to Napanee next Monday.

St. Agnes' School For Girls.

Thorough courses in Vocal and Instrumental Music, Art, Languages, Literature, Elocution and Physical Culture.

The regular school course extends from the Kindergarten to Matriculation work. Special courses may be taken in any subject.

The Piano and Theory pupils distinguished themselves by their high standing in the Toronto Conservatory Examinations which were held in February and June. Of the twenty-five papers in Theory examined, sixteen obtained first-class honors (over 80 per cent.); eight second-class honors (over 70 per cent.) and one passed. Of the seven who took their instrumental examinations, two obtained first-class honors and five honors.

The pupils who took Matriculation work did exceedingly well in all the subjects taken.

School will reopen for day pupils on Wednesday, September 12th, at 9.30 a.m. During the holidays the School has been painted and decorated throughout by Mr. Scantlebury, and much furnishing has been supplied by Messrs. Tickell and Thompson.

Among the recent visitors were Dr. Hodgetts, Provincial Health Officer, and Dr. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Hospitals, &c. They expressed themselves highly delighted with the building, and said that there was none to equal it in the province.

The school will be open for inspection to those interested on Thursday and Friday next, from three to five p.m.

Put up a good front and you won't be talked about behind your back.

THE MASTER SPECIALISTS OF AMERICA

We know the diseases and weaknesses of men like an open book. We have been curing them for 30 years. We have given our lives to it, and thousands upon thousands of men restored to Vigorous Vitality are today living monuments to the skill, knowledge and success of Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. We never hold out false hopes, we never undertake a case we cannot cure. We have made so thorough a study of all the diseases of men—of Varicocele, Stricture, Blood Poisons, Hydrocele, Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Bladder, Urinary and Kidney Diseases, General Weakness, Loss of Vitality, and have cured so many thousands of cases that if there is a cure for YOUR disease you will find it here. When we undertake a case there is no such thing as failure. We charge nothing for consultation and our knowledge, skill and experience are at your service. We will explain to you How and Why We Can Cure You; why the diseases of men require the knowledge and skill of Master Specialists. We do not require to experiment with your case as we know from experience in treating thousands of cases exactly what to prescribe for your symptoms. Don't be discouraged if you have treated without success with Quacks, Fakirs, Electric Belts, Free Trials, etc. You must get cured—and Doctors alone can cure you. Our New Method System of treatment has stood the test for 25 years—why should it fail in your case. Should your case prove incurable you need not pay us a dollar. We refer you to any Bank in this city as to our financial standing. If you cannot call write for a Question Blank for Home Treatment. Consultation Free. Booklets sent Free.

Want Ads. cut out the "empty chair taxes" in keeping boarders.

A man makes allowances for his faults, even though his wife may be one of them.

Temper may be a troublesome thing, but you never mend matters by losing it.

The hold-up man's rule of three is "Put 'm up, give up and shut up."

Want Ads. make it worth while to keep boarders.

CITY AND DISTRICT.

Monday being Labor day, there will be no issue of The Intelligencer.

The Rev. Dr. Norman Tucker will preach in St. Thomas' Church at 11 o'clock service.

As an endurance beverage tea is without a rival. Tea is the safest way of taking water into the human system. Disease cannot survive the boiling point that water should reach before tea is wet. The only objectionable constituents of tea, resin and tannin, never appear in "SALADA" when the infusion is properly made according to the directions in each lead packet.

To celebrate their 50th anniversary, an orchestra will play at The Ritchie Company's store to-night from 7.30 until 9.30. Everybody invited.

I am now paying matured endowments in my agency nearly every month, having paid three to-day—and they are very welcome guests these days. For particulars, write or call on Burrows, of Belleville, General Agent. 1t

Mr. T. B. McCarthy is here getting information for an automobile road guide.

She is the pink of prettiness. Girls be careful of your complexions. None should believe in "make up." Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea; "saves making up." Tea or Tablets, 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

The flying frogs of the Malays appear to be mythical, but the tree snakes of Borneo are credited with taking flying leaps from the boughs of trees to the ground. It is found that scales on the lower part of the body may be drawn inward so that the whole lower surface becomes concave. The resistance to the air is thus greatly increased and experiments indicate that the snakes do not fall in writhing coils, but are let down gently in a direct line by the parachute-like action of their peculiar bodies.

The Cravat.

The cravat was once the name of a great military nation, the Croats, or Cravates, of the Balkans. It was their fashion to wrap large shawls or pieces of cloth around their necks and shoulders. About the middle of the reign of Louis XIV. he uniformed several regiments in the Croat fashion, with huge shawls about their necks. The fashion took, and the shawl diminished in size to the slight strip of cloth we still have with us.

Free to You, My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand woman's sufferings. What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whitish Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment, for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book "WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young.

To mothers of daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and painful or irregular menstruation in young ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality, who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address

A Cask's Capacity.

Should you wish to get the capacity of a cask you can do so in the following manner: Take the measurements from the bunghole to the bottom of each end of the cask in inches. Average the two measurements. Multiply this figure by itself twice. Then multiply the product by .002266, and the remainder is the number of gallons. Example: 31 inches, 29 inches (average 30 inches). 30×30×30=27,000, which, multiplied by .002266, = 61.182. The contents, therefore, are 61 gallons and a fraction.

Modest Greatness.

One day a letter was received at the postoffice in Paris bearing the following inscription: "To the Greatest French Poet." The letter carrier was instructed to deliver it to Victor Hugo, who refused to receive it and sent it to Lamartine. This genius also declined to accept the letter and passed it on to Alfred De Musset. The latter, equally modest, re-sent it to Victor Hugo, who finally accepted it. The letter had reached its destination.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Wasp's Nest.

One kind of wasp found in Brazil and Guiana makes its nest of a brilliant white pasteboard, suspending it from the highest branches of the trees so as to escape the attention of the monkeys, which in those regions have a troublesome habit of investigating everything, even a hornet's nest.

Shortening the Visit.

"It is a great comfort to have a child about the house," said the man of domestic tastes.

"Yes," answered the unfeeling wretch, "when company comes that you don't care for you can make the child recite."

Her Possessions.

"I have two lovely little puppies," said Mrs. Tawkley.

"I have met your husband," replied the man. "Who is the other one?"—Judge.

Gain not base gains; base gains are the same as losses.—Hesiod.

Canadian Pacific Railway Is Coming to Belleville.

News Which Will Be Hailed With Great Interest by Our Business Men--Party of Seventeen Surveyors is Here, and Will Start Surveying Work At Once.

That Belleville will have C. P. R. connection before many more moons have passed by seems to be a settled fact now, if one can judge by appearances.

Hearing that a party of gentlemen who registered as being connected with the C. P. R. were at Hotel Quinte, The Intelligencer hastened over to our premier hostelry to see what was in the wind.

"You gentlemen are connected with the C.P.R., are you not? was the question put to a browned and wiry-looking gentleman, who was just picking his teeth after breakfast.

The gentleman addressed gracefully acknowledged the corn.

The newspaper man modestly pressed for a little information in connection with the object of the party's visit here, and was referred to Mr. H. Wellwood, who is in charge of the party, and who very courteously answered the scribe's questions.

The party was seventeen in number, he said, and their object was to survey a line of railroad for the Canadian Pacific Railway. The line, he understood, would come from Tweed to Belleville, and would be extended from this city to Toronto. Whether another line would be built from Belleville to connect with the line running into Montreal he could not say, though it was spoken of.

"When will you begin operations?" Mr. Wellwood was asked.

"At once," was the reply. "That is to say, we will erect our tents on the west side of the river and get into shape to begin work."

In answer to other questions, the newspaper man learned that there will be three surveying parties engaged in the task of surveying the new lines; one will start at Tweed and work to this city; one will start at Toronto and work this way, and one, of which Mr. Wellwood is chief, will start here and meet the Toronto party half-way.

"Do you know where the new Toronto line will enter Belleville?" Mr. Wellwood was asked.

"No," was the reply, "but I understand it will be nearer the city than the Grand Trunk."

Asked if he knew when building operations were likely to be started, or if rights of way had been secured, Mr. Wellwood smilingly disclaimed knowledge of such things. All he knew about the matter, he said, was that his instructions were to survey a line over the routes mentioned, with a three-tenth grade.

So there you are.

The Ritchie Company's 50th Anniversary.

We are informed that to-day is the 50th anniversary of the coming to Belleville of The Ritchie Company. The long record of this firm is deserving of notice. There is probably not another establishment of the kind in the whole Province that has been in existence as long as this one. This speaks volumes for the conduct and character of the business.

It was in the summer of 1856 that Mr. Geo. Ritchie first came to Belleville, and located the business which he so successfully built up, and that in face of the many difficulties at the first, of hard times and excessive competition, during which so many houses in the locality unfortunately went under. Mr. Ritchie's success was not dependent through these lean years on the amount of capital at his command, for we are told that at that time it was rather limited, but resulted from the confidence he inspired in all those who had dealings with the firm, which throughout its long history has ever honorably met all its liabilities.

There are many families in the city and surrounding district who became customers at the store from the start and have continued to the present day, and who express the satisfaction received throughout all these years.

In order to be in a position to purchase goods to better advantage in the markets of the world, a sort of syndicate was formed with a number of other merchants dealing in the same lines in most of the cities and larger towns of Canada, which arrangement continues to the present day to the profit of all concerned.

In face of the fact that in former years most of the general trade was done on credit, the firm adopted the strictly cash system as best and most fair to themselves and their patrons.

After Mr. Geo. Ritchie's death, his brother Thomas succeeded to the business. A few years ago the concern was formed into a Joint Stock Company, with Mr. Thos. Ritchie, president, and Mr. W. H. Gordon and Mr. O. M. Reid, managing directors. Both of these gentlemen have grown up with the business and are very widely and favorably known, Mr. Gordon having been with the house for 30 years and Mr. Reid nearly as long.

Preference, we are told, is always given by the firm to Canadian-made goods where these compare at all favorably with the Foreign, but of course a very large proportion of the stock carried must necessarily be bought in Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, as the articles are not made in the Dominion.

The original stand fifty years ago was the cut stone building adjoining the Victoria Buildings just north of Victoria avenue, affording very diminutive accommodation compared with the present extensive premises. The establishment has now become probably the largest between Montreal and Toronto. Two buildings are now occupied, embracing three floors and the basement, and from seventy-five to a hundred persons are constantly employed, most of them skilled workers.

We are at liberty to say that the public are welcome at all times, and as often as they please, to visit the establishment and be courteously received whether they desire to purchase anything or not.

Little Marchmont Girl Drowned at Bath.

A Bath correspondent writes as follows: "The citizens of our village were shocked to hear on Wednesday of last week of the death by drowning of Emily Hesketh, a little girl who lived at Mr. Wm. Tuckett's. It appears that she was sitting on Wartman's dock fishing, and fell into the water. An alarm was given and in a short time quite a number of men came and after an hour of determined search succeeded in finding the body. The little girl had been adopted by Mrs. Tuckett, and was from the Marchmont Home, Belleville. She was much beloved by her guardians, and was respected by all the citizens of the village. The funeral took place on Thursday at St. John's Church, service being conducted by Rev. A. L. McTear. Her friends, including the American visitors at the Bay View Villa, showed their sympathy by the floral offerings, of which there were quite a number. Mr. and Mrs. Tuckett wish to thank their many friends here who so kindly showed their sympathy with them in their bereavement."

Fire at Glen Miller.

On Thursday evening last, says the Trenton Advocate, fire broke out in one of the recently erected store-rooms, and completely destroyed the building and contents. The building has only been up about three months and was filled to its capacity with paper, egg-boxes, etc. By the heroic efforts of the men and women in the vicinity of the mill, the fire was confined to the one building, although it seems nothing short of a miracle when we consider the piles of paper and straw. We understand that neither the stock or building was insured, but what the total loss is, cannot be ascertained. The ruined building, which was 45 x 65, will be immediately rebuilt.

SAVING TIME.

In this day and age of the world when it seems as though every minute had a value and every hour its imperative demands to perform a necessary duty the traveller who has had experience is careful to see that his ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Rilway." Here is a line whose schedule is so arranged that every available minute of the traveller's time is saved. No long waits for connections nor tedious delays en route. Trains are operated at highest speed and are equipped with coaches so luxurious that the comfort of The Lake Shore is famous the world over. You can obtain full information about rates, routes or service by addressing J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O., or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

New Exhibition Building Is Nearly Completed

The building which has been in course of construction at the Driving Park is now receiving its finishing touches, and will be all ready for the fair which opens on the 12th inst. The building will no doubt admirably meet the requirements of the exhibitors, as it has been especially constructed for that purpose. It is 100 feet in length and 50 feet in width and is erected in the North-west corner of the park. Mr. Wm. Alford who erected the building, has from appearances done an excellent job.

WHAT Fruit-a-tives OR "FRUIT LIVER TABLETS" ARE

Fruit-a-tives are the marvels of modern medicine. They have accomplished more actual cures—done more good to more people—than any other medicine ever introduced in Canada for the time they have been on sale.

Fruit-a-tives are fruit juices. They are nature's cure for —CONSTIPATION

—BILIOUSNESS
—BAD STOMACH
—DYSPEPSIA
—HEADACHES
—IMPURE BLOOD
—SKIN DISEASES
—KIDNEY TROUBLE
—RHEUMATISM
—IRRITATED HEART

Fruit-a-tives are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. These juices are concentrated—and by a secret process, the juices are combined in a peculiar manner. This new combination is much more active medicinally than fresh juices—yet so perfect is the union that Fruit-a-tives act on the system as if they were in truth a natural fruit, medicinally stronger than any other known fruit.

To this combination of fruit juices, tonics and internal antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets.

These are Fruit-a-tives—sold everywhere for 50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50.

Beverly of Graustark

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Graustark"

Copyright, 1904, by Dodd, Mead and Company

"Your royal highness, ladies and gentlemen, Graustark and Dawsbergen are entering a new era. I pledge you my honor that never again shall the slightest misunderstanding exist between them. They shall go forth to their glorious destiny as one people. Your gracious ruler has seen fit to bestow her hand and affections upon an American gentleman, your esteemed prince consort. We all know how loyally the people have approved her choice. There is one present, a trusted friend of your beautiful princess and lovingly called in your hearts Beverly of Graustark. Whose example more worthy for me to follow than that of the Princess Yetive? With whom could I better share my throne and please you more than with your beloved American protege? I ask you to drink a toast to my betrothed, Beverly Calhoun, the future Princess of Dawsbergen."

"I have won your love by the fairest means."

Every glass was raised and the toast drunk amid ringing cheers. The military band crashed out the air so dear to all Americans, especially to southern hearts. Beverly was too overcome to speak.

"You all"— she exclaimed.

There was a tremendous commotion in the gallery. People were standing in their seats half frightened and amused, their attention attracted by the unusual scene. A portly negress, totally unconscious of the sensation she was causing, her feet keeping time to the lively strains of music, was frantically waving a red and yellow bandanna handkerchief. It was Aunt Fanny, and in a voice that could be heard all over the banquet hall she shouted: "Good Lawd, honey, ef der ain't playin' 'Away Down South In Dixie!' Hooray! Hooray!"

• • • • • • •

Hours later Beverly was running, confused and humbled, through the halls to her room, when a swifter one than she came up and checked her flight.

"Beverly!" cried an eager voice. She slackened her pace and glanced over her shoulder. The smiling, triumphant face of Baldos met her gaze. The upper hall was almost clear of people. She was strangely frightened, distressingly diffident. Her door was not far away, and she would have reached it in an instant later had he not laid a restraining, compelling hand upon her arm. Then she turned to face him, her lips parted in protest. "Don't look at me in that way!" he cried imploringly. "Come, dearest, come with me. We can be alone in the nook at the end of the hall. Heavens, I am the happiest being in all the world. It has turned out as I have prayed it should."

She allowed him to lead her to the darkened nook. In her soul she was wondering why her tongue was so powerless. There were a hundred things she wanted to say to him, but now that the moment had come she was voiceless. She only could look helplessly at him. Joy seemed to be paralyzed within her. It was as if she slept and could not be awakened. As she sank upon the cushion he dropped to his knee before her, his hand clasping hers with a fervor that thrilled her with life. As he spoke her pulses quickened and the blood began to race furiously.

"I have won your love, Beverly, by the fairest means. There has never been an hour in which I have not been struggling for this glorious end. You gave yourself to me when you knew I could be nothing more than the humblest soldier. It was the sacrifice of love. You will forgive my presumption—my very insolence, dear one—when I tell you that my soul is the forfeit I pay. It is yours through all eternity. I love you. I can give you the riches of the world as well as the wealth of the heart. The vagabond dies; your poor humble follower gives way to the supplicating prince. You would have lived in a cot as the guardsman's wife. You will take the royal palace instead."

Beverly was herself again. The spell was gone. Her eyes swam with happiness and love. The suffering her pride had sustained was swept into a heap labeled romance, and she was rejoicing.

"I hated you tonight, I thought," she cried, taking his face in her hands. "It looked as though you had played a trick on me. It was mean, dear. I couldn't help thinking that you had used me as a plaything, and it—it made me furious. But it is different now. I see, oh, so plainly. And just as I had resigned myself to the thought of spending the rest of my life in a cottage, away outside the pale of this glorious life! Oh, it is like a fairy tale!"

"Ah, but it was not altogether a trick, dear one. There was no assurance that I could regain the throne—not until the very last. Without it I should have been the beggar instead of the prince. We would have lived in a hovel, after all. Fortune was with me. I deceived you for months, Beverly—my Beverly—but it was for the best. In defense of my honor and dignity, however, I must tell you that the princess has known for many days that I am Dantan. I told her the truth when Christobal came that day with the news. It was all well enough for me to pass myself off as a vagabond, but it would have been unpardonable to foist him upon her as the prince."

"And she has known for a week?" cried Beverly in deep chagrin.

"And the whole court has known."

"I alone was blind?"

"As blind as the proverb. Thank God, I won your love as a vagabond. I can treasure it as the richest of my princely possessions. You have not said that you will go to my castle with me, dear."

She leaned forward unsteadily, and he took her in his eager arms. Their lips met, and their eyes closed in the ecstasy of bliss. After a long time she lifted her lids, and her eyes of gray looked solemnly into his dark ones.

"I have much to ask you about, many explanations to demand, sir," she said threateningly.

"By the rose that shields my heart, you shall have the truth," he laughed back at her. "I am still your servant. My enlistment is endless. I shall always serve your highness."

"Your highness!" she murmured reflectively. Then a joyous smile of realization broke over her face. "Isn't it wonderful?"

"Do you think your brothers will let me come to Washington now?" he asked teasingly.

"It does seem different, doesn't it?" she murmured, with a strange little smile. "You will come for me?"

"To the ends of the earth, your highness."

THE END.

MOTHER'S ANXIETY.

The summer months are an anxious time for mothers because they are the most dangerous months of the year for young children. Stomach and bowel troubles come quickly during the hot weather and almost before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets will prevent summer complaints if given occasionally, because they keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter. And the Tablets will cure these troubles if they come suddenly. You may save your child's life by keeping a box of Baby's Own Tablets on hand to give promptly. Mrs. Frank Moore, Northfield, N. S., says: "I do not know any medicine that can equal Baby's Own Tablets for curing stomach and bowel troubles. I always keep them on hand in case of emergency." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Peppler's Case Collapses.

Walkerton, Sept. 1.—The cases against R. I. Henderson of the Henderson Roller Bearing Co. of Toronto, charged with obtaining $1,200 by false pretences from Henry Peppler of Hanover, and $1,400 from Adam Selling of Walkerton in the same manner, were tried here yesterday before Magistrates Robb and Tolton. Peppler's case collapsed on his own evidence but the Selling case was sent up for trial, Henderson being let go on his own bail.

Brockville, Sept. 1.—A boy named Coughlin, aged eight years, narrowly escaped being killed here yesterday. In attempting to board a rig his right leg was caught in the spokes of the wheel and mangled to such an extent that little hope is entertained of saving it. He was whirled around like a top before the attention of the driver was directed to his cries.

Quebec Cabinet Changes.

Quebec, Sept. 1.—Hon. W. A. Weir, having resigned the Speakership of the Legislature, was yesterday sworn in as Minister of Public Works. Hon. J. C. McCorkill resigned to become a judge. Hon. A. Tessier became Treasurer, and Jules Allard, Minister of Public Works, Minister of Agriculture.

Canada May Be a Competitor.

Seagirt, N. J., Sept. 1.—Gen. Spencer reported to the National Rifle Association that a match for the Palma Trophy with the United States, Great Britain, and very likely Canada competing, will probably be held at Ottawa, Canada, next summer.

AUSTRALIA TARIFF BARS UP.

Preference to Britain and New Zealand But Not to Us.

Ottawa, Sept. 1.—The Trade and Commerce Department has received a cable despatch from J. S. Larke, Canada's commercial agent at Sydney, Australia, stating that the Commonwealth Government has introduced a bill giving a tariff preference to Britain and New Zealand.

This will increase the duties on butter, cheese, grain, onions, potatoes, timber and bacon. The exact increase is not given.

On woodenware, ammunition, boots, shoes, furniture, engines, paints, paper hangers, saucers and plateware, there is an increase of 10 per cent.

The same tariff will be levied on Canada as against the United States, notwithstanding Canada's repeated efforts for a preference.

Imports From Britain Increase.

According to the foreign trade returns of Canada for the last financial year, imports of British woollens into the Dominion were valued at $14,700,000, which represents an increase of a million and a half dollars over 1905, and more than twice the amount of this trade ten years ago. Notwithstanding the increased duty collected on British tweeds since 1905, the demand for these goods is still on the increase, and last year's imports represented an increase of $100,000 over 1905. Imports of British cotton manufacturers last year were $6,650,000, an increase of almost a million dollars over 1905, and twice the value of the trade that was done in these goods in 1896.

British iron and steel manufactures were imported to a value of $7,640,000, which represents a gain of upwards of $2,000,000 over 1905, and more than three times the trade of ten years ago.

MUTINEERS WERE SHOT.

Nineteen Soldiers and Some Civilians Pay Extreme Penalty.

London, Sept. 1.—A despatch to a news agency from Helsingfors, Finland, announced that nineteen soldiers found guilty of participation in the recent mutiny at Sveaborg fortress, were shot there yesterday, that three civilians convicted of incitement to mutiny were hanged, and that others were sentenced to prison for terms varying from five to fifteen years.

Premier Encourages Governors.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—Premier Stolypin has sent a circular to the governors instructing them not to be dismayed by the threats or acts of the terrorists as he is sure the population generally will eventually come to the support of the authorities in the war against the revolutionists.

Church Despoiled.

Moscow, Sept. 1.—A church at Buttovo was completely destroyed Thursday night by robbers, who even carried off the sacred altar cross.

Bomb For Wedding Party.

Psovka, Russia, Sept. 1.—A bomb was thrown at a wedding procession here yesterday, killing or wounding sixteen persons. The perpetrators of the outrage were among those killed.

Terrorists' Program.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—The woman who assassinated General Min has warned her jailers that St. Petersburg is on the eve of a series of acts of terrorism.

OUR FUTURE WHEAT MARKET.

Governor-General Advises Canadians to Look to Orient For It.

Prince Albert, Sask., Sept. 1.—Replying to the civic address of welcome, Earl Grey took occasion to extend several wise suggestions to western agriculturists, chief among which was that they should endeavor to cultivate the Oriental market with its great possibilities.

His Excellency said that as he rode through the golden wheat fields and over the green prairie only waiting the plough and the seed wheat, he began to wonder where all this prosperity was going to end.

As Governor-General, it was not for him to take a part in controversial matters, but it was his duty to take a forward view, and looking into the future he saw coming a time when the present market for Canadian wheat, which was chiefly Great Britain, would not provide a demand equal to the supply.

One remedy for this would be to adopt mixed farming, but he thought the most important step which could be taken by Canadian farmers would be to try to secure the Oriental market to sell their wheat to the Japanese, who were now in a state of transition from a rice-eating to a wheat-eating nation.

There May Be Survivors.

Winnipeg, Sept. 1.—A party of three have gone out on the steamer City of Selkirk to search the shores of Swampy Island for possible survivors, or for bodies of drowned, which may have been washed ashore from the wreck of the steamer Princess. It is considered possible that Capt. Hawes and the two girls may have clung to the deckhouse when it was swept off the sinking steamer.

Fifteen Building Burned.

Greyburg, Maine, Sept. 1.—Fifteen buildings of this town were burned yesterday, including the Oxford House, a three-storey wooden structure, with accommodations for 250 persons, 12 residences, a store and an unoccupied hotel, by a fire which started from sparks on the roof of the Oxford House. The loss was estimated at $80,000.

For Yankee Principals.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 1.—The steamship Tartar brings advices that the Japanese sealers shot in raiding the "rookeries" were in reality working for American principals.

Fell Five Storeys.

Winnipeg, Sept. 1.—A Hungarian laborer named Jos. Holstein fell five storeys from a warehouse yesterday and was instantly killed.

Banker Fugitive Captured.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—A special cablegram to The Tribune announces that Paul C. Stensland, president of the Milwaukee avenue State Bank, was captured yesterday in Tangier. Stensland was arrested at 8 o'clock yesterday morning in the English postoffice at Tangier. He agreed to return peaceably. Stensland is traveling under the alias of P. Olsen of Norway. Stensland fled from Chicago July 12, went direct to New York and sailed on the White Star steamer for Liverpool two days later. From Liverpool he took the P. & O. boat for Tangier.

120,000 ON LABOR DAY.

Last Week 250,000 Visited the Canadian National Exhibition.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—Last week's attendance at the Canadian National Exhibition was about 250,000, made up as follows. Opening Day, 25,000; Children's Day, 65,000; Manufacturers' Day, 65,000; Press Day, 35,000; Pioneers' Day, 80,000. Yesterday—Labor Day—the attendance of visitors was stated by Dr. Orr to be 120,000.

Pickpockets were busy. Wm. Hand of Stanton, in Mulmur Township, was relieved of $45 in the transportation building, and there were about a dozen other cases of minor theft. An old gentleman from St. Catharines was a sufferer to the extent of $13 and a return ticket. Two women were arrested as suspects.

Quebec Wins Dairy Contest.

As usual Quebec took first place with exhibits of butter, making almost a sweep with the awards. It was left for Eastern and Western Ontario to fight it out for supremacy in cheese, and the running was pretty close, the west winning the trophy offered for competition by a small margin.

Miss Mary Morrison of Newry captured four first prizes with her cheese exhibits, duplicating her feat of last year in carrying off the trophy for the highest score. A win next year will give the lady exhibitor permanent possession of the trophy, valued at $70.

Prof. Pearson, superintendent of the Cornell Dairy School, was a visitor.

R. L. Borden Speaks Up.

At Conservative Labor Day Gathering at Sydney, B. C.

Canada, He Contended, Is Justly Entitled To What Capitalists and Speculators Gain Through Grand Trunk Pacific Construction — $100,000,000 G.T.R. Common Stock, Representing no Capital Investment, Sells At $200

Sydney, N. S., Sept. 4.—Graham Fraser, the steel magnate, threw open his grounds yesterday and several thousand Conservatives, men, women and children, roamed at will over the vast estate. The forenoon was devoted to sports of various kinds and from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 5 there were political speeches by R. L. Borden, M. P., and other prominent leaders of the Conservative party. Mayor McCormick of Sydney Mines presided.

Mr. Borden spoke from the broad verandah which encircles the Fraser residence. Some seven hundred Conservative voters stood before him, eager to hear and quick to applaud the speech. Beyond, within sight of the speaker, was a patch of the sea. Mr. Borden began as follows:

Great Question.

"The last occasion on which I addressed a Cape Breton audience was immediately before the general elections of 1904. A great question of policy was in issue at that time. We believed then and we still believe that the extension of the I. C. R. to the Georgian Bay and the construction of the new national transcontinental railway as a Government work would have served the interests of the people of Canada infinitely better than the scheme which has been proposed by the Government and ratified by Parliament.

"The issue for the time being was decided against us., The contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific Co. became an accomplished fact and the country must in honor abide by it so long as the other contracting party fairly fulfils its obligations.

"But consider what the ownership of that transcontinental road would have meant to the people of Canada. They and not the capitalists and speculators, would in that case have shared and enjoyed the tremendous increment in value in the road from Winnipeg to the coast, which must ensue from the enormous development of the west. To that increment in value the country was justly entitled, because it is almost on the credit of Canada that the capital for the construction of that road is now being provided under the guarantee of the people of this country. The people well realize the loss more fully when a hundred millions of common stock in the Grand Trunk Pacific and its subsidiary companies sell at 200, although they will not represent one dollar of actual cash invested."

Mr. Borden denounced election frauds and recalled the graft and extravagance of the Laurier Government, including the supplies for the Montcalm and the notorious Arctic.

Mr. Tanner spoke briefly on provincial matters and was followed by R. H. Butts and J. W. Maddon.

LABOR DAY.

Parades Held by Trades Unionists Throughout the Country.

Montreal, Sept. 4.—Five thousand sons of toil paraded yesterday during a smart shower of rain, and as all of them carried umbrellas and were well dressed it looks as if the Montreal workingmen are highly prosperous. No speaking took place and there were no prominent public men in the ranks.

Procession Disappointed.

Hamilton, Sept. 4.—The Trades and Labor Council's demonstration yesterday was a success. It began with a procession in the morning, which was something of a disappointment. It did not compare well with parade held by the council in former years. Some 20 organizations that promised to parade did not show up, and the floats were not numerous.

In London.

London, Sept. 4.—Labor celebrated yesterday in Queen's Park. Speeches were delivered by Mayor Judd, President McAndless of the Trades and Labor Council, D. A. Carey of Toronto and others.

Thousand In Line.

Kingston, Sept. 4.—A thousand labor men paraded here yesterday. A program of games was run off at the Fair Grounds.

Labor Day In Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—Yesterday — Labor Day—was celebrated by the trades unions with a procession through the principal streets to the Exhibition grounds, where a program of games was run off. The procession took 54 minutes to pass a given point, and there were probably 3,500 men in the procession. Some very emblematic floats representing various trades were seen.

Bomb Kills Two.

St. Louis, Sept. 4.—Two men were seriously wounded and ten other persons were slightly hurt by an exploding signal bomb, set off to start the parade of organized St. Louis unions in honor of Labor Day.

Trades Union Congress.

Liverpool, Sept. 4.—The thirty-ninth annual Trades Union Congress opened at St. George's Hall here yesterday with the largest attendance on record. Four hundred and ninety delegates were present, representing over 1,500,000 trades unionists. Thirty labor members of the House of Commons participated in the meeting, compared with seven at last year's congress. The American Federation of Labor was represented.

Germany Threatens Australia.

London, Sept. 4.—(C. A. P.)—The Times says Sydney merchants have received warning that Germany threatens reprisals if the Australian preference proposals are carried, hoping to scare the Commonwealth into withdrawal.

Earl Grey's Sympathy.

London, Sept. 4.—(C. A. P.)—Earl Grey has sent a message of sympathy to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman on the death of his wife.

Gans Beats Battling Nelson.

Goldfield, Sept. 4.—Battling Nelson lost yesterday's fight by fouling Joe Gans in the forty-second round of the best and longest fight seen in many years. Both men were tired when the fight ended, but Gans was apparently the stronger. He was away ahead on points, and had smashed and cut Nelson all through the fight without being severely hurt himself.

Hamilton, Sept. 4.—The Street Railway cars ran yesterday as usual. It has been agreed between the company and the men to have the question of increase of wages settled by arbitration.

Pretender Defeated.

Tangier, Morocco, Sept. 4.—The pretender to the throne has been defeated near Muluya, and two of his principal chiefs were killed.

PEACE BY COMPROMISE

Palma at First Refuse Concessions But Later Modifies.

Cuban Public Opinion, Touching Settlement of Cuba's Internal Troubles, Moves President From His First Position That He Would Fight It Out—Government Has Barrels of Money, But Crops Will Suffer.

Havana, Sept. 4.—Peace through political compromises was the sole topic of conversation yesterday in all the best informed circles, where it is recognized as the only way of bringing about a settlement of the internal troubles. Therefore, there is a general disposition not to agree with the stand taken by President Palma, that the Government should not treat with the insurgents upon the basis of arranging a compromise, and the President is understood to have already modified his attitude to the extent that he has no objection to private negotiations on the subject. It is believed that an attempt to reach peace through some compromise will now be made.

Palma Since Modifies Decision.

The hopes of those who on Saturday night tentatively suggested a project of mutual concessions as a means of ending the rebellion were shattered yesterday when President Palma called Gen. Cebreco, one of the proposed peace commissioners, to the palace to inform him that the Government had no concessions to offer or accept, and no intention other than of fighting the matter through and suppressing the insurrection.

One of the main reasons why the Government feels encouraged to pursue the fight to the end by force is its abundance of money.

"We have $19,000,000 on hand," said the secretary of the Treasury. "Don't overlook that, and we have a monthly income of $2,000,000."

The number of daily enlistments is not known as the work is being carried on in so many different places, but the expectation is to have 8,000 men in the field, inclusive of regulars and volunteers.

No Intervention.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Emphatic denial is made at the American State Department of all reports that any movement is in progress looking to intervention in Cuban affairs.

Terrible Cost of Strife.

Havana, Sept. 4.—El Economista, the the leading financial weekly, says the revolution, besides costing millions of dollars to industries which are operating upon foreign capital, will, should it last for several weeks, cause ruin to the Vuelta Abajo crop, amounting to from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000, besides a year's loss to the farmers, loss to the cattle interests of from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000; a loss of from 100,000 to 200,000 tons of sugar on account of the lack of labor, should the rebellion last two months, and losses to the fruit crop of about $4,000,000.

In the Field.

Several bodies of insurgents have been seen with increasing frequency between Pinar del Dio and Consolacion del Sur, in the Province of Pinar del Rio.

The Government force, commanded by Capt. Cardenas has dispersed a rebel band near Guines, Havana Province. A small party of insurgents is reported to have surrendered there. A band of insurgents made an unsuccessful attack Sunday on an armored train near Cruces, Province of Santa Clara.

What is beginning to disturb business interests more than anything else is the increasing evidence that tobacco planting, sugar cultivation and crop preparations will begin so late as to be ruinous to the coming winter's crops.

War In Every Province.

There is war now in all the provinces. It has been ascertained without doubt that the rebel band that is operating near Maron, Puerto Principe Province, is led by Garcia Canizares, former President of the House.

Manager Cameron of the Cuban Central Railway has held a conference with Insurgent Leaders Guzman and Portela near Cienfuegos, and an agreement was reached that passenger trains bearing the British flag would be respected if they were not carrying troops.

AS A JESUIT PROVINCE.

Proposition That Canada Be Separately Established.

Rome, Sept. 4.—The congregation of the Company of Jesus yesterday examined a proposition presented by Father Rurolph Meyer of St. Louis, Mo., for transforming the present Jesuit mission in Canada into a new province.

The project had already been studied under the late general, Father Martin, and was favored by him and by Vicar Freddi.

A definite decision is expected to be taken before the congregation dissolves.

TROOPS KILL MOURNERS.

Display of the Red Flag at Funeral Leads to Fighting.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Sept. 4.—The display of a red flag at Rudoguzowska, near here, at the funeral yesterday of a workman killed by Cossacks, led to fighting between Cossacks and the workmen and others taking part in the procession, during which the troops fired a volley, killing six and wounding twenty-two persons.

Note Confesses to Suicide.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4.—William Coovey, a young man about 35 years of age, committed suicide by drowning in the Saskatchewan. Had it not been for the finding of a note addressed to a friend it would certainly have been accepted as a case of accidental drowning, as Coovey's clothing was found on the river bank as though he had gone bathing. Deceased came here from Souris early in July.

Premier's Brother Dead.

Quebec, Sept. 4.—Henri Laurier, prothonotary of Arthabaska, and brother of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, died suddenly yesterday at his residence at Arthabaskaville.

COURTS WILL DELAY ELECTION.

Judges to Make Report on Appeal to the Supreme Bench.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 4.—The Fielding election case counsel were heard in arguments on the question as to whether the election judges should send their certificate and report to the Speaker of the House of Commons or to the Supreme Court of Canada, to which the present petitioner has taken an appeal on the ruling of the court respecting evidence tendered by the petitioner as to personal charges against respondent.

The judges have just filed their opinions and disagree on the point, the chief justice holding that there being no appeal from the decision declaring the election void, the certificate and report should go to the Speaker, but Judge Russell holds that under the wording of the statute any appeal on any appealable matter arising during the trial requires the trial judges to report to the Court of Appeal.

It is said that the judges, though thus disagreeing in opinion, will unite in a report to the Supreme Court of Canada, and consequently no election can be held in Shelburne-Queen's until the appeal on the personal charges against Mr. Fielding are passed upon by the highest court in the Dominion.

CONSTITUTION FOR CHINA.

Present Antiquated Laws Keeping Country Always In Trouble.

Pekin, Sept. 4.—The Emperor has issued an edict promising a constitutional government when the people are fitted for it. The edict says:

"Since the beginning of our dynasty there have been wise emperors who have made laws suited to the times. Now that China has intercourse with all nations our laws and political system have become antiquated and our country is always in trouble. Therefore it is necessary for us to gather more knowledge and draw up a new code of laws, otherwise we shall be unworthy of the trust of our forefathers and the people."

The edict cites the fact that traveling commissioners report that the cause of Chinese weakness is antagonism between the rulers and the ruled, and promises administrative and financial reforms. When these are accomplished and the people have been educated to understand their relations to the Government a constitution will be framed.

Yuanshikai, viceroy of the Province of Chili, and commander-in-chief of the forces, has been here for several days, participating in a conference regarding a constitution.

MEXICO GRANTS BONUS.

Monthly Passenger Service With Canada Now Assured.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 4.—Capt. Worsnop, who was sent by J. H. Green & Co. to Mexico to arrange if possible a Mexican subsidy for a direct monthly passenger and freight steamship service between Mexico and British Columbia ports on the Pacific, returned yesterday, reporting complete success in his negotiations with the Mexican Government.

Mexico has agreed to grant an even larger bonus than that proposed by Canada, and the new line will be inaugurated, with two 15-knot steamships, within 90 days.

Canada has passed a $100,000 per annum subsidy, conditional upon equally liberal encouragement by Mexico.

HIPPLE NOT ALONE RESPONSIBLE

Collapse of Trust Co. Due to Stupendous Looting of Institution.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—"From the evidence in my possession, the collapse of the Real Estate Trust Co. appears to be the result of stupendous looting. I intend to proceed to the limit against the persons liable."

This statement was made by District Attorney Bell, after a day spent in examining the evidence handed to him by Receiver Earle of the defunct Trust company.

That Frank K. Hipple, the suicide president of the institution, was not alone responsible for the crash, both Receiver Earle and District Attorney Bell are satisfied, and arrests may be looked for at any time.

For Revenge on Half-Brother.

Port Hope, Sept. 4.—Revenge taken on a half-brother for a wrong—real or fancied—of twenty-five years ago, has placed William Lee of Hope Township in the county jail here on a charge of arson—the result of a two days' enquiry into the circumstances surrounding the burning of the two barns of Alfred Harness of Clarke Township. In the early morning of Aug. 19, one of the barns was destroyed, and three nights later another, which was on a portion of the farm which Harness has leased to another farmer. The total damage done was about $3,000.

Sucides In Detroit.

Detroit, Sept. 4.—Mrs. James Braddon, who has relatives in Toronto, committed suicide by taking morphine.

Gen. Booth Coming.

London, Sept. 4.—(C. A. P.)—Gen. Booth hopes in the new year to visit Japan, going by way of Canada.

STEAM SCALDS THREE

Arthur Hartle, Pulp Mill Employe, Succumbs to Injuries.

P. Williams, a Fellow Workman, Badly Scalded About the Face and Hands —Thaddeus Fetterly, Fireman of the Canada Cotton Mill at Cornwall, Seriously Scalded by a Rush of Steam—Received a Scalp Wound.

Cornwall, Sept. 4.—Arthur Hartle, aged 28 years, an employe in the Toronto Paper Co.'s pulp mill, was fatally scalded on Saturday night and died yesterday morning.

Hartle started to open one of the digesters while it was under steam pressure, and when nearly all the bolts were removed the pressure blew the lid off and Hartle was terribly scalded by the steam and boiling pulp.

Another man, named P. Williams, was scalded about the face and hands.

Scalded by Steam.

Early yesterday morning Thaddeus Fetterly, fireman of the Canada Cotton mill, met with a serious accident. He was getting up steam, and as there seemed to be water in one of the pipes he opened a valve. The rush of steam that followed knocked Fetterly off the ladder to the ground, a distance of 15 feet, and he was picked up with a scalp wound and his face and chest and arms scalded by the steam.

Unknown Woman Killed by Auto.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—An unidentified woman was run down and instantly killed by touring car No. 1,100, owned by Ambrose J. Small of the Grand Opera House, and driven by Charles Segar, near the corner of College street and Palmerston avenue, at 8 o'clock last night. He had crossed Bathurst street safely and on nearing Palmerston avenue a woman stepped off the curb. Segar could not stop the car before the woman's skirt caught in the wheel and she was thrown to the pavement. Her neck and shoulder blade were broken, and she died instantly. With the exception of a stickpin and a gold hunting case watch with the initials "P.J.," nothing on the woman could give the police the slightest clue to her identity. Dressed in a dark skirt and cravenette coat and white straw hat, with a corded silk waist, the woman looked to be about 45. Her hair, dark brown, was turning grey.

Mrs. Burgess Killed.

Carlton Place, Sept. 4.—Mrs. W. H. Burgess of Ottawa, wife of the C. P. R. tie inspector, was killed; S. A. Torrance and wife were badly injured and the little daughter of Mrs. Burgess slightly injured yesterday, the automobile in which they were driving being struck by a C. P. R. train near the depot. Two daughters of Mrs. Burgess were in the automobile, one escaping unhurt. The crossing at which the fatality occurred is a dangerous one.

Fatally Hurt In Race.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4.—James Boswell, a well-known Winnipeg athlete and automobilist, was seriously, perhaps fatally, injured by the overturning of his car in the Dunlop trophy auto race yesterday. The accident occurred four miles from Stonewall, through the rear wheel striking a rock. Mr. Boswell's assistant escaped unhurt, but Boswell fell on his forehead. He has been unconscious 15 hours, and shows no sign of coming to.

Five Boys Blown Up.

Halifax, Sept. 4.—Four boys were killed and blown skyward by a terrific explosion in an abandoned coal working Stellarton yesterday afternoon. The dead are two sons of Neil Gunn, a son of Joseph Frew and a son of Neil Patterson, all between twelve and sixteen years old. They, with another boy named Kornett, were playing ball near what is known as the English slope, at the lower end of the town of Stellarton. Entrance to the slope was partly uncovered, and their ball rolled in. All five entered the slope in search of it. After they had proceeded several feet one of the lads lighted a match, which ignited the gas in the mine, which has not been worked for several years. A terrific explosion resulted, and the boys were hurled in all directions, with the above result.

Farmer Dies In Field.

Cayuga, Sept. 4.—John Bird, a farmer of North Cayuga, was found dead in a field on Sunday evening. Valvular heart trouble was the cause of death.

TUG BALIZE SINKS.

Runs Aground on Shore of Georgian Bay and Slips Into Deep Water.

Owen Sound, Sept. 4.—Word has just been received here of the sinking of the large tug Balize, owned by the Charlton Lumber Co. of Collingwood.

The Balize was going through a narrow channel at Little Detroit, on the north shore of Georgian Bay, a short distance behind the Northern Navigation Co.'s steamer City of Midland Sunday morning, when the vessel refused to respond to her helm and she ran ashore with considerable force.

The Balize remained on the bank then filled with water and rolled over into the deep channel. Although the sinking of the tug occupied but a few minutes, the officers and crew had ample time to launch the lifeboats and reach shore, which was but a few feet distant. They were taken on board a small mail boat which chanced to pass and conveyed to a near-by town.

Extradited to Canada.

London, Sept. 4.—At the Bow street Police Court yesterday the extradition of Wesley Upton, who is charged with stealing $850 from the Dominion Express Co. at Yorktown, Canada, was granted by the presiding magistrate.

Busy Berlin An Object Lesson For Belleville.

The town of Berlin, Ontario, has now reached a population of 12,000, having added 850 during the past year. The growth has been steady for several years, and bids fair to attain the 15,000 mark when the incorporation as a city will take place. The natural facilities of the place are not remarkable. It is certainly surrounded by a splendid agricultural section, but the town is inland, and without water privileges. When the causes of progress are enquired into an answer is found in the last report of the Berlin Board of Trade.

"The people of Berlin," it is said, "are a unit in anything that pertains to the advancement and upbuilding of their town. They have faith in its future and never lose an opportunity of saying a kind word for the town to which they belong. In a word, it is the loyalty of her citizens that has made Berlin."

Another factor which is affirmed in the report to have worked in the same direction are the commercial travellers who represent Berlin houses and facories. There are 165 of these. They travel from Vancouver to Halifax, and are said to spread the gospel of Busy Berlin. "Wherever they have gone," says the report, "they have considered it a part of their duty to advertise their town."

The local Board of Trade itself seems to be deserving of a large share of the credit due in the making of the progress. In this organization are 300 members, the meetings are well attended, questions relating to the welfare of the town are discussed, and projects for the common advantage are initiated

Some people said he was practising the dip of death, while others said he was after a dog. Anyhow, the town won't lack for excitement these days, and it may be necessary to move some of the shade trees and poles.

He was evidently hungry, as he had swallowed both hooks."

That the municipal street railway system of Glasgow, Scotland, could pay all operating expenses, cost of maintenance, taxes, and so on, and will make money on the basis of a universal 1-cent fare, is shown by F. Of the 195,000,000 passengers carried, 30 per cent. paid 1 cent, 60 per cent. paid 2 cents, and only 10 per cent. more than 2 cents.

The famous Crapsey heresy trial is to be resumed to-day in Rochester before an Episcopal court of review. A trial of this kind has apparently as much room for disputes on technical points as any case before the ordinary courts. The appeal of Dr. Crapsey from the decision of the court that convicted him of heresy was taken largely on the ground that the procedure was irregular. Now there is to be an argument as to whether the appellant has the right to ask for an adjournment when the court meets.

A humorous Rochester official proposes that the city buy 500 goats to eat the weeds in vacant lots. As side issues, he suggests that the city could sell the milk of the goats, hire them to secret societies for initiation purposes, and by shaving their beards every fall use the hair to make fur collars for policemen. Might they not also be trained to draw fire engines and save the city the expense of keeping horses?

A physician points out that several fallacies are common with regard to the weight of the human body. The man who congratulates himself on his gain of several pounds in weight in a given period may have no cause for rejoicing, for he may be under a delusion. Very few persons, says the investigator, have any correct idea of their own weight. As a matter of fact, the weight of the body is continually changing owing to innumerable influences. On a warm day after breakfast a man will lose more than a third of a pound per hour. Seventy per cent. of the body contains water, and its weight varies constantly. The inference to be drawn from the loss or gain of a pound or two may be mistrusted. Fluctuation of a few ounces are a sign that the body is in a healthy state.

HOME WEDDING ON LABOR DAY.

NUPTIALS OF MR. RALPH A. HANDLEY AND MISS LENA A. WILSON TOOK PLACE LAST NIGHT.

A pretty home wedding took place in this city last night, which started on their matrimonial voyage one of the most popular young ladies in this city and a former well-liked Belleville boy, now living in Rochester. The groom was Mr. Ralph Edgar Handley and the bride Miss Lena A. Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Wilson, North Front St., at whose house the ceremony took place, being performed by Rev. R. H. Leitch, pastor Holloway St. Church, at 8 p. m., in the presence of many invited guests. The petite bride looked very pretty in a gown of white silk, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was Miss Grace Handley, niece of the groom. She was gowned in white organdie, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. Walter Aselstine, of this city, was groomsman. The splendid array of presents amply testified to the popularity of the happy young couple. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket with diamond crescent; to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, and to the groomsman a gold stick pin.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a dainty wedding supper was served by Mr. James Wallace, which was deserving of all the nice things that could be said about it.

Mr and Mrs. Handley left on the 2.30 a.m. train for Toronto and Hamilton, and after their honeymoon trip will reside in Rochester. A host of friends in this city will wish them well.

DOES YOUR SCALP ITCH?

Are Your Hairs Dropping One by One?

If your scalp itches you are doubtless suffering from dandruff. The dandruff germ is digging up your scalp in little flakes, called dandruff and sapping the life of the hair bulb. No hair preparation that is a mere hair stimulant and tonic will cure dandruff, because it won't kill the germ that causes the trouble. Newbro's Herpicide is the latest scientific discovery; and it will kill the dandruff germ. Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect; kill the germ and you will have no more dandruff, falling hair or baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Lacrosse results yesterday: Torontos 3, Capitals 3 (exhibition); Tecumsehs 9, Nationals 9.

The wind-up of the Gans-Nelson boxing match yesterday is thus described in the despatches; Shortly after the forty-second round began the men were in their usual clinch. Nelson had his head on Gans' shoulder and his arm down. Several times he hit Gans below the belt, apparently feeling for a vital spot. At last he drew back his right arm and hit Gans a vicious blow square in the groin. The colored boy sank to his knees and rolled over on his back. Referee Siler, without hesitation, ordered Nelson to his corner and awarded the contest to Gans on a foul.

Are your bones aching, nerves tired, nights restless, kidney and liver trouble, energy low? These are signs of low vitality. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well. Tea or Tablets. 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

FULLER.

The threshing machine has been very busy in this neighborhood this week.

Miss Aggie Clarke has returned to her home in Rochester, after spending a week in this neighborhood among friends.

The lawn social held in the Presbyterian Church yard on Friday evening proved quite a success.

Mrs. Albert Geen, of Tweed, is the guest of Mrs. John Geen for a couple of weeks.

Miss May Collins has returned home after spending a month in Rochester.

Mrs. J. Carson and Mrs. Albert Mitts were guests of Mrs. Andrew Carson, of Crookston, on Wednesday last.

A few of our young men intend leaving on Monday to take in the Toronto fair.

Misses P. and T. Grier have returned home to Tweed after spending a week in this neighborhood.

Mr. Frank Vandewaters and Mrs. Daniel Vandewaters drove through this place on Friday.

Mrs. John Collins has gone to spend a week in Rochester.

PHILIPSTON.

August 21.

The funeral of Mrs. Prindle took place at the family residence on Wednesday and was largely attended.

A pleasing event took place at the home of Mr. Charles Mitchell, on Wednesday evening, when their neighbors and friends met together to bid them farewell before taking their departure from this neighborhood. They were presented with a rocking-chair, set of dishes and table linen. An enjoyable evening was spent, refreshments being served, after which all took their departure wishing Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell health and prosperity in their new home in Belleville.

A great number from here attended the funeral of Mr. George Caldwell, of Zion's Hill.

Mr Stanley Chambers is in New York State.

Miss Bella Kember, who has been visiting friends here has returned to her home in Rednersville.

Mr. Arnold Kember and Miss Chislett, of Rednersville, spent Sunday here.

Renovation is commenced on Bethel church. Reopening services are expected to be held about the last of October.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ketcheson, Mr. and Mrs. B. Sayers, and Mrs. Gilbert Youker left on Wednesday for Toronto and Niagara Falls.

The horses ran away with Mr. Jos. Phillips on Thursday. Although receiving quite a shaking up, he received no serious injuries.

Mrs. D. Phillips, of Campbellford, is visiting relatives here.

Miss Florence Prentice, who has been ill, is better.

Miss Nellie Youker, of Zion's Hill, spent the week with Miss L. Phillips.

Miss Edna Carter is visiting in Picton.

Miss Edith Sayer and Mrs. John Ketcheson spent Friday with Mrs. Jas. Phillips.

Miss Ella and Hannah Nicholson spent Wednesday with Mrs. D. Carl, of Zion's Hill.

Opposition is the life of trade. This application is worthy of being applied to the threshing problem of Bethel now, as Messrs. Faulkner, Carter and Hudgins are at work.

Suffered for 23 Years With Kidney Trouble.

CURED AT LAST BY GIN PILLS.

Whether you are just beginning to feel the first twinges of kidney pains—or whether you have tried for years to find relief—Gin Pills will cure you. Surely you can't doubt their virtues after such a letter as this:

"I sent for a free sample of your Gin Pills some time ago, and found them to give me great relief, so I put myself under the treatment, and am now using the third box, and feel myself entirely cured. I have suffered with my kidneys for 23 years. At the time I began taking Gin Pills I could not turn in bed without pain. If I moved at night, the pain would be so great that it would wake me up. Now I am free of pain, and feel as well as I did 23 years ago. I feel it my duty to let you know about Gin Pills, so that it might be the means of relieving some other sufferer.

"HENRY WAKEFORD, Toronto."

Gin Pills hold out a guarantee of certain, quick relief. They will stop the pain—heal the sick kidneys—and build up the whole system—or your druggist will refund your money. That shows our confidence in Gin Pills. We will do more. We will send you a trial box of Gin Pills absolutely free if you will write asking for it and state the name of the paper in which you see this. You can thus test them at our expense and see for yourself whether or not Gin Pills are all that we claim them to be. Gin Pills are for sale at all druggists. 50c a box—6 boxes for $2.50. General Conference.

Montreal, Sept. 3. — The General Conference of the Methodist Church in Canada will meet in quadrennial session in Montreal commencing on Wednesday, September 12. Local arrangements for the event are well advanced. The Social Union has undertaken to give the Conference delegates special entertainment on the two Saturdays during the Conference On Saturday, September 15, a reception will be given the delegates at the Wesleyan Theological College by the governors of the institution, commencing at 3.30 o'clock. Wesleyan College and all McGill University buildings will be thrown open for inspection by the delegates. Addresses will be delivered in convocation hall by Principal Peterson, Mr. W. Hanson, President of the Methodist Union, and Rev. Drs. Carman and Potts. On Saturday, September 22, the delegates will be given a ride down the St. Lawrence in the steamer St. Lawrence. Invitations will be issued to the delegates and their wives and daughters, to members of the Social Union with their wives, to the Protestant Ministerial Association, and to the hosts and hostesses who entertain delegates during the Conference. Mr. Wm. Hanson, President of the union, has generously offered to defray the cost of the boat, and the Social Union will provide refreshments. It is expected that about seven hundred persons will accept the invitations.

The Conference arrangements committee reported that there were 304 delegates expected, and that in many cases intimation had been received that wives or daughters would accompany representatives.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Telling Age and Sex by Pulse.

"The female pulse always beats faster than the male," said a physician, "and from birth to death the pulse speed steadily decreases. I have no doubt that by the pulse alone I could tell readily a healthy person's age and sex. Babes at birth have a pulse that beats 160 times a minute in the case of girls and 150 times a minute in the case of boys. At the age of four or five the pulse beats will have fallen respectively to 110 and 100. Maidens' and youths' pulses average ninety-five and ninety; mature women's and men's average eighty and seventy-five; elderly women's and men's average sixty and fifty. An old woman's pulse rarely if ever sinks below fifty, but among old men a pulse under fifty is fairly common."

Don't Be Backward

Do not hesitate to ask for a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. We are glad to give them to anyone who is troubled with billiousness, constipation or any disorder of the stomach. Many have been permanently cured by their use. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store.

KEEP THE LIVER CLEAN.

Don't Overwork It and Give It a Rest Once In Awhile.

A man of common sense and a doctor at that said: "The liver is misunderstood and underestimated in its functions. If it can be kept clean and active there is no reason why we should ever be ill a day, and we should live to be 150 or 200 years old. It is not necessary to rip this organ all to pieces with ten grains of calomel to get it stirred up. The best thing to do is to shut off your food supply for two or three days, drop your whisky and claret, your tea and coffee, and give your liver a chance to rest. This should be done once a month."

It is well known, of course, that in olden times the liver was supposed to be the seat of the affections. Friends when they met in the morning did not salute each other with "How's your health?" but with "How's your liver?" Men take horseback exercise principally for their livers. A good shaking up every morning drives away the cirrhotic biliary encroachment. It is an error to assume that whisky alone produces cirrhosis. Overfeeding is more often the cause. If the digestive organs would organize a union and work only eight hours a day all of us would be healthy and long lived. The trouble is we require the liver, stomach, bowels, heart, brain, muscles, nerves, kidneys, spleen, etc., to work all the time and overtime. Wrong. Give them a rest.

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE FARM.

I recollect the good old farm, the scene of boyhood days,
I recollect the farmer man who'd taken me to "raise,"
I recollect at four a.m. he'd get me out of bed
With divers thumps and sundry clumps upon my frowsy head.

I recollect the gentle stock; I recollect e'en now.
How nice it is to scrub a horse and manicure a cow.
I recollect the playful bull that nearly every morn
Would try to get my youthful form impaled upon a horn.

I recollect the nice fresh eggs — the ones we didn't get—
The ones that into town they shipped
I taste the others yet.
Oh, yes, I recollect those days so careless and so free;
I recollect 'em now and then, and that's enough for me.

INSATIABLE PLAYGOERS.

Curious Patrons of Theatres In "Dear Old London."

The managers and box-office keepers of London theatres tell strange stories of the eccentricities of their patrons.

A certain gentleman, for instance, has never missed a single performance at the Vaudeville theatre since the first day of "The Belle of Mayfair." The curious point about him is that he always takes two stalls, reserving one of them for his hat and coat. At Daly's theatre there is also a patron who for many weeks has never missed a performance, and has intimated that he wants the seat—in the dress circle—reserved until his leave of absence from his regiment in India expires.

At the Gaiety theatre there is a pit customer who, ever since the theatre was built, occupies the same corner each Friday night, and for some years before did the same thing at the old Gaiety. When the old Gaiety was in existence a man used to sit in the gallery every night until a certain lady in the company left to go on tour, when he, too, left to follow her silently round the country. Recently when she appeared at another London theatre for a short engagement this distant and devoted admirer appeared in the gallery.

Another well-known patron of the play-houses is a middle-aged man who goes to every matinee of the newest musical comedy. He arrives without fail, and punctually at half-past four leaves the theatre and drives away in his carriage. This continues every week until another musical piece is produced, when at once he transfers his custom.

Last year during the Covent Garden opera season a colonial ex-Premier arrived one evening, in ordinary walking costume, and when he found that evening dress was indispensible he borrowed a white tie from the management, and keeping on his overcoat took his seat. He went to the opera many times afterwards, and always insisted on borrowing the white tie.

Mr. Lewis Waller at the Imperial theatre had a misadventure that left his theatre half empty one Saturday night. Through carelessness the "House Full" boards were not taken away after the matinee, with the result that people arriving in the evening turned away and went elsewhere in search of amusement.

Australia Has Deepest Gold Mine.

Australia now possesses the deepest gold mine in the world. Within the last few weeks the shafts at the New Chum Railway at Bendigo, Victoria, have been sunk to a depth of over 4,300 feet, and the quartz there topped has been sampled and crushed, with the result that a yield of gold equal to an ounce per ton has been obtained.

The operations in the mine have been tested by Government officials, in view of the fact that never before in the world's history has gold been obtained from so low a depth as three-quarters of a mile.

The Victorian Director of Geology, E. J. Dunn, in the course of an official report upon a sample from the 4,300-foot shaft of the New Chum, writes:

"This remarkable specimen of auriferous quartz is evidence of the vast stores of wealth in gold possessed by the State. It is a guarantee of the stability and progressive prosperity of Bendigo that such rich ore exists at such great depths. The winning of such ore from a vertical depth of over three-quarters of a mile from the surface is an achievement of which Bendigo miners may justly feel proud."

A Pulpit on Rails.

There has been completed recently a very handsome pulpit for use in St. Cuthbert's Church, Carlisle, and the peculiarity about it is that it runs on wheels. The structure is made entirely of mahogany, and measures 9 feet over all in height, nearly 9 feet in width, with a depth of 5 feet. There are seven steps up each side at the back. It is worked on a trolley and endless rope, the wheels, which are covered with rubber, running in iron grooves let in the stone floor. The system works very smoothly, and the pulpit is wound in and out before and after the sermon by turning a wheel about twenty times. The total cost was £200. The pulpit was consecrated by the Bishop of Carlisle. It is to be in perfect working order for Sunday next, and was used for the first time yesterday. It is the only pulpit on rails consecrated by a bishop.

Death of a Noted Divine.

Prof. Thomas Smith, an eminent Indian missionary, and the father of the United Free Church of Scotland, died in Edinburgh the other day at the age of eighty-nine. Dr. Smith was for a short time chaplain to the Black Watch during the Indian Mutiny, and was invalided home in consequence of an attack of cholera. For some years he edited religious papers in Calcutta, and he originated the scheme of Zenana missions. From 1890 to 1893 he was professor of Evangelistic Theology in New College, Edinburgh, and he was moderator of the General Assembly in 1891.

Fortune For Laborer's Wife.

Mrs. Macline, of Harrington, near Workington, Cumberland, whose husband earns $5.75 a week as a laborer, has come into a fortune of $85,000. It is her share of $500,000 left by a bachelor uncle in Australia.

Macline was earning only $4.75 a week a few months ago, when he obtained his present employment at the Moss Bay Steel Works.

The couple have had nineteen children, most of whom are now grown up. Some of the daughters are in domestic service.

The members of the family take their good fortune very calmly.

Not Just Better Baking But Far Easier Cookery

The way the oven heat's made to bake evenly—that alone would sell you the Imperial Oxford range once you really saw what it means. But the Imperial Oxford isn't just a perfect baker,—it's the easiest range to cook with, because it uses heat sensibly, whatever you want the heat to do,—fry, broil, or bake.

Imperial Oxford Range

Its roomy firebox, its easy-to-manage sensitive drafts, hold the heat EVEN,—keep it under your control. And the special Imperial Oxford thermometer tells you always just where the heat is. But you can't really know what a fine set of ideas are built into this range until you come and see it.

Pandora Range

OVEN THERMOMETER. NO "BAD LUCK" BAKING DAYS.

Twenty degrees difference in the temperature of an oven is sufficient to make "Good Luck" or "Bad Luck" in baking many kinds of food.

The heat in the oven of a range not fitted with a thermometer, or worse, fitted with a poor instrument, will easily vary twenty degrees—result is unpalatable, burned or half-baked food, a cross cook and a disappointed family at meal time.

Thermometer fitted in oven door of "Pandora" range has been a proven success for fifteen years, and every instrument is carefully adjusted, and tested by heat, before sending out—the first, best and only thermometer which is of any real value to those who do baking.

"Pandora" range is handsome, economical on fuel and a perfect baker.

Thrust Upon Him

By OTHO B. SENGA

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

Squire Hart looked the young fellow over keenly.

"M—m!" giving his pudgy hand to the clasp of the long, thin one extended in greeting, "Ralph Reed, eh? And what do you do? Football, I suppose, like the rest of these donkeys!"

Reed laughed good humoredly.

"No, Mr. Hart, I wouldn't stand the ghost of a chance in a rush. I'm on the track team."

"He's the champion sprinter, papa," interposed Elsie eagerly. "He won five points for the blue in the intercollegiate contest!"

Her father frowned at her enthusiasm, and Reed's thin, brown face colored.

"You ought to run," grumbled the squire, continuing his examination of the young fellow; "you're built like a greyhound or a grasshopper!"

Reed, outwardly at ease, flinched inwardly under the squire's keen scrutiny. His compact with the pretty Elsie would be null and void without her father's consent, and he felt that his athletic career was a detriment in the eyes of the older man. He was not at all encouraged by the remarks that followed.

"I don't believe in it," irascibly. "Boys go to college to study, or ought to, and they make a business of some kind of foolish play. If those football fellows," pointing to the three other young men who were his daughter's guests for the spring vacation, "had to work one-half as hard sawing wood or plowing, they'd think they were terribly abused."

Some one called Elsie, and she hurried away, giving a pleading glance at her lover which he interpreted as counseling him to patience.

"And as for running," continued the squire, with increasing choler, for he, too, had seen the pleading glance, "as for running, why should a man of ordinary courage care to excel as a runner? Running is an accomplishment for cowards!"

THEN A STREAK OF BLUE DASHED BY HIM.

The blood rushed to the dark face, but Reed spoke quietly and courteously.

"There are things to run for as well as things to run from, Mr. Hart, and I hope I'd not be lacking if a test of courage came to me."

It was a merry party that roamed over the fields and through the woods searching for the earliest spring flowers; that rode and drove and sang and danced.

Young Reed and his fair hostess carried heavy hearts that made gayety an effort and laughter a mockery. The squire had refused to sanction their engagement, to listen to any suggestion or to make any promises for the future.

"I'll wait," he said grimly, "until you have shown that you can do something besides run!"

Apparently oblivious to the sports of the guests at Hart's Holm, the squire had kept a keen eye on them all. He rather admired the dogged pertinacity with which Reed took his daily run of three or four miles over the country roads. He smiled grimly when he saw the young fellow start out as if for a walk wearing a long raincoat over his running togs.

"Doesn't mean to give any unnecessary offense to the 'crewel parient,'" chuckled the squire appreciatively, "but intends to have his own way just the same."

"It'll be rather quiet and lonely at the house tomorrow," soliloquized the squire as he drove along, sniffing the fresh, clear air of the bright spring morning. "The lads and lassies all go today. I wish I hadn't been quite so sharp with Elsie and that young fellow. He seems a fine, manly chap. But what on earth does he want to run for?" ending irritably. "Hello, Bartlett, what's the matter with your horse?"

He had reached the top of a long, steep hill, and overtaken a neighbor with a heavy load of rock.

"Stepped on a stone that rolled, and gone as lame as a lazy man's excuses," Bartlett answered characteristically.

"Suppose I hitch in my team and take the load down for you," suggested the squire, "it's all level after we pass my house. You can lead yours down. Sit still, Betty Bartlett, and hold on tight," playfully addressing the little girl perched on the seat. "My horses are frisky, you know."

Bartlett had locked the wagon wheels preparatory to making the descent, but as the squire lifted the tongue for the other horses to be hitched in the lock chain snapped and broke and the heavily loaded wagon started down the hill. He shouted to Bartlett, who, hampered by the four horses, lost his head and only bawled, "Whoa, Hart, whoa!"

Hart held on to the tongue and braced back with all his strength, but despite his efforts the wagon went flying down the hill like an engine on down grade.

"Hold on tight, Betty," the squire managed to scream.

He knew that if he dropped the tongue the wagon would be tipped over instantly and that there would be small chance indeed for the life of the child; so he too "held on tight" and ran as if fleeing from death.

"Go on, horsy," cried Betty, in great glee; "go faster!"

The squire couldn't spare breath now even to groan. The heavy wagon, with a ton of rock behind him, crashed and roared, bounced over the rough places in the road, struck fire from cut stones, and the man ran till his legs seemed merely rags fluttering in a fierce wind.

Almost at the foot! If only he could hold out a few seconds more! And then he tried to close his eyes—for there, crossing the road, directly in the path from which he dared not diverge, was a little scarlet clad figure drawing a child's cart!

Bobby—his own little Bobby!

He tried to pray, he tried again to close his eyes, and then a streak of blue dashed by him, the scarlet spot was caught up and rushed to safety!

He jumped instinctively when he reached the little cart, and it was crushed to pieces under the thundering wheels.

He had reached the level. He could feel the slackening of the terrific speed, but he still ran on, miles it seemed to him now, before he could stop the demon that was forcing him onward.

"Go on, horsy! Gidd up!" cried the insatiate Betty as the squire dropped limp to the ground. "You can be my horsy now," she remarked complacently to the first of the young men who reached the side of the exhausted squire.

They quickly improvised a stretcher from the blankets and carried the unconscious man to the house.

He opened his eyes after awhile and looked anxiously about him.

"Bobby's all right," said some one quickly, "and the little girl—and—and, I guess, everybody."

"Ralph!" gasped the squire.

"Here I am, Mr. Hart," bending over him.

"I am glad you can run," faintly.

"So am I, Mr. Hart," feelingly. "I feared you were going to run over me, though."

"We'll have to concede you to be the champion sprinter!" cried one of the other men. "That was a pretty long dash, sure enough!"

"Ralph must yield the palm to you, squire," added another jovially.

The squire shook his head feebly.

"He—he 'achieved' it," he whispered, his eyes on Ralph's fine face, "but it—it was"— He sighed wearily.

"It was 'thrust upon you,' you mean, squire," understandingly.

The squire smiled grimly in acquiescence.

Cromwell's Burial Place.

The thirty acres of this great cemetery (Abney Park) include the site of another large old house and its grounds, Fleetwood House, once the residence of General Fleetwood and his wife, who was Bridget, the daughter of Oliver Cromwell. This sight is to the right of the avenue, and there one summer day, among older and plainer tombstones than those of the Abney, or opposite, side, I saw men mowing the long grass and presently came upon a mound inclosed with an iron rail. The mound itself was covered with ivy, but trimmed so that one could read on a red granite slab the words, "This mound was a favorite retirement of the late Isaac Watts, D. D." Tradition says he loved that mound because from it he could see the open country. It is now hemmed in by houses, but the mound is still solitary. Another tradition tells of a rumor current soon after Cromwell's death to the effect that the Protector's body was not in the coffin that was buried with regal pomp in the abbey, but had been secretly brought down to his daughter's house and laid to rest where now is the mound.—Christian World.

How He Knew.

There is a very forgetful girl in Denver, living up on Washington street. Fearing a young man who called on her last week would stay too long she set the clock in the parlor half an hour ahead. She was tired, having been out horseback riding that day, and wanted to get to bed early. The scheme worked. But then she forgot to turn the clock back and, having numerous young men friends, she also very carelessly forgot which one it was. Last night the young man called again. The clock was still fast and he noticed it.

"That clock is wrong, isn't it?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied. "I set it ahead so a fellow who called Wednesday night would go home in time to let me get some sleep."

"The clock fooled him all right," said the caller quietly.

"How do you know?" she asked.

The young man smiled a sickly smile. "I called Wednesday night."

The girl coughed.

"We're having so much trouble in getting a hired girl," she said. "Does your mother ever have difficulty securing good help?"—Denver Post.

MONEY A PUBLIC TRUST

MAN WHO MAKES CAPITAL HIS IDOL IS AN INCAPABLE.

HE CANNOT LOVE THE CHRIST

Insidious Power of the Love of Wealth, and the Gradual Increase of Avarice in a Man's Soul—Timely Sermon on the Temptations, Burdens and Responsibilities of Great Wealth, With an Incidental Word to Those Who Have It Not.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 2.—The temptations, burdens and responsibilities of great wealth form the theme of this timely sermon, the text for which is taken from Ecclesiastes v, 10, "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver, nor he that loveth abundance with increase."

I have no sympathy with the demagogues who are trying to antagonize the masses against the classes. I have utter contempt for the false agitators who preach the infamous doctrine that every person who dresses in broadcloth or in silk is an enemy of his race, and that the insignia of all human perfections can only be found in the laborer's soiled garments and in the fluttering rags of a filthy, unkemp tramp. The outward appearance of man does not always portray his true character. Thus we find some of the blackest sheep feeding among the flocks browsing in all pasture lands. The wealth of a man or the poverty of a man cannot be used as a criterion by which to judge whether the nature of that man is pure or impure. They have been many rich men with true hearts and noble impulses, men of simple lives and beneficent deeds. The world remembers with reverence such men as Sir Moses Montefiore, whose life was consecrated to charity; Baron Hirsch, who built and endowed homes for the shelter of persecuted Jews; Peter Cooper, whose splendid institution is still developing the genius of the poor, and William E. Dodge, whose benefactions extended to the poor and struggling of his day. Who would dream of placing the portraits of Robert Morris and Jay Cooke in the rogues' gallery. The patriotic banker who risked his fortune in the support of Washington and the millionaire who stood by the side of Secretary Chase during the darkest days of the civil war were true patriots. Robert Morris' money and Jay Cooke's money were just as essential to American liberties as were the soldiers who carried the muskets and fired the cannon.

All palaces are not the walled in castles of buccaneers and thieves. I go further than this. I assert and have a right to assert this from the highest socialistic standards that men of capital are as necessary to the development of the country and to the success of an enterprise as are men of muscle and brains. It is unadulterated nonsense to say that the capital of this country rests entirely in the brain and muscles of laborers and the mechanics. The laborers and the mechanics of this country could accomplish very little for the true development of this country were it not organized and directed by skilled engineers and by the resources of money. Sometime ago I walked through miles and miles of sagebrush and of desert. This desert extends from San Bernardino to Ettawanda. In all that desert there were not any living creatures but snakes, a few birds and leaping jack rabbits. Then I climbed the San Bernardino mountains and traveled into those hills for many miles. There I came to where the engineers and the financiers were building a great dam which would collect all the waters from an immense area of land into one great lake. "What are you going to do with this water?" I asked the chief engineer. "After we collect the water," said he, "we are going to send it by tunnels under the mountains, where it will be scattered over the arid lands, extending between Ettawanda and San Bernardino, and that water will make that desert blossom as the rose." Do you mean to tell me that the ignorant Mexican laborers who were digging the tunnels and erecting the dams of Little Bear Valley could work that miracle without the planning of skilled engineers and the re-enforcement of capital, any more than capital could make that reservoir without the co-operation of labor. Oh, yes, even in the wildest dreams of the discontented classes there must be demarcations between man and man. There is a place for capital as well. Capital and labor are two strong arms of the social body. Their two hands must lift together and work together and live together and die together.

But it makes a great deal of difference whether the capitalist looks upon his fortune as a public trust or whether he plots to make money and to squeeze the last dollar he can out of his suffering employes. It makes a great deal of difference whether capitalists are living for others or whether they believe that God has selected them as his special favorites and expects all those with whom they come in contact to live for their benefit. And yet that is the way many of our moneyed potentates act. They squeeze, they gouge, they do everything which, as misers, they can to hoard their gold. And the strange fact is the more they get the more they want and the more they are dissatisfied with what they have. Ecclesiastes well describes the insatiable spirit of some money seekers who are about us when he said, "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver, nor he that loveth abundance with increase."

In the first place, I learn from this text that when a man makes money his idol he is incapable of loving Christ. The two loves are antagonistic. They are in mortal combat. They can no more live together than a dove could nest with a buzzard or the light and the darkness could together fill the same room. The love of silver is from the devil. The love of Christ is of God. The Bible distinctly says it, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Ye cannot serve two masters. For either you will hold to the one and despise the other or else you will hold to the one and despise the other. The house divided against itself cannot stand. Therefore, my friends, you who are giving your lives more and more to the acquisition of wealth are at the divergent forks of two roads. Either you will have to surrender your love for gold or else you will have to surrender you love for Jesus Christ. There is no doubt about it. The love of silver is a sin. And unless a man is ready to surrender all sin he cannot become one with Christ.

"Oh," says some man to me, "that is absurd. You are taking an impracticable view of life. Do you mean to tell me that all merchants who are selling their goods over a counter, that all real estate speculators who are trying to make a profit out of their land, that all clerks and merchanics and lawyers and doctors and professors and scientists and authors and laborers who are earning their weekly wages are antagonistic to Jesus Christ?" No, my friend, I never said that. Thousands and tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands of men who are working in the busy marts of trade are doing this, not for love of silver, but for what that silver will do for them and their loved ones. They are working for their children's education. They are working to put homes over their loved ones' heads. They are working, as did Peter Cooper, to build some institution of mercy. But you know just as well as I know that there are thousands and hundreds of thousands of men who, having all their temporal necessities supplied, are not working for any competency or even for the luxuries of life, but in order that they might have power and fame and position; in order that they might yet make men bow and worship them; in order that they might say, as did Nebuchadnezzar of old, "Behold, is not this great Babylon that I have built? Behold, behold!" Now, whenever any man comes to the position where he is loving gold for gold's sake and power for power's sake and fame for fame's sake, then that man is crowding the love of Jesus Christ out of his heart. Paul was a tentmaker. But Paul never made tents in order that he might build a palace and own a thousand acres of land. Paul made tents in order that he might earn enough money to pay his way to preach the gospel. And when any man loses sight of the true purpose for which we are given the opportunities of working for money, then that man becomes a spiritual outcast. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Ye cannot love silver and love Christ at the same time.

I was never more impressed with the fact that a false love can crowd out our love for Jesus Christ than when, a short time ago, I saw the copy of a picture entitled "Despised and Rejected of Men." The artist did not depict Christ in the Oriental judgment hall of Pilate. He did not have Jesus surrounded by Hebrew scoffers in Hebrew dress, while he staggered under his cross through the Jerusalem gates on his way to Calvary. The artist did not lift that cross, as we have always seen it, between two thieves. But this cross of Christ seemed to be hung upon one of the pillars of the subtreasury building of Wall street, New York. Then as these American scoffers passed by, wagging their heads and sneering, each one seemed to be absorbed in just one illicit love. There was the drunkard clinging to his bottle. There was the libertine with wanton eyes watching his prey. There was the bishop in his gorgeous robes thinking more of ecclesiastical honors than of worshiping at the cross. There was the maiden dressed in the latest fashion, seeming to say, "Come, O world, come and worship me and my beauty." There was the politician reaching after fame. And there was the miser or the banker whose god was gold. As I watched the long line of men and women who were rejecting Christ, each on account of his one illicit love, this miser seemed to speak and to stand out before me as the most despicable of all.

But though the love for Christ and the love for gold cannot exist simultaneously in the same heart, that is not the only result of this evil of greed. It might not be so bad if you could come to greed and say: "Here, greed, here is my soul, here is my love of God. Now eat and be filled." But greed is a glutton. Greed is a gormand. Greed is a huge monster with a voracious appetite, and the more you feed him the larger he will grow, and the greater will become his desire for food. He will swallow down a man's religion. He will keep on swallowing down houses and banks and lands, and still this demoniac monster greed will keep crying. "I am hungry, give me more to eat. More to eat, I say. Give me more! Aye, give me more than you have, and still I can eat it and not be satisfied. I am growing bigger all the time. Food, food! I must have more food for my omnivorous appetite." That is only another way of illustrating the Biblical truth of my text, which says, "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver, nor he that loveth abundance with increase."

You never saw a person who selfishly lived for what he could get who was satisfied with what he had. "More, more," is always the slogan of greed, "Give me more. Give me more." "Do you see that sofa?" said a gentleman some years ago to a friend. "Well, that one sofa almost ruined me. It took me years and years to recover myself. I have always kept that sofa as an object lesson for my children. When I was a young man we were living in a humble street and in a small but comfortably furnished house. I was working my way along and would in time have come out all right. But one day my wife was at an auction sale, and she was able to buy that sofa very cheap. She bought it, but no sooner did she put it in our parlor than it made all the rest of the furniture look shabby. Then we decided to get a new parlor set to match the sofa. No sooner did we fix up the parlor than we had to buy new furniture for the dining room, and so we went on fixing the house. Then, after we had refurnished the house, we decided that the house itself was not good enough for the furniture, so we moved into a larger house on a better street. Then, when we moved into the better street, we found out that we had to have better clothes. Thus we went on increasing our expenses and our outgo, while our income remained the same. Then, the first thing I knew the bills kept piling up, and I was a financial wreck." "Ah, yes," I said to myself when I heard that story, "how true that is about the unsatisfying result of selfishly living for what we can get! When we live for self the more we have the more we want. Greed has an omnivorous appetite. Greed is a glutton. Greed keeps crying: 'More, more. Give me more. I must have more!'" My friend, is not this the personal history of your greedy life?

My brother, how old are you? "Forty." How are you getting along in business? "Oh," you say, "splendidly, splendidly! My business was never better than now." Are you making any money outside of your business? "Yes," you say. "I do not tell this to everybody, but I will to you. Last week I closed one deal alone whereby I made on one piece of land a net profit of $10,000." Indeed! I suppose you inherited a good deal of money from your father to start in business? "Inherited! Indeed, I did not. Why, father never had anything to speak of. I was brought up on a farm. I made my own way alone. Why, when I first came to this city my wife and I used to live in two rooms. Then I often said to her, 'If the time ever comes when we have an annual income of $1,500 and a little home of our own we will be satisfied.'" Then you laugh to yourself and say, "Thank God, we have a good deal more than our little home now and $1,500 a year income." Is that so, my friend? Then I suppose, as your money is increasing, you are giving more and more to God and to your fellow men. I suppose, as your capital enlarges, you do not grind your clerks down to a mere pittance and that you give them more time off for rest. I suppose that every year, as your financial income enlarges, your benevolences enlarge also. You look at me a moment. Then you drop your eyes as you slowly say: "No; I ought to do this, but I do not give as much now as I did twenty years ago. The strange fact is that financial success inevitably encourages selfishness. The more I get the more I want and the less I give in proportion to my success. This is a selfish world, and I am each year like most rich men, becoming more and more selfish." God pity you, O Christian ingrate! God pity you, I say again, because as you grow wealthier you do less and less for others. I know one fact is true — the more you get the less enjoyment you derive out of your own selfish successes. "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver nor he that loveth abundance with increase."

Are you one of the wholesale robbers whom Upton Sinclair excoriates in that terrible philippic lately published called "The Jungle?" I do not know enough of the facts to say whether he is right in his denunciation of the stockyards and their proprietors, but this I will say, that this principle of selfish monopoly is practiced in many trades and professions. The rich operator cannot bear to see a poor operator making a humble competence in his little store. He grudges him his little income and freezes him out and adds his connection to his own big business. Are you, O man, building up your fortune out of coffin lids and destroyed homes and wrecked lives? Some of you rich men are doing thus. You will never be able to atone for your murderous tyrannies by a few donations to colleges and hospitals and libraries. Never, never, never! What you have won from man by dishonest methods you must, like Zaccheus, return to man fourfold. Are you one whose "gormandizing greed" is teaching you to take unfair advantages of your fellow men?

But, after all, the most tragic and pathetic part of that Sinclair's book called "The Jungle"—and the reason I quote from this book is because I believe it is an epoch making book—is the tragic chapter where the once noble and honest "Jurgis," now a thief and a robber, is led into the palace of the great stockyard packer, Jones by name, by the drunken son of the killer of over a quarter of billion of cattle. The millionaire Jones as a financial prince could pile up his stolen riches for his children. And, mark you, I am not attacking or insinuating against any personality in Chicago, but only alluding to the character of the book as Upton Sinclair portrayed them. Jones could pile up his millions. But when he gave his money to his son, like a satanic adder's bite, it spiritually and morally wrecked his boy's life. And stolen money will always spiritually wreck the lives of our children, if we, as dishonest parents, give to them ill gotten gains. Oh, man, oh, rich man, why wilt thou live for gold? Why wilt thou strive to win money for thy children and with that money give to them the parental example of a spiritually wasted life? Knowest thou not that the history of Jones, the millionaire packer of "The Jungle," is to be repeated in thy history and in the history of they children, if thou lovest silver for silver's sake and gold for gold's sake?

Thus, my friends, in this sermon I have tried to broaden your vision of life. I have not tried to stunt any of your faculties, but rather to give the broadest freedom to each of your mental and physical powers. What I have tried to do is to get you to consecrate every one of your faculties to God. If you have the sweet throat of the thrush sing for Christ. If you have the powers of winning gold win it for Christ. Wherever you go and whatever you do, there seek an opportunity to reach out the helping hand for Christ. It is only the things of the spirit that live and bring happiness to those who live for the spirit, both on this side of the grave and beyond, in the eternal life. "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver nor he that loveth abundance with increase."

Are you here and now ready to live the Christ life? Are you ready to help men up to God instead of trying to drag them down to sin? Oh, my friends, with the knowledge of the tragedies which are happening everywhere around us, dare we, can we, refuse the spirit life?

An Engineering Marvel.

Plans have been perfected by the Canadian Pacific to construct a bridge near Lethbridge, Alberta, which will be an engineering marvel and probably will be ranked as one of the world's wonders. The plans call for a structure more than a mile long and 300 feet above the water level. As compared with other bridges of the world the Brooklyn bridge is no longer and is not more than half as high.

The Eyes and The Nerves

When feeling nervous or tired go to the window and look away into the far distance. Continue this for a few minutes and note the soothing calming influence that comes over you. Then turn again to something that requires a close range of vision, and at once the nervousness will return. Business men when tired often close their eyes for a moment, as they have learned by intuition that it rests the entire system. Closing the eyes has this calming effect because one-third of the brain is for the time being off from work, and using unnecessary energy. It proves "brain strain" undoubtedly present, though the vision may be seemingly excellent. This form of brain strain we relieve by the proper glasses.

Sad Accident At Deseronto.

DRUNKEN MAN TRIED TO BOARD A TRAIN, LOST HIS LEG AND MAY LOSE HIS LIFE.

A Deseronto correspondent writes: A sad accident happened this (Monday) afternoon about 5 o'clock. A man named Joyce attempted to board at train when it was in motion. He missed his hold, was knocked down and the wheels passed over his right leg, crushing it just above the knee so badly that it had to be taken off by Dr. Newton. He was also badly cut about the head and at this writing is not expected to live. The unfortunate man was under the influence of liquor. He is a married man with one child.

Two men were nearly drowned near Deseronto this (Monday) evening. Their sailing boat upset in the middle of the bay, and they had to cling to it till assistance reached them from the dock. Their names are Slavin and Gowan.

MRS. DIXON'S RETRACTION.

SENATOR McCARREN'S COUNSEL WILL GO ON WITH MYSTERIOUS CASE.

New York, Sept. 1.—"I have received no official notice of any retraction or withdrawal of the suit against Senator McCarren from either Mrs. Dixon or her counsel. Neither have I had any consultation with my client, Senator McCarren. It is up to the other side to take the first necessary official steps in regard to the retraction, if one has been made. We are going right on with the examination of Dr. Dixon just the same. Lawyer Wyvel, Mrs. Dixon's counsel, has asked for an adjournment, but we see no reason for granting one."

Thus spoke Lawyer Whitehouse of Senator McCarren's counsel this afternoon.

Mrs. Dixon, despite her retraction of yesterday, refused to say whether her suit would be dropped.

"My Wyvel will have to carry on the suit unless I get some money," she said. "He has spent his own money so far to carry on the case."

She is evidently waiting developments. Wyvel, when he read the story of the retraction, was both astounded and very angry. The status of the case is very mysterious.

Popular Thurlow People Married.

A quiet wedding took place at the John St. parsonage, in this city, to-day, the principals being Mr. Abram Bailey, a popular farmer living near Foxboro, and Miss Eleanor E. Thrasher, whose home was in the same locality, and who, through her sweetness of disposition and many graces of character, had endeared herself to hosts of friends. The couple were unattended. Rev. A. H. Drumm performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey went west on a wedding tour, which will include Ontario and some of the eastern states. They will reside near Foxboro on their return, and many friends will wish for them a happy married life.

Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association Convention.

Hastings County was well represented at above, having twelve delegates attending all the sessions and several others who registered, coming from all points of the county, Belleville, Bancroft, Deseronto, Stirling, Trenton, L'Amable, Madoc, Marmora, Springbrook, Tweed and St. Ola. All sections and classes of sportsmen were represented. Five of the most important committees were presided over by Col. Halliwell, Judge Fraleck, James Knox, T. C. McConnell and James Whitton, and on all the rest one or more Hastings men took an active share. As the proceedings have already appeared in all the daily papers, it is unnecessary to refer to them, only to say that in the President, Col. Halliwell and Judge Fraleck, Hastings County had men capable of holding their own with the most prominent sportsmen of the province, and Dr. Riggs, of Toronto, who is an authority on fish and fish culture all over America, stated that the Judge was the first man he ever met who knew and could explain the different varieties of lake trout and their habits. The arrangements were perfect and the thanks of the delegates, one and all, were extended to the officers of Toronto branch, and especially to the genial Kelly Evans, who made every person feel at home at once. The lunch at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club was a pleasant affair and gave all a chance to get acquainted. The effects of this gathering will be far-reaching, and we all trust that by the time the next convention meets a far different state of things in regard to enforcement of fish and game laws will exist from what is reported from all parts of the province at present.

How Bellevillians Spent Labor Day

Labor Day Very Quiet in Belleville.

The old expression "Dead as a doornail," just about suited Belleville's case yesterday. Large numbers of our citizens were in Toronto; many others went to Napanee, and quite a number took in the Yacht Club regatta at Trenton. It is a long time since such a quiet holiday was seen in this city.

Good Day at Napanee.

The 11 and 12 o'clock trains going east yesterday were well patronized by Bellevillians who went to Napanee to take in the sports there, and those who went to that lively little town saw a very good afternoon's sport. There was a double-header ball game. Newburg beat Yarker, and then the winners played Picton, the "Pea Canners" galloping away with the victory, and they now, so they say, have the right to call themselves champions of the district.

The trotting races resulted thus:

Named race, half-mile heats.

Black Maud, W. H. Reynolds	1	4	1	1
Edith C., Chawley	2	3	2	2
Nellie G., D. Graves	3	1	4	4
Thurstey, W. J. Lyons	4	2	2	4
My Candidate, Dr. Benson	5	5	5	5

Time—1.11 1-4, 1.14, 1.14, 1.12.

Free-for-all.

Deveres, Jas. Powell	1	1	2	1
Minnie Keswick, G. W. Curtis	2	2	1	2
Muriel Wilkes, Coyle & Coyle	3	3	3	3
Starkey, E. Francisco	5	4	4dr
Maud Wilkes, D. Lake	4	5	5dr

Time—2.20 1-2, 2.18 1-2, 2.19 1-2, 2.21.

2.40 class, 1-2 mile heats—

Iris K., E. Taylor	1	1	2
Jim K., L. Ketcheson	2	3	1
Dio Dee, J. Anderson	3	2	4
Lady Hamburg, Ashley Stock Farm	4	4	3

Time—1.07, 1.09, 1.07.

The finish of the last race was postponed till this morning, it being too dark to finish.

The final heat of the unfinished race was trotted this morning, Iris K. winning, Jim K. taking second money.

The Trenton Regatta.

Belleville boats had a good day of it in Trenton yesterday, where the Trenton Yacht Club held their annual regatta. Incidentally it may be stated that the said regatta was a large-sized success. In the dinghy class the Belleville boats had things pretty well their own way. The Jack L., sailed by Mr. A. R. Wallbridge, was first; Skiddoo, F. Wallbridge, was second, and a Trenton dinghy third. There were several other starters, including Jones' and Rathbun's dinghies and Trenton boats which did not finish. The "Jack L" is a new dinghy, just completed by Jack Roblin, of this city, and was put in the water for the first time yesterday just in time to enter the race. In fact the boat is barely ready as yet, not having her own sails or rigging made. She was well handled by Mr. Wallbridge. The Jack L. carried off a handsome silver cup, which will be placed on exhibition in this city. Mr. Roblin is naturally very proud of the success of his new creation.

Several other Belleville boats took honors, namely;

The Yoda, owned by H. Jones, was second in Class B.

The Crusoe, owned by W. Allen, was third in Class C.

The Larue, owned by the Larue's, was second in Class C.

Fred Duesberry's Imp was first in the punt race.

Ed. Kellaway, of this city, won the swimming race.

Take it all round, Belleville sailormen have no kick coming on the showing they made in Trenton yesterday.

A Child Dead

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Adam H Marvin, Herchemer St., will sympathize with them in the death of their infant son, James Arthur Marvin, who died on Sunday morning, aged 10 weeks.

Schools Reopened.

The schools of the city reopened this morning, with a fair attendance. In most of the schools the pupils were "given their seats" and allowed to return home, there being no session in the afternoon. To-morrow the schools will get down to business in earnest, the cool weather being hailed with delight by both teachers and scholars.

LAKE SHORE SPIRIT.

Throughout the entire length and breadth of the great Lake Shore Railway System there is a spirit of co-operation and personal responsibility on the part of employees from the highest to the lowest that is reflected in every detail of the road's operation. The traveller feels that the great army of trained workers have his welfare and comfort at heart as much as though he were the only patron of the road. This spirit—the Lake Shore spirit—is one of the features that have made this line so popular among experienced travellers. Comfort, speed, safety and punctuality here have reached their highest development. Write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O.; or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, and tell the agent to have your ticket read "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway."

The Bay Bridge On Fire Sunday.

NOT KNOWN HOW BLAZE STARTED BUT CIRCUMSTANCES LOOK SUSPICIOUS.

Mr. Garrison, who has charge of the bay bridge, was startled about 12.30 o'clock last Sunday by seeing smoke and flames coming from the northern end of the bridge. Speedy investigation showed that the structure was on fire between the fourth and fifth piers, counting from the Hastings side. Mr. Garrison and his helpers speedily got busy and soon had the fire under control. New planking, to replace the burned boards, was put down, and traffic was resumed in about three and a half hours. To-day all that marks the scene of the fire is about fifty feet of new planking.

Mr. Garrison does not care to risk an opinion as to how the fire started. It may have been caused by a cigar stub—he don't know. Asked if he thought it was incendiary he did not care to give an opinion. The bridge was on fire and they put it out; that's all.

A suspicious circumstances in connection with the matter is the fact that, at 9 o'clock on Sunday night, the bridge was again discovered to be on fire, this time in a spot considerably further north than where the first fire occurred. Mr. Garrison does not think the second fire could possibly have been caused by sparks or ashes from the first fire, because they would have noticed it, he says, when fighting the first conflagration.

Asked if there were any suspicious circumstances, that he saw, Mr. Garrison said two men in a boat had been seen around under the bridge on Sunday, but there may have been nothing wrong in that. Men in boats were common around the bridge.

The damage will not be very heavy, and the bridge, where the burned planks have been replaced by new ones, is now better than before the fire.

Was Down In Maine

Rev. R. H. Leitch returned to the city on Saturday, after a few weeks' pleasant and profitable trip into the State of Maine, visiting Portland, Old Orchard, Madison and Skowhegan, where his brother is the Methodist minister. From here the electric railway runs out near to North Anson Camp Ground, a distance of 12 miles, one of ten Methodist Camp Grounds in the State, and its history dates back nearly 40 years. There are scores of cottages and tents and all well inhabited for a week, or more. The influence of this one was most inspiring. Mr. Leitch has much to say in favor of the prohibition State. Fine hotels, no liquor sold publicly or legally anywhere and prosperity everywhere.

Band Concert To-night

Weather permitting, the regular Victoria Park concert will be given to-night by the I. O. O. F. band. J. M. Denmark, bandmaster, programme selected.

Gave Past Grand Master Costly Gift.

At the recent meeting of the True Blues Grand Lodge, held at St. Catharines, a pleasant event took place in which Belleville people are interested. A committee of the delegates was appointed to secure a suitable testimonial to Bros. Jas. Worrell, Past Grand Master. On Tuesday the delegates presented Bro. Worrell with a gold ring, suitably engraved, also a silver cream pitcher and sugar bowl to mark his 36th birthday. The Past Grand President of the True Blues has many friends and relatives in this city, who will feel glad that his earnest efforts to advance the interests of the True Blues have been suitably recognized.

Especially For Women

FRUIT-A-TIVES are the finest medicine in the world for women.

As a mild and gentle laxative—as a positive and speedy cure for Constipation and Biliousness—as the only cure for weak and irritated kidneys and especially for "that pain in the back"—as a positive cure for headaches—and as a general tonic to build up and invigorate the whole system — FRUIT-A-TIVES stand supreme.

In cases of irritated Ovaries, Ovarian Pains, Vaginal Catarrh, Excessive and Scanty Menstruation, Ulcerations, Bearing Down Pains—and all those troubles peculiar to women—have the most remarkable effect.

Fruit-a-tives

Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of Female Troubles are due to neglect. Bowels become constipated — kidneys irregular — skin neglected — and the poisons of the body, which should be carried off by these important organs, are taken up by the blood carried to the female organs and poison them, thus starting up a train of female troubles.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are made from fruits and by their remarkable action on bowels, kidneys and skin, rid the system of poisons, purify the blood, and restore the delicate organs of generation to new vigor and health.

No woman, who suffers, should ever be without them. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50, at your druggist's or sent postpaid by London, Sept. 3.—Cattle are quoted at 10c to 11½c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 9c to 9½c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 11c to 15½c per lb.

TORONTO JUNCTION LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 46 carloads, composed of 967 cattle, 13 sheep, 1 hog and 1 calf.

The quality of fat cattle was, with the exception of a few loads, not good, but there were a few choice lots.

Exporters.

Prices ranged all the way from $4.35 to $5 per cwt., with only one load at the latter price, the bulk going at $4.45 to $4.75 per cwt. Export bulls sold at $3.50 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

There were few good butchers' cattle on sale—not enough for the requirements. The best lots were readily picked up at 10c to 15c per cwt. higher prices. Picked lots of steers and heifers sold at $4.50 to $4.65; loads of fair to good, $4 to $4.25; medium, mixed with cows, at $3.75 to $4.10; common at $3.50 to $3.70; cows at $3 to $4.25 per cwt.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Sept. 3.—(Special.)—Cables from Liverpool, all Canadian cattle were easier at 10¾c to 11c; ranchers, 9½c to 10c, while London advices were firmer at 11c to 11½c, and easier feeling prevails in the ocean freight market for October, November shipment and engagements have been made for the former at a reduction of 2s 6d to 5s under present rates asked. Exports last week were 4124 cattle, 31 sheep; shipments for August were 18,935 cattle, 636 sheep; season to date, 74,655 cattle, 6062 sheep; receipts to-day were 1300 cattle, 1000 sheep and cattle, 1200 hogs, 150 calves. There was an improved demand for for cattle, owing to cooler weather and a fairly active trade was done at steady prices. Choice calves were scarce and wanted at 4¾c; good, 4¼c to 4½c; fair, 3¾c to 4c; common, 3c to 3½c. Inferior, 2¼c to 2¾c per lb. Demand for calves for shipment to American market continues good and week of offerings were taken for that purpose at 5½c to 6c; sheep were quiet and steady, 3½c to 4¼c. Calves met with good sale at $2 to $10 each. Of the 1200 hogs received, 800 were bought in the west by two packing concerns and balance sold readily at $7 to $7.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

SPELLING REFORM.

The Phonetic Phenomena of the Word "Phenix."

They were talking about spelling reform and the idiosyncrasies of English spelling in general.

"There's that very word 'phonetic,'" said one of the men. "That's a sample of English spelling. The reformers call their system the 'phonetic system,' and yet they have to spell 'phonetic' with a 'pho' in order to let people know what they mean. The very word that means 'spelled as pronounced' is as far from it as possible."

"Now, now!" drawled his friend. "You're too hard on the good old English speller. You ought to be proud of 'phonetic.' Why, that word is so trimmed down and sawed off and cut short that I wouldn't know it was English if I met it alone on a blank page. You ought to thank the language for that word. It is a beautiful word. That 'pho' might have been spelled like 'dough' and the 'net' like 'ette' in 'rosette' and the 'ic' like 'liq' in 'liquor.' That would be a good old style English word—phoughnettelq. But it is coming! Phonetic spelling is coming! Look at the word 'phenix.' It is spelled 'phenix' everywhere now, and I remember it always used to be 'phoenix.' That 'o' has gone. That shows"—

"Nothing!" said the objector. "What does it show? That the phenix is a bird. Isn't the phenix a bird? Yes! Well, that round thing you say was an 'o' was an egg. That's all. 'Twas just an egg, and the phenix laid the egg. That's all."—Success Magazine.

THE ESKIMO.

He Has No Master and Is Absolutely Independent.

There are no chieftains in the Eskimo community. They all regard themselves as free men, with an equal right to hunt, fish, sleep and eat. Everybody shifts for himself. He is absolutely and unconditionally independent. His only ambition is to be a good hunter and to rear sons who will inherit his skill with lance and harpoon. He has helped himself against the elements for centuries, and the white man descending on his shores ostensibly to confer the blessings of civilization has never been able to improve his condition, but only to detract from the old time happiness and advantages of the aboriginal Eskimo community. The natural helpfulness of the Eskimo is the basis of the socialistic state in which he lives. He will risk his life to save that of another, even his enemy. He will share the spoils of the hunt with his neighbors. If his neighbor dies and his wife is left alone with children he will provide for her until she marries again. He does not slander or tell tales; he does not abuse any one, and he does not fight. He is a man of peace. He loves peace for its own sake, and his life is one long, laborious attempt at happiness for himself and his people.

How the Katydid Sings.

Everybody is familiar with the rasping notes known as the katydid's "song." It is the male only that is capable of emitting the well known sounds, and he does it in a most peculiar manner. His "vocal organs" are at the base of his wings and consist of two flat excrescences of thin, dry membrane. It is the rubbing of these two membranous plates together which produces the "song." If your shoulder blades were so loosely put together that one could be slipped under the other and the underside of one and the upper side of the other were so rough that the operation of slipping them past each other would cause a rasping sound you could imitate the katydid's musical efforts very nicely.

Why There Are So Many Smiths.

At the time of the adoption of surnames every artisan whose work required the striking blows on metal was known as a smiter or smith, and the community therefore had its blacksmith, whitesmith, goldsmith, silversmith, arrowsmith and several others of the same character. The number of Smiths of the present day may therefore be readily accounted for when we remember that each of the different kinds of smiths was as much entitled to the use of his trade name for a cognomen as any other artisan. John the blacksmith and John the coppersmith were both known as John the smith, an appellation which naturally resolved itself into the family name of John Smith.

A Charge of Cruelty.

From time to time unfounded charges of cruelty are made against nurses, especially those engaged in mental asylums. A striking instance occurred recently in the case of a nurse at a county asylum. She was on visiting room duty, and a newcomer was asking people who had been visitors for some time as to the treatment of the patients.

"Oh," was the reply, "they treats the poor souls cruel here. Why, they gives 'em a bath every week!"

Cynical.

"Pa, what is an optimist?"

"An optimist, my son, is a person who believes he will actually see a time when the law will be no respecter of persons."

"Will he be president when he sees that time come, pa?"

"No, my child; he will be in an asylum."—Baltimore American.

Will Never Spend It.

"Now that his father is dead I suppose Charlie will spend all his money."

"Oh, no; he gets married tomorrow."

And There Were.

"There are others."

"Yes, that's what the Mormon said when his wife died."

THE LOBSTER'S SHELL.

A New One Is Grown Before the Old One Is Cast Off.

Odd as it may sound to say so, the lobster grows before, not after, he casts his old hard shell—that is to say, he makes new cells and tissues, which are not at once filled out, but which are intended to swell to their full dimensions as soon as he has got rid of his binding and confining external skeleton. When the critical moment at last arrives a new soft shell grows entire within the older and harder one, and the animal then withdraws himself, leg by leg, claw by claw and swimmeret by swimmeret, out of the enveloping coat of mail which covers him. The shedding of the old coat is complete and absolute. Not a fragment remains. Even the apparently internal hard portions are cast off with the rest, for the entire covering forms one cintinuous piece, the interior portions being really, so to speak, folds of the skin inserted inward.

An entirely new skeleton had already grown within the old one, but exceedingly soft and flexible in texture, and the body becomes so almost fluid or jellylike—not in structure, but in power of compression and extension—that even the big claws are drawn out through the narrower apertures of the joints in a perfectly marvelous manner. After a longer or shorter period of muscular paroxysm the soft lobster at last disengages itself entirely from the dead shell and emerges upon the world a new and defenseless fleshy creature. The whole cask skeleton, unruptured in any part, but disengaged by lifting up the body piece where it joins the tail, looks exactly like an entire dead lobster.

A FORTUNATE MISTAKE.

The Result of Putting a Couple of Wires In Wrong Terminals.

A large number of the world's greatest inventions have been the result of some accidental union of forces the nature of which the person who started them neither understood nor suspected. The working of dynamos at long distances apart when properly connected was discovered by accident. A scientific journal says: "Soon after the opening of the Vienna exposition in 1873 a careless workman picked up the ends of a couple of wires which he found trailing along the ground. He fastened them in the terminals of a dynamo, to which he thought they belonged, while they were really attached to another dynamo that was running in another part of the grounds. The dynamo to which he fastened the wires was not running, but as soon as the wires were placed in its terminals it revolved as if a steam engine was driving it. The workman was amazed. The engineers and electricians were astonished by the discovery that a dynamo electric machine (turned by steam power) would turn another similar machine a long distance away if properly connected to it by electric wires. Thus originated one of the most revolutionary applications of electricity."

The fact that power can be transmitted for miles by electric wires is one of the most important factors in modern civil engineering achievements.

The Hymn That Fitted.

On the evening of the first Sunday after their removal from their house in the suburbs, which was the only home the children had ever known, to the top floor of a seventh story apartment house, the family gathered around the piano for the usual hour of song, each member in turn, according to time honored custom, requesting a hymn of his choice. When ten-year-old Marjory's turn came she said, "I think the most appropriate hymn is:

"I'm nearer my heavenly home today
Than ever I've been before.

"I think of it every time I come up in the elevator."

Fine Art In Show Windows.

It is a common error for dealers to put too many shoes in their window. In fact, some windows would lend the impression that the stock was in the window and the samples on the shelves. Said a shoe manufacturer who has traveled extensively: "One of the most impressive windows I ever saw contained but one shoe in each window. Each was a fine shoe, mounted on a standard in the center of the window. From this shoe red and white ribbons were draped in various directions, much like a sunburst. A small, neat sign told the story. Everybody stopped to look."—Shoe Retailer.

Mozart's Work.

Mozart lived thirty-seven years. His first mass was composed when he was less than ten years of age, and the enormous quantity of his compositions was the work of the succeeding twenty-seven years. Mozart wrote forty-one symphonies, fifteen masses, over thirty operas and dramatic compositions, forty-one sonatas, together with an immense number of vocal and concerted pieces in almost every line of art.

At Least a Choice of Worries.

"Do you think that wealth brings happiness?"

"No," answered Mr. Dustin Stax; "it doesn't bring happiness, but it gives a man a little bit of option about the kind of worry he will take on."

Badly Smitten.

"I wish there were ten days in the week," sighed Gladys.

"Why?" asked Grace.

"Jack could call oftener then."

Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character.—Lowell.

WON GOVERNOR'S PRIZE.

Won by Pte. Meade of Toronto With a Score of 186.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—The highest honor in the Canadian shooting world fell on Saturday to Pte. Meade of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, who won the Dominion Rifle Association Medal, which includes the Governor-General's prize. His score was 186.

Pte. Meade is 35 years of age. This is his fourth year at the D. R. A., but it is the first time he has won any competition. He is exceedingly shy, and took the congratulations that were showered upon him very modestly.

While Toronto provided the winner of the D. R. A. Medal, the runner-up also belongs to the Queen City. Pte. J. Leask of the Queen's Own was only one point behind.

The weather Saturday was of the worst for accurate shooting. The wind was strong and gusty, and veterans often found difficulty in even getting the targets. The result was that the D. R. A. Medal was won with 186 points, as compared with 195 last year. With the exception of this event, all other matches were won with higher scores than last year.

The Hon. Wm. Templeman and Lord Aylmer presented the prizes, after which the camp broke up for another year.

Japs Arrested For Seal Poaching.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 4.—A special to The Post Intelligencer from Seward, Alaska, says: Five Japanese have been arrested at St. George's Island, one of the Pribyloff group, by the Government agent, accused of poaching seals.

Canadian Geologists Scorched at Crater of Mt. Colima, Mexico.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—A despatch from Mexico City says:

"With their bodies severely burned by the fires of Mount Colima volcano, fourteen venturesome delegates to the International Congress of Geologists, which meets in this city this week, returned here Monday.

"The trip to the crater of the volcano was a perilous one, and had never been accomplished before by anyone.

"The party established camps at different points on the ascent, and made a certain amount of progress each day until the summit was finally reached.

"The volcano was pouring forth great volumes of smoke, but this did not deter the explorers from advancing to the very edge of the crater. A hot and sudden blast of fire from the depths below badly scorched their bodies, and they beat a hurried retreat.

"Frank M. Adams and A. Bancroft of Montreal and A. P. Coleman of Toronto were among the daring party."

Methods of Promoters.

How Mr. Ostrom Floated Monarch Life Insurance Co.

For His Policy Copyrights Witness Received $49,000 In Stock and $1,000 Cash—He Also Admitted Receiving $30,303.87 of the $60,000 It Had Cost to Get $162,114.35 Cash Receipts for Company Till May 31 Last.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—The Monarch Life Insurance Co. and its managing director, T. Marshal Ostrom, were before the Royal Insurance Commission all yesterday. The examination of Mr. Ostrom will be continued to-day, and it is probable that the president, D. A. Gordon, M. P., will also be called.

To the commissioners yesterday Mr. Ostrom stated he was the promoter (since 1904) of the company, which was licensed on July 19 last. Associates in the incorporation were Hon. James Cochrane, W. Scott, Dr. Gordon, M. P., Dr. Livingston and J. H. Graham.

For his copyrights, witness was to receive $49,000 worth of stock and $1,000 cash from the new company. This was made up of 1,400 shares of stock fully paid up to date, $14,000 10 per cent. call on $140,000 of capital stock, and $35,000 at the 25 per cent. premium.

Later on, there was an understanding that the provisional directors should divide $25,000 worth of stock.

Subscriptions had been obtained by Mr. Ostrom previous to the plans of incorporation on the 28th July, 1904, for which he received commissions later.

Took Two Years to Sell Stock.

Mr. Tilley wanted the reason why it took two years from incorporation on July 18, 1904, until the charter was obtained, on July 19, 1906. Witness answered that he was selling the required stock.

The prospectus of the company was taken up by Mr. Tilley, who could find no trace of the arrangements giving witness $49,000 worth of stock in the company. This was never put in any prospectus.

For the year previous to last April, witness had not sold stock in Ontario. He had operated mostly in Manitoba. Sale agents received $5 and $6 per share. A man named Stevenson was employed as stock salesman at a commission of $4.90 per share on contract. This contract was made with the petitioners for the charter. Stevenson was to pay his own expenses. He did not sell a share, however. Witness sold all the stock prior to incorporation, and received $3.50 per share. Stevenson got the balance, $1.40, under the terms of his contract. Stevenson got $4.90 on what his sub-agents sold. Witness also received $3,000.

Salary and Commission.

After incorporation witness was given $150 per month salary and $5 per share commission on all subscriptions. This lasted until March 21, 1906, when he was given a five years' contract. Besides $5,000 a year he was to receive $1 per $1,000 new insurance obtained. This was to be paid at the end of the second year. After his engagement with the company is terminated, on all premiums of insurance secured during the period of his management he is to receive $1 per $1,000, also commissions on new business.

This contract was signed by the president and the vice-president, on the advice of Mr. Ostrom's solicitor, Senator Kerr.

Mr. Tilley was anxious to know what course the company would have to pursue to get rid of Mr. Ostrom as manager. The contract read that anything against him must be "proved in open court."

Commissioner Kent: Could you be dismissed for anything short of murder?

Witness (laughingly): Oh, yes; if I started to drink they could dismiss me.

Got Half of Cash Receipts.

Mr. Ostrom is promoter of the Monarch Bank. A man is selling the stock and witness is getting a commission on all stock sold. Stock in the Monarch Life Insurance Co. was issued at 25 cents premium. Several of the permanent directors were not qualified to act under the charter. Dr. A. H. Perfect of Toronto Junction had paid nothing on his stock, nor had Andrew Carruthers, another director. Up to May 31 the total cash receipts of the Monarch were $162,114.35. To get this money it cost $60,000. Of this $60,000 witness admitted that he received $30,303.87.

Witness held 2,000 shares of stock. He paid up $10,000; $6,000 for stock and $4,000 for premium. He owes nearly $11,000 for premiums on 60 shares. The remaining 1,400 shares were handed over for the copyrights.

Witness had received transfers for these shares in a peculiar way. These transfers were scattered all over two transfer books.

Could Not Produce Transfer.

"No bookkeeper would write transfers in that manner without instruction," said Mr. Tilley, but witness denied knowing anything about that. When asked for the transfers he could not produce them, although the Commissioner had ordered him to bring them.

Mr. Tilley pointed out that the stock certificates produced by the witness were not complete, and Mr. Ostrom promised to produce the rest, which, he admitted, were not completely signed.

The certificates produced were signed by Vice-President T. H. Graham, not by President Gordon. There were blank certificates signed by the latter, but these were not used, as they were wanted for other people. Mr. Ostrom intimated that he did not want these ready-made ones; he wished the signer to know what he was signing.

In the books, the allotment of 1,400 shares to Ostrom by his copyright was cancelled by a pen stroke, re-entered later, and again similarly cancelled. He said it was probably the bookkeeper's error. He knew no other reason.

Certificates In Winnipeg.

At the afternoon session Mr. Tilley went into the permanent copyright. These were at Ottawa and stood in Mr. Ostrom's name. The agreement March 9, 1906, was referred to.

"What has been done to put the copyright in the hands of the company?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"Everything," answered witness. "The company are using those policies to-day."

Mr. Tilley wanted to know the value of these copyrights and witness explained that value could not be put on them. The first month the business of the Monarch Life amounted to $180,000, at a cost of 50 per cent.

The issue of the $140,000 of stock referred to in the morning was put back on the books about April 12.

Some of the stock certificates were produced by witness and examined. Witness said that he had left many certificates in the vault at the C. P. R. Hotel in Winnipeg.

Mr. Tilley asked if they were signed by President Gordon. Witness answered in the negative.

Directors Were Ignorant.

Counsel spent over an hour reading the reports of directors' meetings, revealing the fact that the shareholders and directors were ignorant of the way witness had obtained the transfers.

At a meeting of the directors in Win-

Motor Omnibuses.

The licensing of a company to operate motor omnibuses on the streets of Toronto brings within local interest some remarks of which this class of vehicle was the subject in the House of Lords a few days ago. The Marquis of Granby asked if the Government's attention had been called to certain correspondence in the newspapers in relation to the noise annoyance and injury which most omnibuses were said to cause in various parts of London, and he desired to know what steps the Government proposed for the mitigation of the nuisance. He said that within the last few days the press had revealed a strong movement of public feeling with regard to the general management and control of the working of motor vehicles, and that he had received several remarkable communications from persons whose property and health had been affected by the careless method of handling motor omnibuses. In the matter of noise, he maintained, there was great room for regulation. Some machines groan, others whine, others wail. These sounds, said the Marquis, keep up a disturbance that is trying to the nerves of the residents, and is especially bad for delicate or sick people. He ventured the opinion that the smell and dust were likewise a cause of loss to owners of houses, as these nuisances would drive away many tenants who could not suffer the noise. "A thick blue blaze hung round many motor omnibuses. This, added to the oil drippings, led to a condition of the streets which could not be contemplated with satisfaction." The third ground of complaint was as to the method of handling the omnibuses, by which there had been considerable injury to property, and even loss of life. He urged the Government to take the matter up, and bring the vehicles under regulation. He suggested that a special police department be placed under an expert to watch the working of motor traffic within the metropolitan district.

Lord Montagu of Beaulieu thought the Marquis of Granby had somewhat exaggerated the objectionable features of motor omnibuses. The four evils complained of, — noise, smell, speed, dust — were, he said, in process of being remedied. He admitted that the speed was sometimes excessive, but from his own observation he would say that this was oftener the fault of passengers than of drivers, for most passengers like high speed and take pleasure in a race. The blue smoke given off in consequence of over-lubrication would, he said, soon be a thing of the past, as automatic oiling will shortly be the rule. As to the noise, he had to confess that it was a serious fault of the omnibuses, and he said that something would undoubtedly be done to lessen it. Dust — at least, the most unsanitary dust—will according to Lord Montagu's comforting assurance, disappear when the horse and his refuse have vanished from street traffic. He pointed out, however, that the horse is going faster that some people suppose. Though motor omnibuses have been in London only a little more than two years, there are now 560 in operation, and there are between 800 and 900 more ordered. Several omnibus companies have decided to replace the whole of their horse-propelled vehicles by mechanical power cars. As between 380,000 and 420,000 people are being carried every day on the motor omnibus, Lord Montagu considered it would be very unwise for the Government to go far in the way of hampering this new means of rapid transit. Earl Beauchant advised that the report of the Royal Commission on Traffic and the report of the House Special Committee on Cabs and Omnibuses be awaited.

PROMPT CONNECTIONS.

There is one feature of the wonderful service over The Lake Shore Railway that particularly appeals to those who travel much. The schedule is so arranged that connections, where any are necessary, are made promptly and long waits and delays are avoided. This, taken in connection with the luxurious trains, perfect personal service, highest speed, safety and punctuality has made the Lake Shore the most popular line in America. Careful travellers see that their tickets read "Via Buffalo and the Lake Shore Railway." For full information concerning rates, routes and service address J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

The new French day of rest law went into force on Sunday, with the result, as described in the dispatches, that things went on very much as usual, shops, restaurants, etc., doing business. The beautiful weather, fine and cool, is sending people away from the summer resorts. The tide of travel, as the Montreal Witness says in a well-written article, now is homeward. With September begun, and the schools all opening, the joys of summer in the country have been brought definitely to an end, and every train entering the city brings its load of homecomers. On Saturday, and yesterday particularly, the stations were choked with the streams of be-gripped and be-satchelled travellers, the face of everyone telling the story of rest and play somewhere out of the city. The mother with her flock of little ones is in the majority with the homecomers. Stout, impatient fathers pace the station and hurry back and forth before the arrival of the trains, waiting to welcome and take charge of the family group on its arrival. When the train stops and the little flock catches sight of him, there is a race and the father becomes lost in a mixture of small arms that wind themselves indiscriminately about any part of his person that is most convenient. The young business man homeward bound pushes by the group with energetic step, his arms loaded with grips and fishing rods and other insignia of sportsmanship. He dashes at an acquaintance and begins his story. 'I caught the biggest trout—' Then there is the summer girl, with her jolly laugh and her sunburned arms, wishing good-bye to a broad-shouldered, bronzed young man, who seems to find some joy of living die out as he hands her over to her father. The returning school teachers are unmistakable, for some of their pupils are sure to be there to recognize them. And —yes, there is grandfather and grandmother looking as bright and happy as any of the rest of them. The only people who seem to find life a burden are the railway officials, who are somewhat recovered to-day, but who yesterday had one of the busiest times of their lives with trains crammed to the doors with passengers and luggage.

A Good Showing

During the fiscal years which closed on June 30, 1906, 214,877,077 pounds of cheese, valued at $24,300,916, were shipped to the British markets. The amount of cheese shipped was practically the same as during the previous year, but owing to higher prices paid the value increased by $1,126,697.

The total amount of butter shipped was 32,904,990 pounds, valued at $6,802,003. This was 2,914,321 lbs. more than last year, and an increase in value of $1,223,004.

The sales of Canadian eggs totalled 2,688,977 dozen, valued at $448,463. This is a decrease, for during the previous season 3,352,485 dozen eggs, valued at $660,010, found their way to the British market.

The value of Canadian bacon sent to the British market was $11,563,619. The quantity was 98,173,242 pounds, as compared with 116,705,175 pounds, valued at $12,180,817 during the year 1905.

The wheat shipments were $6,027,692 bushels, as compared with 11,280,407 the previous year.

Canned meats valued at $1,349,880 were sent, as compared with $3,525,270 in 1905, a considerable falling off

The cattle trade was about the same, 116,278 head, valued at $11,079,056, reaching the British market.

From the Flowery Kingdom.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Hoste, of Shanghai, are expected to arrive in Belleville this week, and will spend some time at the Marchmont Home, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Hoste being Mrs. Wallace's sister. Mr. Hoste is the General Director of the China Inland Mission, in succession to the founder, the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. The China Inland Mission began in a very small way in 1865, and is now the largest mission in China, having over 850 missionaries. It is an international and interdenominational mission, the members being drawn from all countries, and belonging to all the evangelical denominations. Mr. W. S. Horne and Miss Craig, both of Belleville, have been members of the mission for a number of years. The distinguishing feature of the China Inland Mission is that it makes no appeals for funds, and has no collectors; the money to sustain this vast work all these years has been sent in through the post day by day in answer to prayer. In this materialistic age, the C. I. M. is a standing proof of the reality of a God who hears and answers prayer and supplies the daily need of His people according to his promise.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoste have been on furlough in England, and, after spending some time holding meetings in various parts of Canada and the States, expect to sail for China in October.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ROBERT McCONNELL.

On Saturday morning about nine o'clock, Aug. 11th, Mrs. McConnell, beloved wife of Mr. Robert McConnell, of the 4th concession of Tyendinaga, died very suddenly of heart failure She was esteemed not only by her friends but by all who knew her: the good Lord our Heavenly Father, thought the tie of affection of a loving wife and mother must be broken and called her to Himself. She was a daughter of the late Isaac D. Fox, of the township of Tyendinaga, and was 34 years ago married to Mr. Robert McConnell. She was 61 years of age, and for many was a member of the Methodist Church. The surviving members of the family, besides a loving husband, are four daughters and two sons to mourn her loss. Mrs. Ed. Provins, Deseronto; Mrs. John Rollins, Plainfield; Robert, of Wycliffe, B. C.; Maggie and Jennie, of Belleville, and Isaac at home.—Com.

The Simple Life Best.

Minneapolis Journal: The San Francisco board of health reports that the city is more free from contagious diseases than at any time in its history; also that the people as a whole seem to be in better health than before the disaster, While no reason is assigned directly, it is inferred that the out-door life enforced by present conditions is good for the people.

The report is a fine document in support of the plea for the simple life. It is natural to expect more illness and a higher death rate in a city where many thousands of people are thrown back upon primitive methods of living. After years and generations of a highly artificial existence, such a sudden change to shanties and tents with no "modern conveniences" might be counted on to produce epidemics and all sorts of ills. In spite of it all, they are cheerful and well.

The simple life is generally associated with the country, with fields and gardens and spacious woods. Our city life is so bounded with convention that we never think of the possibility of escaping its complexities. Children are reared in hot-house conditions, under glass and over steam radiators and hot-air registers, till the pure cold air fairly blights their tender bodies. We are enslaved by our comforts, and work our heads off for the sake of luxuries. It is only when hurled back by the forces of nature to primitive conditions that we realize the uselessness of it all, and the comfort that comes with plain living and free air.

A man makes allowances for his faults, even though his wife may be one of them.

Temper may be a troublesome thing, but you never mend matters by losing it.

The hold-up man's rule of three is "Put up, give up and shut up."

Want Ads. make it worth while to keep boarders.

Bad men are apt to make themselves scarce. Good men are already scarce

Charity begins at home, but it is apt to be out when anybody calls.

A new leaf is really the same old one with another turn.

There is great good sense in the Spanish saying that "through not spending enough we spend too much" This is "the Law and the Prophets" in the matter of store-advertising.

YOUR DISPOSITION.

It Is a Factor In Making or Marring Your Beauty.

There is no more potent beautifier than disposition. If those who spend time and money in an anxious pursuit of good looks at the hands of professional beauty makers would devote just a portion of this time to the cultivation of a beautiful disposition results would be even more gratifying.

A happy way of looking at life is the best eye brightener and a calm that defies disturbance the most potent complexion lotion.

It is said of a certain young actress that she has discovered beautifying possibilities in the reading of poetry. She selects a certain kind to produce the particular expression she wishes, but all good poetry she finds conducive to the cultivation of beauty.

It is perfectly true that our reading is reflected in our face. The thoughts produced by reading noble sentiments finely expressed are mirrored in our features quite as surely as are the less lofty emotions produced by poring over flabby, excitable, morbid or injurious reading matter.

If you don't believe this contrast the serene, thoughtful expression of a lover of good poetry with the face of one who habitually feeds on "yellow" literature.

What you read and what you think helps to make your disposition. And your disposition largely makes—or mars—your beauty.

KITCHEN COMFORT.

Have a Place to Rest While You Are Compelled to Wait.

Be sure to have an easy lounge or chair in the kitchen, where you may spend a few waiting moments between acts, as it were, in rest. If you cannot afford to buy a lounge especially for that purpose make one. This is easily done. Get two long boxes from the dry goods store. Place them end to end and nail together. Make a mattress and fill it with any desired materials. Shredded shucks are clean and excellent. Over this drape any kind of cover to suit the fancy. Be sure to get something that can be washed and ironed. Red and white bed ticking is pretty and desirable and never fades and when laundered looks as good as new. Make a pillow to match. Now, while you are watching the cakes, bread, pies and the like remember there is your lounge. Rest. Do not say you have no time. You have to wait for your baking to brown. Why not rest while you wait? You will be surprised how much refreshment you will gain even for one minute's relaxation upon this improvised lounging quarter.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Touching pimples with turpentine will often heal them quickly. Remove the cause by hygienic living.

Don't go for the medicine bottle until everything else has failed. Let nature, which means fresh air, do the work of cure.

An old fashioned remedy for sore throat that is said to be quite effective is a nutmeg worn on a silk thread about the neck. The nutmeg can be pierced with a redhot awl.

If a pan of sliced raw onions is placed in a room in which there is diphtheria they will absorb the poison and prevent the disease from spreading. The onions should be renewed every day.

For severe stomach ache wring a square of house flannel out of boiling water, fold into a soft pad, lightly sprinkle a small teaspoonful of turpentine over it and apply as hot as possible. This is also excellent treatment for chest colds.

Misdirected Energy.

Frances, a girl of thirteen, was destined by her mother to be a fine musician. While still a little child she was taught to read the notes and her tiny fingers were placed on the keyboard. Year in and year out the child was obliged to practice, and she acquired a measured amount of skill, but her playing was wooden and spiritless. In despair her mother said to her, "What do you expect to be when you are grown-up?"

The girl sighed. "When I am grown-up, mother, if I have a house of my own the first thing I shall do will be to order the piano chopped up for kindling wood. I want to be a doctor."

As time passed musical studies were dropped, and duly Frances went to the medical college. At last she was allowed liberty to grow in her own proper direction. She is a successful physician, treating nervous disorders with rare sympathy and understanding.—Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion.

Unjust Partiality.

Does any one know why it is that in a family where there is one child especially dowered with good looks the prettiest clothes are showered on this particular one and apparently most care lavished on their selection? That child would look well in almost any ordinarily presentable attire. It is the lanky boy or the girl lacking in grace who needs the physical and mental support of attire that covers deficiencies and brings out the good points that they obscure. Really intelligent selection of the child's clothes does exactly this and is responsible for all sorts of good results in his mental attitude, courage and good manners. Shyness is more often than not the result of an uneasy self consciousness that has been engendered by seeing that some other child is surrounded by more appreciation, and the too great attention lavished on the beauty is quite as harmful in its way.

THE CLOTHES BRUSH.

Do Not Use It Indoors If You Can Possibly Avoid It.

The brushing of dusty clothes in the living rooms of the household is opposed to cleanly sentiment, apart altogether from the evil to health, which, as the bacteriology of dust distinctly indicates, might easily be caused by the process. The imagination does not require to be stretched very far to realize that the clothes brush might be easily responsible for the dissemination of disease. Dust is rarely if ever free from micro-organisms, and among them pathogenic entities have been recognized. Dust is, in fact, an enemy to the human race, a vehicle of disease, and should everywhere and on every occasion, however trifling, be prevented as far as means can be employed to that end.

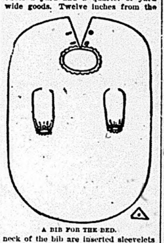
The clothes brush is a vigorous dust producing agent, and since its application is indispensable it should be used in a manner as far as possible consistent with hygienic requirements. Clothes, of course, must be brushed, just as carpets must be beaten, but both processes create a nuisance which is different not in kind, but only in degree. Just, therefore, as there are grounds reserved for the beating of carpets remote, as they should be, from human habitation, so also ought there to be in a household conducted on hygienic lines a special room relegated to the brushing of clothes.

The daily clothes have a large capacity and a singular affinity for dust, which may contain the seeds of a common cold or a sore throat or even of blood poisoning and tetanus, so that the suggestion that the clothes brush should be handled in a less indiscriminate way than is usually the case can hardly be regarded as chimerical. If dust has been proved to be pathogenic the scattering of it broadcast by means of the clothes brush must be a violation of hygienic principles.—Lancet.

A BED BIB.

It Ought to Prove a Source of Comfort to Invalids.

To avoid the discomforts arising from crumbs when confined to bed I have large bibs made of shrunken India linen, bound with the lawn bias binding that comes in all shades and washes perfectly. These are large enough to completely cover my shoulders and the turn over part of the bed clothes. The amount of material needed is a yard and a quarter of yard wide goods. Twelve inches from the neck of the bib are inserted sleevelets fourteen inches long. Through these the hands are slipped, the cuffs being large enough for that and nothing more. When meal time comes the bib is fastened around the neck, I slip my hands through the cuffs, the skirt of the bib is spread over me like a napkin, and I am ready, with no fear that a solitary crumb will creep into the bed to make me miserable or force my nurse to remake the bed.—Good Housekeeping.



A BIB FOR THE BED.

Keeping Figures Shapely.

A woman who leads a very active life has a theory that the preservation of a good figure depends to some extent on the manner of walking. Many people, she says, as they advance in years allow themselves to walk heavily and without elasticity, so that the whole weight rests on the lower part of the limbs at every step, the only effect of exercise being weariness in the legs and feet, says the Chicago News. Instead of this the body should be held erect and poised so as to have a perfect balance. In this way the muscles are braced and strengthened throughout and the lungs must of necessity be well expanded.

Washing Soda.

The average housewife looks askance at washing soda. It ruins both colors and hands, yet it is useful. Very dirty or soiled linen may be cleaned by boiling in fairly strong soda water. A little soda dissolved and added to the bluing water prevents streaking. A good bleacher is made by boiling one pound of soda in a quart of water. Add a packet of chloride of lime, strain and bottle, and discolored doorsteps and tables that are a bad color may be cleaned with the fluid. Well brush over and leave for the night, when wash well off in the morning.

Serving at Dinner.

The question of who is served first is a somewhat disputed one. A hostess who is older than her guests should be served before them, but when she is younger it is more courteous to serve the guests first. The idea of serving a hostess first is that where elaborate dishes are passed it is better for her to take the initiative in helping herself and also that she may observe that all about the dish is correct, but in general entertaining it is better to have the women guests served before the hostess.

BLOOD DISEASES

Guaranteed Cured or No Pay.

If you ever had any constitutional, acquired or hereditary blood disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been removed from the system. You may have had some disease years ago, but now and then some symptom alarms you. Some poison still lurks in your system. Can you afford to run the risk of more serious symptoms appearing as the poison multiplies? Beware of mercury or mineral drugs used indiscriminately—they may ruin the system Thirty years' experience in the treatment of these diseases enables us to prescribe specific remedies that will positively cure all blood diseases of the worst character, leaving no bad effects on the system. Our New Method Treatment will purify and enrich the blood, heal up all ulcers, clear the skin, remove bone pains, fallen out hair will grow in, and swollen glands will return to a normal condition, and the patient will feel and look like a different person. All cases we accept for treatment are guaranteed a complete cure or no charge.

Reader if in doubt as to your condition, you can consult us FREE OF CHARGE. Remember the old adage, "a stitch in time saves nine." Beware of incompetent doctors who have no reputation or reliability. Drs. K. & K. have been established over 27 years. You can pay after cure.

MINING FOR RUBIES.

The Primitive Methods That Are Still In Use In Burma.

The system practiced for obtaining rubies in the mining districts in Burma is of the most primitive description, says the Searchlight. The mining shafts are simply holes about two feet square sunk to a depth varying up to fifty or sixty feet. The shoring up of the walls of the shaft is most crude, the sides being supported by posts at the corners and branches of small trees secured carefully against the sides by means of stout sticks.

The miner carries a tin pot similar in shape to a blunt edged cone on his head. He squats down in one corner and digs between his knees in the opposite corner. The earth, or byon, as the ruby bearing earth is called, is conveyed to the top as fast as it is excavated in small buckets let down from above.

The apparatus for raising and lowering the buckets is simple in the extreme. A stout bamboo post about twenty feet high, called a maungdine, is fixed upright in the ground at a convenient distance from the pit, or dwin, and a long, thinner bamboo pivoted horizontally into the upper end of it so as to project an eighth from the mine and the long arm toward the mine.

In Dresden 300 years ago "epicures" used to eat Venetian oysters that had been on the way three weeks.

Foods That Make You Fat.

Potatoes, peas, baked beans, fats, sweets—such as puddings, pies and cake—ale, beer, sweet wines and even water, when taken with meals, all conduce to obesity. But in lieu of the foregoing flesh producers one may satisfy hunger with a moderate amount of lean meats, poultry, fish; with fruits (excepting figs, dates and bananas) and with vegetables, such as spinach, string beans, eggplant, celery, beets, etc. I would recommend also that those overfat from a too rich and too generous diet abstain from much liquid at meals, but that they drink copiously of water between meals to flush their systems. Water, be it remembered, is an excellent purgative.—G. Elliot Flint in Outing.

Not Buried Yet.

"There has never been any decisive action on that bill you introduce year after year."

"No," answered the statesman. "That bill has been of such value in giving me prominence that I should rather regret to see it removed from active controversy and buried in the statute books."

His Exact Meaning.

Bellefield—What did you mean by saying that Spiffins was a man of rare intelligence? That isn't the way in which he is usually regarded. Bloomfield—I mean that his gleams of intelligence are so far apart as to be very rare indeed.

What the "Canada Lancet" says about Abbey's Effervescent Salt.

"Many physicians of Canada are now prescribing ABBEY'S SALT. It is particularly useful in cases of obstinate Constipation and chronic liver trouble. It is especially effective in kidney trouble. It corrects acidity of the stomach, making it a specific in certain forms of dyspepsia and in gout and rheumatism.

We consider Abbey's Salt absolutely the best effervescing salt made in any country."

A FINE VESSEL.

(Pittsburg Post.)

A first-class ship for an ocean trip,
Was the good ship "Mary Jane."
She had a roof that was waterproof
And so she feared no rain.
Her stalwart crew was staunch and true;
For work her men were keen,
They washed her stoop with a merry whoop
And kept her front steps clean.

O, large and cool was her vestibule
And well adorned with shrubs
Her halls were light, and trim and tight
Were her stationary tubs.
Her iron front fence was just immense—
'Twas extra strong and high,
Her drains were sweet, her garret neat
And her cellar warm and dry.

Her fire escape was quite shipshape—
Braced up for any test,
Her flues were wide and lined beside
And her plumbing was the best.
O, a better boat was ne'er afloat
Than the good ship "Mary Jane,"
All staunch and stout, improved throughout,
Long may she plough the main!

Last year Canada bonused iron and steel industries to the extent of $3,088,407. Some outsiders will think the Dominion a rather poor place when industries must be paid to that extent to keep their wheels turning. Others will think Canada a strong country to be able to carry such a load without staggering. It all depends on the point of view.

The late head of the world-famous Krupp gun industry was a utilitarian of whom John Stuart Mill might have been proud. Every member of the Krupp family, including the two sisters, have been made to learn a trade. Bertha is an accomplished dressmaker and is said that much feeling was caused in the Esson district because, instead of buying her wedding trousseau from German dealers, she has made most of it herself. An object lesson for millionaires.

The Earl of Wemyss celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday last Saturday. He was born before Queen Victoria, yet he found himself on such good terms with life that he married a second wife the year before Her Majesty's death. Whatever Lord Wemyss tackles he tackles energetically, and it is to his perennial enthusiasm that the volunteer army has outlived its early fame as "Saturday to Monday soldiers" and become something well worth a possible invader reckoning with. For fifty years he has been a volunteer, and he can remember days when drill was not what it should have been. Once he was taking the corps he commanded up Fleet St., and presently gave the order, "Right wheel!" The volunteers did not understand, and began to get into a rare tangle. In another second Lord Wemyss saw the corps would be in a hopeless wreck, so, metaphorically throwing his drill book to the four winds, he roared out, "Damn it all, turn up Fetter Lane!" The situation was saved.

THE BEST INDIA INK.

It Is Redolent of Musk, Bright With Gold and Very Costly.

"This india ink," said the clever Chinese art student, "has no more right to be called Indian than your American redskins have to that name, for india ink all comes from China, and India never produced a stick of it.

"Anhui, my own province, is the one where india ink is made. The best of the ink is kept at home for the use of the royal scribes and the official litterati. It is only the lower grade that is exported. This lower grade sells at wholesale in Anhui for $1,500 a ton.

"The very best grade of india ink, the kind rich with gold, is worth $75,000 a ton.

"The constituents of india ink are colza oil, pork fat, lampblack, glue, musk, gold leaf and the oil of a poisonous tree, the heng, which grows only in the Yangtse valley.

"After the admixture of the oils the lampblack, the fat and the glue, the resultant paste is beaten for many hours with steel hammers upon wooden anvils, and during that long beating certain quantities of musk and of gold leaf are added, the musk to give the ink perfume, the gold to give it luster.

"Afterward the ink is dried for three weeks in molds. The stocks are then decorated, the most artistic scribes gilding them with very beautiful Chinese characters.

"There is no ink worthy to be mentioned in the same breath with ours, an ink redolent of musk and bright with gold."—Exchange.

THE RESTLESS MORO.

He Is Never Happy Unless on a Marauding Expedition.

The Moro is brave to fearlessness, a born pirate and essentially a first class fighting man. He is never happy unless on a marauding expedition and stealing from his neighbors, friends and foes alike. The chief who is the most successful thief is the most respected and the most powerful among chiefs.

The Moro trades with his neighbors on market days in the various coins of the realm and foreign moneys. At other times he is a free ocean rover, extending his trading voyages as far north as the islands of Negros and Panay, south to the Celebes and Borneo and westerly to the Palawan. He is the most successful of smugglers, and a little act of piracy when chance offers goes without mention. The Moro is the most perfect of aquatic beings, the most skillful small boat sailor or large "prau" navigator extant. He can no more drown than can a fish. There is no record of a drowned Moro. He can dive to the bottom of the sea at depths of from twenty-five to a hundred feet for the valuable mother-of-pearl shell, and his life is largely lived at sea from infancy. Along the coast many of the Moro villages are built over the water.—Colonel Owen J. Sweet, U. S. A., in Harper's Weekly.

Importance of Hobbies.

For the well being and stable balance of every mind it is normally necessary that every man should have some pursuit which shall be unconnected with his business, which he must pursue with absolute seriousness. The hobby may be a game, it may be a collection of some sort (even stamps) or it may be some artistic achievement, and whether a man scarcely attains mediocrity even in it matters not at all, provided he pursues it with the fixed idea that nothing else in the world matters.—London Queen.

No Sleep For The Kidneys.

Old people are especially liable to Kidney and Bladder Irritation. The organs are weakened by age. This starts up inflammation—blood is not properly purified as it goes to the kidneys—and the bladder is unable to retain the urine properly. There is a constant desire to urinate day and night—and sound, restful sleep is unknown.

Bu-Ju

MRS. CHARLES J. CORBETT.

She Climbs Church Steeples and Flag Poles to Paint Them.

A woman as a steeplejack! Certainly that is one of the strangest occupations that ever appealed to feminine fancy, yet one that is followed regularly by Mrs. Charles J. Corbett of Camden, N. J.

Her friends assert—and the assertion has not yet been controverted—that Mrs. Corbett is the only actual successful female steeplejack in the world. She has certainly accomplished feats that for very daring put to shame the exploits of many men.

She helped to paint the exterior of the gas tank of the Public Service corporation at Trenton, N. J., and she has climbed hundreds of flag poles and church steeples in order to paint them.

MRS. CHARLES J. CORBETT.

For that purpose she climbed the 280 foot steeple of the Methodist church at Moorestown, N. J. Last year at Chester, Pa., she laid gold leaf on the iron of a church spire 350 feet above the earth.

"It is fun to swing with the wind in a little chair far above the street," she says. "I do the work principally because I can make $10 a day at it, but I really enjoy the sensation."—Philadelphia North American.

A Saving In Stockings.

The problem of how to keep women's stockings suspendered in place without tearing them has been solved, and now those who spent small fortunes every year on hosiery just because the garters tore them can spend the extra money in some other way. And incidentally silk—the real sheer kind in which a thread was always breaking and spoiling the whole stocking—can be worn now without any thought about the weave breaking.

In order to hold the stockings in shape and in place it has always been necessary to have them caught up well at the top, and the clasps used on the supporters in time break through the fine threads because of the strain, and the hose was then practically ruined, for it was a matter of but a short time after one break occurred before there were several other "runs." This could not be avoided even with the heavier lisle thread and cotton weaves, and in desperation women who have a fad for wearing costly hosiery sought ways to remedy the evil.

Now a scheme has been devised against tearing and "runs" by a theatrical wardrobe woman that has proved a success, and since she has been using it she declares that her hosiery has lasted three times as long, and in all the six months' experiment she has not had a single thread break at the top of even her finest stockings.

"I have found that by sewing carefully two pieces of stout ribbon about two inches square to the hem of each of my stockings, one on either side, the strain is no longer on the hose, but on the ribbon into which I fasten the clasps on the supporters. And the beauty of this device is that I can draw them up as tight as I wish and feel perfectly safe that the stockings will be free from 'runs' or a tear when I take them off."—New York Telegram.

Getting an Appetite.

"I'm just desperate about my husband," said the pretty, domestic little woman. "He has no appetite. I've tried everything in the market, and I load the table with the most tempting dishes I can devise, but he eats hardly anything."

"Starve him," advised the tall, handsome woman with the firm jaw.

"Oh, how dreadful!"

"Not at all; merciful. He's surfeited. I know by experience. When I first went to the apartment hotel where we live the menu was so attractive that I—well, I am ashamed to tell the number of dishes I ordered at every meal. Only for a short time, however. In two weeks I was just where your husband is. The sight of a menu card made me faint.

"Then I got an idea and cut right down to coffee and rolls for breakfast, a green salad and biscuits for luncheon, a roast and one vegetable for dinner. Try it. Your husband will soon have an appetite."—New York Press.

Mistaken Sympathy.

When to express sympathy or when to refrain from speech is always a delicate problem in intercourse with a friend in bereavement. And one of the difficult phases is to know whether to remember the sorrowful "anniversaries of the heart" by letter or token or to let the healing of silence help one's friend to live through the day bravely. "The house is full of flowers—funeral flowers they seem to me," wrote a grief stricken mother a year after her little one was taken away from her. It was a beautiful way to show loving sympathy, but the sore heart cried out even at this gentle touch. A lonely woman who had known many sorrows confessed in a moment of confidence that she wished a friend would not remember year after year a certain painful anniversary, says Woman's Life. "I try not to dwell upon these days myself," she said, "and that punctual pot of flowers brings the old pain back to the wound." The devotion was beautiful, but mistaken.

The Neck and Arms.

Get the idea into your head that bones are beautiful and you won't mind thin arms and a "swanlike" neck, even though it be over swanlike. Fat never yet made any woman beautiful. It is the way your bones grow and the way you carry your bones that give you a good figure. Because your arms are thin is no reason why you should hide them. God never yet made any woman without bones, so they must be all right. You can get the thin arms fleshened up a little by anointing with lanolin or cocoa butter. The same treatment will do for a thin neck. Vocal culture and cold baths will help.

To Bronze Furniture.

To apply gold bronze to furniture coat the surface with paint, japan spirit varnish or anything that will prevent suction, then where the bronze is wanted coat with gold size or quick drying varnish. When this is nearly dry, dust on the bronze powder with a soft brush or chamois skin. As bronze is susceptible to atmospheric influences it is better coated with a thin, even coat of transparent varnish. Of course gold leaf or Dutch metal would make a much better appearing piece of work and hold its color.

Points on Broiling.

Broiling produces the same effect on meat as roasting and can be performed in a more speedy manner. In handling lean meat for broiling be careful not to prick or cut it and so allow the juices to escape. Broiling must always be done over a quick, clear fire. The heat hardens the albumen on the outside quickly, thus preventing the escape of juice and rendering it savory. Chops and steaks should be turned with a knife and on no account have a fork stuck into them while cooking.

Yellowed Clothes.

To whiten clothes that have become yellowed in consequence of being laid away for some time soak them overnight in lukewarm water and, next morning wash in good clean suds, then put them in the wash boiler with cold water and some pieces of white curd soap and one teaspoonful of powdered borax. Boil for twenty minutes, rinse immediately and leave them for another night in clean cold water to which a little powdered borax has been added.

Children's Shoes.

If mothers when buying new shoes for the children would adopt the following hint they would find that they would last twice as long and also resist the damp: Procure some boiled linseed oil, pour it on to a large flat dish or tin and allow the shoes to stand in it for about twelve hours or until the soles are well soaked. This does not, however, apply to brown shoes.

A Register Hint.

So often people tell of the many things they have lost down their registers. Money, buttons and thimbles are sure to roll straight for the register. Place a piece of fine wire netting in the top of the pipes just below the register; then when anything is dropped into it all you need to do is to lift out your register and take out the articles.

Weak Ankles.

Weak ankles should be sponged night and morning with cold water in which a handful of coarse salt has been dissolved. Dry them and then rub them patiently for fifteen minutes. The muscles will gain strength under this treatment. You will soon begin to see an improvement and to feel it in their increased firmness under your touch.

Tapestry Covered Furniture.

To clean tapestry covered furniture first brush thoroughly; then add a tablespoonful of ammonia to a quart of water. Wring a cloth out of this and sponge thoroughly, rinsing and turning the cloth as it gets dirty, changing the water when necessary. This freshens and brightens it wonderfully.

Brass Bowls.

It is unwise to use too much brass or copper about a room or hall. It has a tendency to look shoppy. But just the right amount—a bowl or two here and there for plants—in hallway or room give an excellent effect which no other receptacle quite attains.

Oil painted walls must be washed with soap and water, using a soft flannel cloth, care being taken to wring it out well before using. Use cold water to finish and dry with a soft linen cloth.

Tablecloths that have become too much worn for use may be turned into breadcloths and silver polishers. For either purpose they are more satisfactory than anything else.

Do not drink a drop of water that has stood in a bedroom overnight, because it has absorbed the poison exhaled by the body.

An ounce of contentment is more beneficial to a woman's complexion than a pound of cosmetics.

WORKINGMEN'S BAND.

Famous Black Dike Mills Musical Organization of Yorkshire Coming to Canada Next Year.

Following the visits of several army bands from the Old Country, Canada is now to hear the premier prize band of Great Britain—the famous "Black Dike Mills Band."

The Black Dike Mills are situated in the village of Queensbury, which is perched on one of the hills surrounding the great manufacturing city of Bradford, Yorkshire. Here for a hundred years musical Yorkshiremen have cultivated the practice of instrumental music, and to such good purpose that the name of Black Dike is familiar as a household word from John O'Groat's to Land's End. For over fifty years the great firm of John Foster & Son, whose extensive mills cover fifteen acres, and employ nearly 3,000 workpeople in the manufacture of alpaca, mohair and worster stuffs, silks, seals, plushes, etc., have maintained the band in a state of great proficiency. The founder of the firm was himself an enthusiastic amateur on the French horn, and his descendants have prided themselves on keeping the band up to a standard of perfection beyond which it would seem impossible to go. The bandsmen are all employed in the mills, and all expenses of maintenance, tuition, etc., are borne by the firm.

Every Man an Artist.

The Black Dike Band is a brass band, and we would warn those whose notion of a brass band has been derived from the common or garden sort of brass band to beware of letting their prejudice keep them from hearing Black Dike, else they may never cease regreting it, for those who have not heard Black Dike or another British prize band of the first rank can have no conception of what a brass band can achieve in the way of artistic effects. There is nothing which Black Dike cannot play with consummate ease and grace. Every man is an artist, and their executive ability is marvellous. In no other kind of band is the executive ability of brass players developed to such an extent. There is not a man in Black Dike but would be eagerly snapped up by the finest army bands in England, were he available.

Heroic Music Its Forte.

But though they can play the airy strains of a Strauss waltz with the grace of an orchestra, it is in grand, heroic music that the band shines most. They have astonished the greatest musicians of England and have lifted brass band playing to the highest regions of musical art. When they treat Canadians to their grand selection from the works of Beethoven, Berlioz, Spohr, Rossini, Meyerbeer, Gounod and Wagner, we predict such an enthusiastic reception as no band has hitherto received here. The late Sir Arthur Sullivan, himself born and reared in an army band, was quite carried away by Dike's playing at one of the Crystal Palace festivals. "Wagner's 'Tannhauser' was magnificent," he wrote. "I was surprised not only at the tone, but at the fire and go of the performance. In this they excelled any band I have ever heard." And similar praise has been showered upon them wherever they have played.

Have Won Many Contests.

As a contesting band they have stood for fifty years at the head of the movement which has made such magnificent bands as the British amateur prize bands. They have won everything worth winning. They were first at the Crystal Palace (out of 169 bands), as far back as 1866. When this festival was recently revived Dike was first again after an interval of forty years. "Criticism is out of the question," said the judges. At the great Belle Vue contests, Manchester, they have been first on no less than eleven occasions. In 1882 they were debarred as being unbeatable, having won first prize for the third year in succession in 1881. Altogether they have won 100 first prizes against the pick of English bands. Even this does not emphasize their preeminence so much as the fact that at one period they won no less than seventeen first prizes at consecutive events!

The Veteran Conductor.

Mr. John Gladney, to whom primarily is due the great proficiency of the band, has been retained by Messrs. Foster & Sons as its professional teacher since 1888. Few Canadians who behold the alert figure of Mr. Gladney will imagine that he looks back upon nearly 60 years' career as a professional musician. But such is the fact, and there are few living musicians who can look back upon a career of such distinction. The son of an army bandmaster of considerable note, Mr. Gladney was born in 1839, and practiced music from the cradle. When only ten years old he played piccolo (his fingers being too small for the flute) in the band of the famous ill-fated Jullien. He sat on the knee of Koenig, and to this day holds that noted cornet player as the greatest of all time. He was petted by Bottesini, and made much of by the great Oboeist Barrett. Since then Mr. Gladney has been constantly in touch with the greatest European artists.

Bandmaster Bower.

Mr. Harry Bower, the resident bandmaster, is a product of the Black Dike Band, and a most accomplished musician. The Bower family have long held important positions in the Black Dike Mills, and have been connected with the band throughout its career. Mr. Bower's brother, Phineas, preceded him as bandmaster, and held that position for 21 years. Mr. Phineas Bower was a great euphonion player, second to none, amateur or professional, in his day. Pressure of official duties at the mills compelled him to retire from the band in 1895, and the band chose his brother, Mr. Harry Bower, to succeed him. How wise their choice was is proved by the ever increasing popularity of the band during the ten years he has been in charge. Mr. Harry Bower is a very brilliant cornettist; he is also a first-class musician, having thoroughly studied the theory and practice of music in various directions.

Thanks to the generosity of Messrs. Foster & Sons, the band is now able to gratify its long-cherished desire to visit America, and though Mr. Gladney is quite unable to give the band more than a molety of his services at home, Messrs. Foster have prevailed upon him to put his other bands aside for a time and to accompany their band across the seas.

ORDERING A CUP OF TEA.

Two Methods as Shown In Case of a Man and Woman.

Buying a cup of tea may be a tragedy or a comedy. Much depends on the sex of the buyer. This is the way a man buys it. He slides sheepishly into the shop, takes the seat in the draught of the door that everybody else has avoided, and says to the waitress, with a diffident smile:

"Oh, would you bring me a cup of tea?"

The waitress, who returns the smile, or does not return it, according to the rule of the establishment in regard to tipping, brings him his tea, slams it down, scribbles out a check, and sails away.

The man tastes the tea, finds that it is bitter from long brewing, slips out of his seat, pays the bill, and hurries away from the shop.

Now let us see how a woman buys a cup of tea.

She marches in with a little boy on one side of her and a little girl on the other.

"I want a table for three," she says, in the manner of one about to order a dinner at ten guineas a head.

"Yes, madam," replies the meek attendant. "Will you kindly step this way?"

"Mummy," says the little boy, when at last the party is seated and the attendant is waiting to take the twopenny order, "Mummy, why has that lady got a turned-up nose?"

"Want a scone," complains the little girl.

"A pot of tea for one," orders "mummy," "and would you mind bringing an extra cup, so that my little girl can have some milk?"

"One tea and one milk?" asks the attendant.

"No, thank you. I thought I gave my order quite distinctly. I want a pot of tea for one and an extra cup. That's all."

"Yes, madam," says the meek attendant, and drags herself away with the firm intention of becoming an actress, let the stage be what it may.

"Just one moment," says "mummy," when the tea is brought. "I should like to make sure that this is not too strong. Yes, it is much too strong. Will you let me have a pitcher of hot water, please? And I don't think you have brought quite enough milk." Half an hour later she marches proudly from the shop, having paid exactly the same sum for these privileges as the wretched man who could not swallow a mouthful and who sat in a draught.—London Sketch.

An Important Leper Experiment.

Important statements were made at the meeting of the governors of the London Hospital in regard to the opsonic department for the treatment of lupus.

The House committee's report stated that the work of the department was increasing. The governors were probably aware that it had been discovered that, by making certain tests of the blood, the patients' power of resistance against the disease of consumption could be measured.

These tests were, of course, made before the patients contracted the disease. If their power of resistance was found to be low, a means had been discovered of increasing that power, which would undoubtedly eventually be the means by which that dread disease might be stamped out of this country.

Lupus was caused by the same microbe. In the case of lupus, the bacillus attacked the skin, and in the case of consumption it attacked the lungs. It was a fact that the lupus patients had resisted all treatment by the Finsen lamp, having had as many as 600 sittings without effect, and in testing the blood of all these patients, the resistance was found to be so low that the patient undoubtedly got infected as fast as he got cured by the light.

Upon administering the new discovery and raising the patient's power of resistance, in every case the patients healed quickly and after a very few sittings.

The Hon. Sydney Holland, the chairman of the committee, said 100 cases were treated per day in the opsonic department.

A Legend of the Zulus.

The Zulus account for their origin by a story of a talking elephant who fed upon children. He met a women laden with an axe and bunch of faggots accompanied by her child.

Seeing the elephant, she guessed his intention, and pleaded: "Spare my child, O elephant!" The elephant refused. "Then," said the mother, "if this evil must happen, swallow me too, O elephant!" So the elephant swallowed mother and child, and they found themselves with all the other children, who were eaten previously.

By and by the child grew hungry, and the mother lit a fire with her faggots. She then, with her axe, cut away the elephant's flesh, cooked it, and they all ate. As the fire burned its great heat filled the elephant with pain, and he ran, and ran, and ran, till they felt the thunder of his hoofs racing over hill and valley.

At length, exhausted, he dropped down dead. Using her axe, the mother chopped until she made an opening in the elephant's side. After this they crept out, and became a new nation in a new country.—Country Gentleman.

A Plague of Rabbits.

A writer describes a plague of rabbits in Australia: "A farmer barricades himself in with miles upon miles of wire fencing solely to keep out the rabbits. They eat their way up to the barriers and in the fight for the green land within the wire they die in myriads. All round the inclosed land they lie in heaps of incredible size. Swarm after swarm follows on, and at last the heaps of dead are so high that the late comers make their way over the fence, and the farm is ruined."

His Own Inventions.

Lord Kelvin paid a visit to a British school ship for navigating officers at Portsmouth, on which are several mechanical contrivances and appliances of his own invention. The practical working of these had to be demonstrated and explained to him. Lord Kelvin understood the theoretical principles of the mechanism, but had never seen them applied and at work before.

BRITISH AND CANADIANS

CAME FROM POSTAL CONGRESS WITH NO MEAN TROPHIES.

Important Work at Rome—Nearing Penny Postage and a Universal Stamp—Dr. Coulter, Canada's Deputy P. M. G., Back From the Eternal City—Will Draw Up Report For the Government.

Dr. R. M. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General, is back at Ottawa, after representing the Canadian Government at the International Postal Congress in Rome.

Dr. Coulter has everything good to say of the arrangements made by the Italian Government for the success of the congress and the comfort of the delegates. As to the actual work of the "Postal Parliament," he will have nothing to say officially until his report goes in to the Postmaster-General. A very complete and accurate idea of the congress is, however, gathered from other sources.

In the first place this congress was a gathering of representatives of all the countries in the postal union, which means practically all the countries of any importance in the civilized world. The Chinese Empire and one or two other countries are still outside.

Hard Working Body.

The congress just closed lasted two working months or fifty-one actual days. An impression that these were days of leisure and sight-seeing for the two hundred odd delegates is a wrong one. Five and six hours a day in the hard labor of hammering out postal regulations of universal suitability leaves little time for hunting up souvenirs of Romulus, Remus and the wolf.

The first thing which the congress did was to follow the established rule of all legislative inaugurals, namely, appoint committees on the various knotty subjects for consideration. The committees in due course got down to work and — again in due course—reported to congress, where every delegate was free to express his opinion on the point at issue, whatever it might happen to be.

How did all these representatives of lands far apart make themselves understood? It wasn't a Tower of Babel, as might at first blush be suggested. The language used was the language of diplomacy, to wit, the French. Every delegate came provided with a smattering of French; at least the congress assumed that he did. It worked well enough. After the first few days the delegates were more and more independent of their French dictionaries. There was no other language spoken.

Five Years to Run.

Nine years ago the Treaty of Washington was concluded by the last postal congress. The treaty just reached in Rome has five years to run. This will give the postal union a chance to provide for new postal conditions without having to wait too long. After the Treaty of Washington the postal service of the nations in the union soared at a tremendous rate, because of the high tide of emigration, increased travel abroad and the general trade expansion. These things called imperatively for important changes in the international postal regulations. These changes have now been made, and what are found to be necessary in the future will be for the next congress in Madrid to consider.

Two Long Strides.

Before the recent congress at Rome there were two ideals. There was penny postage, and there was the universal stamp. Neither of these was realized, but the progress made was all in their direction. These two things particularly affect the Dominion of Canada.

It is made optional for any country in the union to reduce the letter rate by, in the first place, fixing an ounce weight where it is now half an ounce, and in the second instance, by bringing down a five cent charge to four. This means, in the multiple, a very considerable reduction, and this is declared to be a long stride in the direction of penny postage. It will be adopted as a matter of course by Great Britain and her colonies.

The fixing of a maximum weight of one ounce is expected to do away to a great extent with the woe of the recipient who has had to pay double postage on letters exceeding the present half-ounce limit. This was a concession specially desired by the British countries. It was stubbornly fought for in committee first, and then in the general congress. The opposition to it was very strong, and only on the last day and almost at the last minute was the congress finally persuaded to let the Britishers have their way. It was perhaps the biggest concession of any granted during the whole session of the "Congress of Rome."

Nearly the Universal Stamp.

The next change of importance from the British point of view was the granting of the right to issue coupons for return postage. This right, like that of the one ounce maximum, is an optional one, but will almost certainly go into effect so as to be a practical advantage to Canada. This change also was asked for by Great Britain. The idea is that any country in the postal union may issue coupons payable in a foreign country in stamps. In working out it will enable a merchant, say in Toronto, to send a letter to the French capital and send it with a coupon payable in stamps of the French republic, so that when his correspondent comes to reply he is provided with a stamp for the return letter. The actual difference between this and a system based upon the use of a universal stamp is not very great. There is a little more complication, but not much. Canadians may soon have an opportunity to test the scheme in practice, as it is quite possible and probable that these coupons will before long be obtainable at Canadian post offices.

Problem Too Knotty.

The Postal Congress adopted this proposal for a system of coupons, but could not come to an agreement on the universal stamp project. All sorts of proposals, devices and samples were before the delegates, but the question proved to be too knotty, as it had proved too knotty for previous congresses.

An international universal postage stamp and prepaid postage scheme had been passed upon before, and had been found impracticable. It was found impossible by the delegates at Rome, although, as already pointed out, the coupon system affords a partial solution. Against the use of an international stamp the congress found various difficulties. Under the present system there is no accounting between nations of the postage receipts on international correspondence. The letters of one country are transmitted and delivered by the country of destination without regard to the postage involved. If there was a universal stamp system an immense amount of accounting would of necessity have to be done.

Would Be a Muddle.

There would have to be some recognized authority in charge of the issue of the stamp. There is the International Bureau of the Postal Union at Berne, Switzerland, which could supply the stamps to all countries in the union, but the difficulty encountered at Rome was that each country would still be free to issue universal stamps within its own borders, but without regard to their destination. This would mean that each country would have to keep track of all the postage on letters sent from a foreign country. It would be a big increase in the work of the postoffices, and in the case of Canada would necessitate the employment of another batch of clerks in the Postoffice Department at Ottawa. The Congress of Rome thought that it wouldn't do.

United States Got Some.

Great Britain, and incidentally Canada, came away from the congress with no mean trophies, but there were other victors. The United States, after some hard work, secured one or two important privileges. They obtained the right to use the face of the picture postcard—half of it—for correspondence. Italy, Switzerland, Germany and some other countries have been doing this for a considerable time, but it has been forbidden in the United States. Uncle Sam went to the congress determined to get the concession, and after hard pulling did succeed in getting it.

Cut Down Transit Rate.

Much of the time of the congress was occupied in reducing what is known as the transit rate. This is the fixed rate per kilogral charged by an intermediate country on mails carried from one outside country to another. For example, when letters sent from "A" have to pass through "B" to get to "C," there is a transit rate charged by "B."

The congress at Rome cut this transit rate in half.

This was one of the big battles of the convention. Heavy transit charges have to be paid on the greater part of the mail originating in Europe for the American continent. The proposal was thus an important one. England and Germany did not oppose it, but every other European country did. They fought it in committee and on the floor of the congress, losing in the end by only two votes.

Australians Not Sore.

The next Postal Congress will be held in Madrid. The Spanish capital had extended an invitation. So had Melbourne, Australia. The convention was inclined toward Madrid, but the Australian Postmaster-General, Hon. Mr. Chapman, and his fellow-delegates put up a very strong canvas in favor of Melbourne. They finally forced the question to a vote and lost, but they did not, as some reports have said, take the verdict badly. They received the vote in good spirit, and the motion to make the Madrid movement unanimous came from them.

BRITISH ARMY TUNES.

Some Favorites For Many Years With Regiments.

British regiments are very jealous of certain tunes which tradition and association have connected with them "Dumbarton's Drums" has been the quickstep march of the Royal Scots for over two hundred years. The West Yorkshire Regiment claims "Ca Ira" as its march; the 1st Battalion Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, "One and All"; the Cheshire Regiment, "Wha Wadna Fight for Charlie?" in honor of Sir Charles Napier, who once commanded them; the Rifle Brigade, "I'm Ninety-five"; the Scots Greys, "The Garb of Old Gaul"; the 10th Hussars, "God Bless the Prince of Wales" and "Men of Harlech"; the 5th Lancers, "Let Erin Remember" and "The Harp That Once Thro' Tara's Halls"; the 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders, "My Pretty Brown Lass" and "The Relief of Lucknow"; and the 12th Lancers and 21st Hussars, "Cobourg." The Scotch, Welsh and Irish regiments of the British army are all partial to tunes of national extraction; and English regiments formed originally in counties the names of which they still bear have melodies applicable to the locality, and cling to them tenaciously.

Dodging a Landlord.

An amusing account was given in the Shoreditch County Court of how a man had for six months past cleverly evaded his landlord, until, as counsel put it, the landlord had become positively distracted.

Counsel (to the landlord)—How did he keep out of the way The Landlord—Used to come to the front windows, blow me a kiss, and walk out at the back. (Laughter.)

And did he remain a prisoner in his house during that time? Not a bit of it; he had gone to Ramsgate for a holiday, I heard. (Loud laughter.)

Then I believe you tried the ruse of a registered letter to get at him? Yes, but he's up to every trick. We intended to get in when he opened the door, but he would not do it, as he signed the receipt after it had been handed through the letter box (Laughter.)

A Chesterfield Retort.

When Lord Chesterfield was in his last illness and his death was only a matter of a few weeks, his physician advised him to go for an easy drive in his carriage, and he went out. As the equipage was proceeding slowly along it was met by a lady, who remarked pleasantly to the great invalid, "Ah, my lord, I am glad to see you able to drive out!" "I am not driving out, madam," answered Chesterfield. "I am simply rehearsing my funeral."

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

AGRICULTURAL.

Farm Hints for September.

Meadow Grazing.

As a usual thing grazing of meadows should be little practiced. At any rate there should be enough grass left to cover the roots well during the winter. Allowing the mowings to be closely fed in fall is a ruinous practice, and should not be permitted. The tramping of stock also works havoc on wet land. When there is a large growth of grass it can be partially fed to advantage, at least if there is a short ration of crops and the fields are in good condition. Where this is not the case the meadows should not be fed at all, but the second crop left for their benefit.

Potatoes.

Usually this crop should be secured by the last of the month, and especially the earlier varieties. There is little to be gained by allowing these or the later kinds to remain long in the ground after they become fully matured and the tops are dead. Some of the early kinds are liable to rot, more so than the late ones, and it will be better to have them out of the ground. They should be stored in a dry, cool cellar, or other suitable place, with not too many in a bin, and they will generally do well.

It the soil should be infested with insects and worms, as was the case last year, the sooner they are harvested after becoming fully matured, the better it will be.

It is well to grade the crop when digging. Sort out the small and inferior tubers and put where they can be fed to the stock.

It is an excellent plan to select the seed for another year while the potatoes are lying upon the ground. In this way potatoes from the best producing hills and of the proper size and shape can readily be selected and then properly cared for. Where this is done year after year the different varieties should be kept well up in yield and quality.

Where a farmer has a surplus for sale, if they can be delivered direct from the field at a satisfactory price, there will be a considerable saving in labor and some in shrinkage. This will apply more particularly to farmers having only a small quantity to dispose of. Those making a specialty of this crop may pursue different methods.

Seeding to Grass

may be done to advantage during this month, but the earlier it is done the better will be the chance for a good catch and a good crop the next year. On light and sandy lands winter rye is usually seeded with grass, and if not sown too thickly and if the rye can be cut early for fodder or hay, there will usually be a fair growth of grass; but it not unfrequently happens that a heavy growth of rye leaves the grass in such a very tender state that a spell of hot, dry weather coming directly after the cutting of the rye will nearly or quite destroy the tender grass.

The Market Gardener

will be busy this month marketing his tomatoes, pickling cucumbers, peppers and beans, sweet corn, squashes, onions, cabbage, cauliflower and early celery. Vegetables now always sell at very low prices, but their great abundance gives the pickling and canning establishments a chance to stock themselves and relieve the market of the surplus.

The market gardener will sow spinach and kale now for wintering in the field, and lettuce and radish to be transplanted into frames or glass houses later.

It is now quite time to repair and paint all glass structures and make ready for winter. The fine weather of this month gives the best opportunity for doing this work, which cannot be done well in the open air after the damper and cooler weather comes as it surely will a month later.

Poultry Keepers

will now kill off all unprofitable stock and repair and whitewash their houses so as to be ready for cold weather. There are a good many dollars wasted in feeding unprofitable birds at this season of the year; thin them out.

The Garden.

Lovers of flowers, as well as florists are in the habit of transplanting from the field at this time such plants as are wanted for winter flowering; either in a house window or greenhouse. After transplanting they will want some shading and plentiful watering until well rooted when they will bear full exposure to the sun. The tender plants, such as coleus, heliotrope, tea rose, etc., are taken first, then such as are wanted for early flowering, as chrysanthemums, pinks, etc., and later the more hardy violets, Jacqueminot roses, etc.

In order to make flowering plants thrive, attention must be paid to supplying a proper temperature. For tender plants, like tea roses, a warm house with heat from 60 degrees to 80 degrees or 90 degrees, for the hardier carnations and chrysanthemums a temperature of 50 degrees or 55 degrees, and for the still more hardy violets and daisies a heat not above 40 degrees by night and 70 degrees by day is best.

Frost is apt to come at almost any time this month, and when it threatens, the prudent gardener will pick all his tomatoes, squashes, cucumbers, egg plants, melons and peppers and place them under shelter where they can be sold as wanted. Tomatoes if picked quite green will ripen under glass after a few days exposure to the sun, and often command good prices.

Fruit.

Picking of pears is now in order. Most pears are better if picked as soon as the stem will cleave from the wood without breaking, and some days before they are quite ripe. They should be placed in bushel boxes in a cool cellar or shed, with a northern exposure, and kept thus until ready for sale, which is just as they begin to ripen. If part of the crop is picked quite green and sold when ripe, those remaining on the tree will become much larger and handsomer, and usually pay for the trouble of thinning out.

What to do with the surplus of unmarketable early fruit is often a serious question, and in many cases it is largely left on the ground to go to decay. But where pigs are kept they will dispose of a considerable amount every day if you furnish them They like the soft, mellow food, and it does them good. It will help the appetite and digestion, and along with milk from the dairy and grain will answer a good purpose. Any one not used to the business will be surprised to note to what good use these otherwise refuse apples can be put.

Where poultry is raised these apples may be boiled along with the small potatoes, and when mixed with a little meal and skimmed milk will make a fine ration.

Getting Rid of Unprofitable Stock.

Every farmer should constantly endeavor to keep his stock up to the best possible standard of excellence and value, by getting rid of every unprofitable animal, and supplying its place with another that is better. If this practice is closely followed and continued efforts made for improvements, the farmer will soon find that a most perceptable advance is being made Keep the best of whatever breed or kind for the farm. This should be the rule and when additions are to be made from other sources, if possible, get something a little better than that already in possession. Particularly should this be the case when obtaining a new sire.

Dairymen should find it an advantage to have the milk of their cows tested separately in order to learn its richness in butter fat.

If this cannot be conveniently done by other parties, it will cost but a few dollars to get an outfit for the purpose, and a farmer or his son can soon learn to use it. In this way the quality of the milk of each cow can readily be ascertained, and then if some track is kept as to the weight of milk given, and the persistency of the cows in holding out, there will be little trouble in finding which cows are the best for the farm, and those not wanted.

There will be surprise for the farmer having little or no experience in the matter, and he must sometimes find himself mistaken as to which he considered his best cows.

ITEMS.

Cost and Results of Arsenate Spray.

As a result of spraying experiments at the Illinois Experimental Station, it was found that four times spraying with arsenate of lead at a cost of 17 cents a tree, increased one-half, and the average size of the fruit about one-fifth, and so improved the quality of the apples that they were worth 2 1-2 to 3 times as much as if the orchard had not been sprayed. Orchards in the section indicated are much infested with the apple curculio and the spraying was successful in destroying these. Experiments at the same station with various washes for destroying the San Jose scale included all the common mixtures and various patented preparations, but it was concluded that the best and cheapest mixture is the common lime and sulphur wash prepared by boiling. The mixture applied in March was much more effective than when applied in midwinter.

A Rabbit Story From Australia.

A writer describes a plague of rabbits in Australia; "A farmer barricades himself in with miles upon miles of wire fencing, solely to keep out the rabbits. They eat their way up to the barriers, and in the fight for the green land within the wire they die in myriads. All around the inclosed land they lie in heaps of incredible size. Swarm after swarm follows on, and at last the heaps of dead are so high that the late comers make their way over the fence and the farm is ruined." That's a pretty good story, but the latest news from Australia is that the whole level of the continent is being elevated by these strata of dying rabbits.

DOG-DAY HINTS.

House Flies. — Flies are such a trouble in August that an Old Country method of controlling them is worthy a trial in our kitchens. A large bunch of feathery asparagus is tied and fastened up near the ceiling, and to this haven in preference to culinary dainties the disturbing flies are said to go in large numbers. It need not be an expensive cure, and is vouched for by more than one experienced old country housekeeper.

Two Salads. — Two pretty salads for a hot weather luncheon, easily made and greatly appreciated by at least two senses, are the following; Take a narrow strip of banana peel carefully off a large, clean-looking yellow banana. Remove the fruit without breaking the skin. Slice the banana, add to it a few slices of fresh pineapple cut into small dice, a blackberry or two, and perhaps a few pieces of orange. Pour over this a light French dressing with lemon juice instead of vinegar, fill the little boats with the fruit, garnish with parsley or lettuce, and serve, one to each person.

The other salad looked ideally cool and attractive. Crisp white lettuce leaves formed the background to what appeared to be uniformly small, red tomatoes, or extra large cherries. In the tasting, however, they proved to be balls of ripe watermelon, crisp, cold, delicious, dressed with a French mixture of tarragon vinegar, red pepper, salt and olive oil.

A Fruit Luncheon.—A pretty luncheon for sultry days can be made up of fruits and vegetables almost entirely. For the centre decoration, a large basket of peaches and apricots in a bower of their own leaves has a restful and simple effect, while at the ends of the table smaller baskets of plums and grapes may be placed. Grape fruit served in the skin, with ice and sugar, and surrounded with a wreath of grape leaves, begins the meal well; fish and cucumber in oil and vinegar, or with sauce tartare in little baskets formed of lemon peel; chops, if meat must be had, served with green peas and creamed potatoes, and garnished with parsley; a salad of watermelon and lettuce or bananas, as above, or any other desired fruit salad that has a pretty appearance, next follows; and for dessert, muskmelons filled with vanilla ice cream or orange water ice ought to be sufficient. Small cakes trimmed with sprigs of currants, white and red, or raspberries served with the ice, will give a pretty finishing touch. A fruit drink of raspberry vinegar, sauterne cup with pineapple cherries, orange and lemon in it, and a sprig of mint, or grape juice, should accompany such a seasonable repast for tired shoppers or heated tennis players on mountain or shore. —New York Evening Post.

Cream Puffs.— Here is an Albany lady's recipe for cream puffs. Half a cupful of butter, one cupful of hot water; when it boils, add one cupful of flour; remove from fire, and add four unbeaten eggs, one at a time.

THE VETERINARIAN.

Answers to Correspondents.

Sheep Coughing.— Our sheep have for the last year or two been troubled with cough and running phlegm at nose in damp weather, and in winter it seems worse. I have about 50 young lambs, and some of them are getting the same trouble. They have a good hilly pasture which they have grazed on for three years, and at night they are always brought into a large enclosure where there is a barn for them to go in, as well as having free access to it during the day. They seem to eat well, but some of the older ones look poor. A doctor gave me medicine, but it did not seem to help them. He told me to try making them inhale sulphur fumes. It was quite a job, and I don't think it did any good. They have lots of fresh water and are kept clean. (Clean out the barn and enclosure where they are kept nights, and sprinkle with air-slaked lime often. Keep worm and tonic powder where sheep can always get it.

ATTRACTIVE DISHES.

Tomatoes Mayonnaise.—Scoop the centres out of some nice firm tomatoes, and fill each with a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing, one olive and one walnut. Mince up the centres removed from your tomatoes with chopped hard-boiled egg, in equal proportion, with a sprig of chopped parsley; make a bed of this latter, on which place your filled tomatoes, garnish with lettuce or cress, and serve.

A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE.

A Mountain Woman Writes in Praise Of Newbro's Herpicide.

"For several years I have been troubled with dandruff, causing me much annoyance, and my hair became very thin. I have used Newbro's Herpicide for a month and the dandruff has entirely disappeared and my hair is becoming much heavier than formerly. New hair is growing where there was none, and I am very thankful to you for the benefit I have received from Newbro's Herpicide. Very truly yours.

Scrambled Tomatoes.—Chop tomatoes to the extent of three cupfuls with one small onion, a piece of cheese the size of the latter, two tablespoonfuls of whole wheat bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt and the same of pepper. Have hot in your skillet three tablespoonfuls of olive oil, turn in your mixture, toss about as you do any scramble, and serve on toasted triscuit.

Berry Tea Cakes.—Three eggs, one cupful of sugar, two of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the butter and sugar together, and add the eggs well beaten. Stir in the flour and baking powder well sifted together. Bake in patty tins. Split when warm, and fill with strawberries, raspberries, peaches or any fresh fruit desired, mashed, with a little powdered sugar.

Vegetable Omelet.—Prepared as the regular omelet, but filled with fresh vegetable in season before folding over.

French Toast.—Take slices of stale whole-wheat bread, dip them in a preparation made of one egg well beaten, one cupful of sweet milk and a little salt, allowing each slice to lie in it long enough to absorb some of the milk; then brown in a hot griddle or frying pan, butter, and serve with maple syrup.

Dark Surprise Soup. — Soak over night one pint of black beans and one pint of lentils; next day boil them for four hours with one onion and one stalk of okra. Now mash all together and strain through a colander. Tie up in a piece of cheesecloth a little thyme, summer savory and parsley, and let boil in the strained soup for ten minutes. Add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper, and a dash of celery salt. Chop finely four hard-boiled eggs, add to the soup, with one lemon sliced thin, before serving. Serve with croutons.—Physical Culture.

NOTES.

We need more legislation by the farmers for the farmers.

Half-hearted people are slow workers. Believe in your task.

Find your right place in the world and get into it right away.

Work and think. Don't steal your own talents by laziness and vice.

Spring work done in the fall and winter is one mark of the successful farmer.

Anyone can plow and sow and reap, but not everybody can do so at a profit.

Skinning the farm sometimes pays for a few years, but it is poor farming for all that.

The more labor and time and capital you put into farming, the more profit up to a certain limit. Success is to find that limit.

Undertake only what you can reasonably expect to be able to do and your success is sure. Too many men begin to lift before they look at the load.

All work and no thought makes a dull farmer. All thought and no work will never pay the mortgage. How much time to spend in planning out must be decided by each for himself.

A farm home with a snug income derived from a position in the city is a pleasant state of things for one who is not an expert farmer, but who is fond of country life. Many of our suburban farmers have also business in the city.

In speaking of scrub cattle, it should be noted that there flows some very good Ayrshire, Shorthorn and Devon blood in the veins of a large proportion of the so-called common cows of this country. Such cattle are by no means scrub stock. When we see cows giving sixteen to twenty quarts and producing daughters equal to themselves we may well suspect some good thoroughbred ancestry somewhere.

It is surprising what a large proportion of those who attend farmers' meetings belong to the successful class of farmers. They are better posted than the average, but they are still eager to learn. On the other hand, many of those who most need these meetings never go at all.

For the old-style farmer who understands how to raise grain, there is still some money in growing rye. The straw is carefully saved, and sold at a higher price than the best hay, to be used for making straw braid, and the grain can often be sold for seed or kept to be planted for fodder rye.

Can a young farmer buy a good farm almost entirely on credit and make enough to pay for it in from six to ten years? To the reader who sends this query, we can only reply, that it has been done in recent years, but in every case noted either the farm or the farmer was exceptionally good.

THE SHEPHERD BOY'S SONG.

He that is down need fear no fall,
He that is low no pride;
He that is humble ever shall
Have God to be his guide.

I am content with what I have,
Little be it or much;
And, Lord, contentment still I crave,
Because thou savest such.

Fullness to such a burden is
That go on pilgrimage;
Here little, and hereafter bliss,
Is best from age to age.

—John Bunyan.

MIXED THEIR METAPHORS.

Amusing Blunders Made by Members of British Parliament.

Frequenters of the House, an authority writes to The Daily Mail, have for a long time remarked a woful depreciation in the art of Parliamentary speaking. Notable exceptions are Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Mr. Asquith, Mr. John Redmond and Mr. T. Healy; the last named, during an Irish land debate last session, delivered one of the finest speeches it has been my pleasure to hear.

Curious enough is the fact that probably the best grammar and the most lucid and finished sentences come from the Labor side in the example set by Mr. Keir Hardie. Only an unfortunate but no doubt conquerable jerkiness of delivery prevents the Labor leader from being numbered in the front rank of modern Parliamentary orators.

The mixed metaphor gives many unsuspecting members a fall. Mr. Asquith not long ago amused the House with the phrase: "Our tongues are tied, our hands are fettered, and we are really beating the air to no purpose.

Mr. John Burns improved on this by declaring, in reference to the Children's Employment Bill, "I will now repeat what I was about to say when the honorable member interrupted me." Then there was the wealthy manufacturer member who, dealing with the legal position of trade unions, asseverated that "the interests of the employers and employed are the same nine times out of ten—nay, I will go further, and say ninety-nine times out of ten."

A member of the present Opposition, observing signs of dissent from a Liberal, exclaimed: "Ah, the honorable member opposite may shake his head, but he cannot shake mine." "Sir," said Mr. Walter Long on education matters, "we are told that by this legislation the heart of the country will be shaken to its foundations."

The House of Commons is too hurried, too strenuous, too utilitarian in these times to encourage the ornamental in oratory. Moreover, every member in the chamber appears anxious to have his say. Up to the present some 400 legislators out of 670 have delivered speeches during the session. These are regarded as the principal causes of the decadence of Parliamentary style.

Mr. Charles Seymour, the elocutionist, who coaches many Parliamentary candidates and before whom not a few members rehearse the speeches they hope to deliver before the House, pronounced the suggestion of a class for politicians impossible.

"Members who honor me with their patronage," he said, "creeps stealthily into my studio. They would not have their mission known under any circumstances. It is not shame; it is shyness."

"Division" in Parliament.

When a division is called a bell rings to enable all M. P.'s to collect from the smoking room, the library, etc. Then the outer door is closed, and the Speaker puts the question. There is a shout of "Aye!" and of "No!" on which he declares that either the one or the other "has it." If this be challenged he says, "The 'ayes' to the right, the 'noes' to the left." This means that the "ayes" and the "noes" go into respective lobbies.

This takes some time, for they go leisurely. When at length they are both within their respective pens all the doors leading to them are closed, and after a minute or two the one door through which the prisoners in each lobby are to make their exit is opened. Before reaching the exit they have to pass on either side of a desk at which two clerks sit and check off on a printed list of members those who vote. After this they pass in single file through the exit door, which is a few yards from this desk. Just outside this exit door stand two tellers, one representing the "ayes" and one the "noes." Their business is to call aloud one, two, three, four, and so on, as the members pass. Consequently for each division four tellers are necessary, two for the "aye" lobby and two for the "no" lobby.—London Truth.

Death of a Balaclava Captain.

Sir William Gordon, Baronet, of Earlston, Kircudbright, died a few days ago. He led the left squadron of the 17th Lancers in the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. He received four sabre wounds, and was dismounted. He succeeded, however, in reaching the British lines, and was promoted captain next day. He also served with the 17th Lancers in the Indian Mutiny, when Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood was one of his subalterns. Sir William Gordon retired from the army in 1864, being then in command of his regiment. He had the British, French, and Turkish decorations for the Crimea and the Indian Mutiny medal. Sir William was 76 years of age at the time of his death.

An Old Chartist's Death.

Mr. W. E. Adams, late editor of the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle, died at Madeira recently from asthma. Born at Cheltenham in 1832, he became an ardent Chartist, with intimate association with Charles Bradlaugh, George Jacob Holyoake, Julius Harney, Joseph Cowen and others. His "Caractacus" letter in Bradlaugh's paper, The National Reformer, attracted Mr. Cowen's attention, and he was given an appointment on the Newcastle Chronicle. For years he was the editor of The Newcastle Weekly Chronicle, and was the author of several publications.

COURAGE IN DIFFICULTIES.

Stories Showing How Two Persons Faced Great Peril—How a Woman Saved the Situation.

Women display courage in their own incomparable fashion. Typical of woman's method of encountering danger is the story of the woman who observed as she was concluding her toilet for the night the presence of a burglar under her bed. Without letting the man know that she had perceived him, this woman quietly put on her dressing gown and knelt down at the bedside to say her prayers. She prayed aloud. She made her own personal intercessions to heaven and then prayed for all poor sinners living in the darkness of estrangement from God, "particularly this unhappy man lying under my bed, meditating the wickedness of stealing and perhaps of murder." This woman saved the situation.

I cannot imagine a worse situation than that of a certain steeplejack who found himself one day at the top of a church steeple with a madman grinning into his eyes. The madman was his mate. Both men had been at work on this steeple for many days and had talked together while they hung in the saddles with the utmost accord, but on this particular day one of the men looked up to see madness in the eyes of his companion. In that moment he was alone with danger. No shout could avail. From the street below he looked like a spider snoozing in its web. The roofs and chimneys of the houses seemed to be level with the ground. High up in the loneliness of the empty air he was alone with a madman.

The man kept his wits about him, and addressed some cheerful remark to his mate. The madman only grinned. The man bade him look alive, that they might the sooner get below and enjoy themselves. The madman chuckled, and announced that they would get below in double quick time, for that he was going to jump from the steeple with his friend in his arms.

The other laughed as if at a good jest, and turned to his work. Then he began pushing with his feet against the steeple to get a swing into his saddle; he meant to grab the madman and hold him till help came. But the madman was also swinging his saddle, and before the sane man realized his danger the madman's fingers were closing round his throat.

There they swung in the dizzy air, high over the unconscious city. By something of a miracle the man found his hand clutching at his tool box as he swung back. His hands closed on a wrench. He grabbed it, made an upward thrust with his strangled body, and caught the madman a jangling blow across the side of his head. Then he clutched the fellow's body to save it from falling and, after a moment's breathing, quietly lowered himself and his unconscious mate to the ground below.—Strand Magazine.

EXIT PLUG HATS.

England's Social World Appears to Be Tired of Them.

At every race meeting, morning or afternoon ceremony, or function of business or pleasure this year the doom of the frock coat and top-hat has been more and more emphatically denounced. The social world is tired of them.

At Epsom during race week, even the presence of the King did not prevent a third of the visitors in the boxes, stalls, and club stands from appearing in comfortable grey suits and "bowlers" on Thursday and Friday. At Eton 4th of June celebration, nearly half the male visitors had discarded black clothes and top-hats, and appeared in grey or blue summer country cloths which five years ago would have caused a boy to "cut" his father or his best friend. To-day every man is nervously asking his friend what will happen at Ascot. Will lawless, licentious freedom invade this innermost adytum, this sanctum sanctorum, of fashion?

"The question could not exist," said an arbiter of male costumes, "in an ordinary year; but this year unconventional visitors will take courage from the absence of the state procession, and will dare anything. I prophecy that on Tuesday and Thursday top-hats will be in a bare majority, and on Wednesday and Friday in a considerable minority."

Top-hats, as every visitor will remember, were not universal at the Windsor Castle garden party last year; they have been in a hopeless minority on the club lawns of Kempton and Sandown this year, and it seems to be a very open question whether in the future they will often be seen outside the streets and parks of London.

Never Lost a Day's Work.

William Pierce, who lives in High Wycombe, was born on Jan. 29, 1823. He is now a pensioner, and throughout his life he never lost a day's work. He was in one service for seventeen years and in another for fifty-one years. He had four brothers and four sisters. Two of his brothers were christened Joseph and the other two Edmund, and two of his sisters had the name of Ann. A sister, a brother, a brother-in-law, a niece, and a nephew were married three times.

A Restaurant Acquaintance.

"When you go to New Zealand, I wish you would enquire after my great-grand-father, Jeremiah Thompson." "Certainly," said the traveler, and wherever he went he asked for news of the ancestor, but without avail, according to The Dundee Advertiser. One day he was introduced to a fine old Maori of advanced age. "Did you ever meet with an Englishman named Jeremiah Thompson?" he asked. A smile passed over the Maori's face. "Meet him?" he repeated, "Why, I ate him!"

£50,000 For Presbyterians.

Sir William Dunn, Bart., has given £50,000 to the Presbyterian Church of England. He sat as a Liberal in the last Parliament for Paisley, his native town. He is senior partner in the banking and mercantile firm of William Dunn & Co., of London and South Africa. He owns an estate at Lakenheath, Suffolk, while his town residence is in Phillimore Gardens, Kensington. Sir William was created a baronet in 1895.

BOOK ILLUMINATION.

An Early Example of the Artistic Culture of the Ancients.

The underlying thought which has inspired illumination from its very beginning is more interesting even than the gorgeous pages which pass beyond our power of appreciation and defy our comprehension. To the ancients the rarest gems in all the world were the gems of thought. The book was the tangible and visible expression of man's intellect, worthy of the noblest setting. Its covers might be made of tables of beaten gold inlaid with precious jewels, its words might be written in minium of rare brilliancy brought from India or Spain or in Byzantine ink made from pure oriental gold upon parchment soft as velvet made from the skins of still born kids, while upon the ample margins could be displayed miniatures and decorations portraying the highest skill of the great artists of the day.

The earliest example of illumination is a papyrus in the Louvre in Paris, which contains paintings representing funeral ceremonies executed in bright colors, touched in its high lights with penciled gold. Although we find frequent mention of some poem written in gold, of some magnificent volume or codex of colored vellum or some collection of miniatures or of some magnificent gift book decorated for prince or church, yet this simple, imperfect fragment at the Louvre is the sole tangible evidence we have that so obvious a form of artistic culture as the art of illumination was known to the long period of classical antiquity or to the later luxuries of the life of Athens and Corinth, of Pergamum and Ephesus, of Cyzicuus or Rhodes, Syracuse or Tarentum, of Sybaris, of Pompeii and of Rome.

With the invention of printing the demand for the illuminator and the scribe became gradually less, and finally by the end of the sixteenth century illumination ceased to be an art. The book as the developer of the people in science and literature and in learning generally had crowded out the book as an object of art. It need not have done this, perhaps, but as a matter of fact it did.

EAGLES IN BATTLE.

The Daring and Skill of These Fierce Birds of Prey.

Ornithologists are inclined to discourage the idea that eagles are in the habit of attacking large animals, but a contest witnessed by an observer dispels such a theory. The battle was between an eagle and a stag.

The bird singled out from a herd one particular buck, which it succeeded in driving from the rest. It struck the animal with its powerful wings, knocked it down and finally killed it. A still more remarkable spectacle is well authenticated. An eagle attacked a fawn in the highlands of Scotland. The cries of the little one were answered by its dam, which sprang upon the eagle and struck it repeatedly with its forefeet. Fawn, deer and eagle rolled down a declivity, the bird was dislodged from its hold and the fawn rescued.

Many traditions are extant as to the carrying off of children by eagles. The most recent case bearing close scrutiny is one which happened in South Africa. A Boer farmer whose stock had been harried by eagles lay in ambush for the robbers and saw one of them descend and carry off the five-year-old child of one of the Kaffir servants. He shot the bird, which, with the child still clutched in its grip, fell into a thorn bush. The bird was dead, but the child was little hurt.

Two eagles will stalk a covert in concert. While one conceals itself the other beats about the bushes with great screaming, driving out its quarry for the hidden eagle to swoop down upon. An even more insidious method has been observed. An eagle seeing a sheep on the edge of a precipice flew at it, screaming shrilly and with forceful beat of wing hurled it into the valley below, where it could devour it at its leisure. In the light of such records there is good reason for believing the legend of the eagle dropping a tortoise on the bald head of Æschylus, the Greek poet, and so causing his death.

Her Dilemma.

A Doniphan county woman who was ill and found herself in a trying position explained her woe to a friend. "You see, my daughter Harriet married one of these homeypath doctors and my daughter Kate an allypath. If I call the homeypath my allypath son-in-law and his wife will get mad, an' if I call my allypath son-in-law then my homeypath son-in-law an' his wife will get mad, an' if I go ahead an' get well without either of 'em then they'll both be mad, so I don't see but I've got to die outright."

Echoes.

Every one is familiar with the phenomenon of echoes. In a cave in the Pantheon the guide, by striking the flap of his coat, makes a noise equal to a twelve pound cannon's report. The singularity is noticed in a lesser degree in the Mammoth cave in Kentucky. In the cave of Smellin, near Viborg, in Finland, a cat or dog thrown in will make a screaming echo lasting some minutes.

A Natural Wonder.

Teacher—What are marsupials? Boy—Animals which have pouches in their stomachs. Teacher—What do they have pouches for? Boy—To crawl into and conceal themselves in when they are pursued.

A person may not merit favor, as that is only the claim of man, but he can never demerit charity, for that is the command of God.—Sterne.

The Eyes and The Nerves

When feeling nervous or tired go to the window and look away into the far distance. Continue this for a few minutes and note the soothing calming influence that comes over you. Then turn again to something that requires a close range of vision, and at once the nervousness will return. Business men when tired often close their eyes for a moment, as they have learned by intuition that it rests the entire system. Closing the eyes has this calming effect because one-third of the brain is for the time being shut off from work, and using unnecessary energy. It proves "brain strain" undoubtedly present, though the vision may be seemingly excellent. This form of brain strain we relieve by the proper glasses.

C. P. R. Connection

SOME MORE ABOUT A MATTER WHICH IS VERY INTERESTING TO BELLEVILLIANS.

Great interest has been shown in The Intelligencer's announcement, made last Saturday, that the C.P.R. was coming from Tweed here, and would run from here to Toronto.

Discussing The Intelligencer's article a G.T.R. employee said he thought it would be quite a task for the C.P.R. surveyors to get a 3-10th grade between here and Toronto. The G.T.R. grade at present, he said, after years of cutting down, was about 5-10ths, and railwaymen, like himself, could hardly see how the C.P.R. surveyors would find a 3-10th grade. The G.T.R. grade, as originally built, our informant said, was a trifle over one foot to the mile, but recent improvements had brought it down to about one-half that.

A Montreal paper, discussing the new road, has this to say:

"The C.P.R. is to parallel the Grand Trunk between Belleville and Toronto in the comparatively near future. A survey party is to start out under the direction of Mr. Harry Wellwood, divisional engineer, Toronto, to begin the preliminary work of making surveys for the new line, beginning at Belleville and working westwards.

It is expected that the work will be completed within a year, when track-laying will be commenced. The new line is to extend from Tweed, Ont., to Toronto, and will prove a formidable competitor to the Grand Trunk. In fact, it would not be surprising if it captured the greater portion of freight traffic in the towns which it will tap. Unlike the Grand Trunk line, it will pass directly through most of the towns between Belleville and Toronto, as the members of the survey party have received instructions to get as close as possible to these places. In the case of the Grand Trunk, the stations along the line are frequently at a distance varying from half a mile to three miles from the business centres. This condition of affairs has proven a great inconvenience to the citizens of these places. The C.P.R. does not intend to make a similar mistake. The new line will run southwards from the Toronto-Montreal line at Tweed, Ont., to Belleville, and will then continue westwards to the Queen City, passing through Trenton, Brighton, Colborne, Grafton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Newcastle, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Whitby, Pickering and Scarboro.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"DOLLY VARDEN."

An extraordinary event in our local theatrical season will be the coming of Milton and Sargent Aborn's production of "Dolly Varden" to the Carman opera house on Tuesday, Sept. 11. The same elaborate equipment of gorgeous scenery and dainty, picturesque costumes which helped materially to make the original presentation of this opera a success, noted for its sumptuous effects, resplendent stage dressings, and display of richness and taste in costumes, will be seen in the staging of "Dolly Varden" here, with Lillian Spencer, one of the youngest and most promising prima donnas in America, in the title role.

Travel Is Heavy To Toronto Fair.

The attendance of Bellevillians at the Toronto Exhibition has been large so far, rather heavier than usual, say those who are in a position to know. Outgoing trains have been crowded.

The Standard Bank.

The inspector for the Standard Bank was in the city to-day, looking over the premises which the local branch will occupy on the corner of Front and Bridge streets. The architect, we are told, is now getting the plans ready. It is the intention to put a stone front on the Bridge street side and also on Front street. The stone will also extend so as to include the premises now occupied as a barber shop. The temporary quarters of the bank are being rushed to completion.

Had a Fall.

An accident which at first appeared to be extremely serious happened about 5 o'clock last evening to Mr. William Tennant, who had the misfortune, while in the Public Library building, to miss his footing and fall down the stairs leading to the cellar. The old gentleman is a large man, and fell heavily, striking on the back of his head and making a severe abrasion. Dr. Boyce, who came to attend him, said no serious results were likely unless the severe shock should bring them about. Mr. Tennant was taken home in the ambulance, and enquiries to-day elicited the reply that he was resting easily.

The Band Concert.

It was overcoat weather on Queen Victoria park last night, but there was a fair crowd present for all that. The music, as usual, was enjoyable.

The Corby Library

BUILDING, WHEN COMPLETED, WILL BE UNEQUALLED FOR THE PURPOSE IN ANY SMALL CITY IN ONTARIO.

Mr. Herbert, the Toronto architect, was in the city on Monday, and took the measurements of the present Merchants Bank building, which, as our readers know, has been purchased by Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P., and will be used as a Public Library. The purchase price was $6,500.

The building will be all remodelled inside all the side buildings taken away, and the stone wall on Campbell street cut down so that people will be able to see the beauties of the place. The fine lawn in rear of the building should make an ideal spot for people to sit and read in the good old summer time. Many a tired and weary man and woman will sit there in comfort and bless the generosity of Mr. Corby.

The contemplated improvements, we are told, will cost between $6000 and $7000.

Discussing the matter this morning, the Mayor said he thought the city should use the $800 which had been reserved for the purchase of a site, and which was not used, for the completion of some portion of the work. It would be a small matter in respect to the large total expense, of course, but would show a graceful and proper spirit on the part of the city. This, of course, in case Mr. Corby had no objections.

Mr. Panter's Dogs Won Many Prizes.

Charley Panter, the local dog fancier, is pushing his chest half-way across the street to-day. He is in high glee over the fact that his entries won many prizes at the Toronto dog show, capturing $31 in all. Mr. Panter's entries were Tricolor collies, and the fact that they captured three first prizes and several specials, also the bronze medal for the best pair of collies in the show, proves that they are "the goods" all right. These wins were made under the judging of Mr. Jarrett, of Philadelphia, admittedly the best judge of collies in America, and Mr. Panter has good reason to be proud of the record he made under such a sterling judge of dogs, and is to be congratulated on having the best pair of collies in America. Mr. Panter, last year, won the bronze medal for the best stud dog in the collie class.

Public Works and What is Being Done.

Ald. Panter, chairman of Public Works, said this morning, in answer to a question as to how long sidewalk construction would continue, that up to last week, only between $11,000 and $12,000 of the $20,000 appropriation had been expended. He intimated that the work of granolithic sidewalk construction would continue as long as the $20,000 held out, unless the frost stopped it.

The new crusher, Ald. Panter said, was expected any day now. When it was put in operation the department would look after the streets. The Public Works appropriation was not nearly expended yet.

Harbor Improvements.

Many people have wondered what special work was being done by the dredge in the harbor during the past summer. The Harbor Commissioners did not know, as the work was being done under Government orders. It turns out that a deep water channel is being made and a breakwater built. It is believed, one of the Harbor Commissioners informs us, that the improvements made will better conditions when the ice moves out in the spring.

Police Notes.

A lot of boys who were charged with causing annoyance to employees of the canning factory were yesterday up in the police court. The magistrate discharged them with a severe reprimand.

George Sidey, of Port Hope, was charged with trespassing and vagrancy. He was given a chance to return home.

John Duval was charged with trespassing on the property of Mr. Nelson Lingham, Dundas St. The case was laid over till Friday.

At the police court this morning Daniel Glenn was charged with assaulting James Babcock. Daniel had to part with a five dollar bill to get out of the clutches of the law.

William Fitzsimmons fell off the water wagon and was gathered in by the police. His little jag cost him a $2 fine.

The police say the city has been quieter lately than for years.

Some Giant Corn

Mr. Thos. E. Barber, of Ameliasburg, to-day showed us some splendid corn. There were three ears, measuring 17, 15 and 14 inches respectively. It was grown from seed received from the Experimental Farm, the name of which was "Salzer's North Dakota." It was planted on May 25 and cut on September 1st.

Convict Leapt From Car Window

SENSATIONAL ESCAPE ON WAY TO KINGSTON PENITENTIARY.

Kingston, Sept. 4.—Jacob Jebrelski, 55 years old, a convict en route to the penitentiary from Chatham, where he was recently sentenced to a term of seven years for bringing stolen furs from New York into Canada, made a sensational escape from a Grand Trunk car window between Napanee and the city, this side of Fredericksburg, to-day. The prisoner was handcuffed to his 17-year-old son Simon, sentenced for the same charge to five years' imprisonment.

The two prisoners were in charge of Sheriff Sammill, Jailor Davidson, and Constable Peters. Jebrelski went to the toilet-room with his son, and the constable stood at the door. The latter soon heard a scream from the son, and when he forced an entrance found that the older prisoner was gone, with the shackles. Simon was brought to Kingston.

The police are puzzled to know how the shackles were removed from the boy's wrists, as there are no marks of violence.

Constable Peters took the westbound train to Napanee, where he organized a searching party to look for the escaped man.

Foxboro Cheese Factory Burned

At noon yesterday the Foxboro cheese factory was discovered to be on fire and was totally destroyed. There were 120 cheese in the curing room, and these were saved, though somewhat damaged. The building and contents are both lightly insured.

A Successful Bellevillian

From Saturday night to yesterday noon Mr. and Mrs. John H. Shearing, of Montreal, were visitors in our city. They came to spend a couple of days with Mr. A. Shearing. Mr. John H. Shearing is another of Belleville's boys who has gained distinction in his chosen avocation. He entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1880, was appointed to the Passenger Audit Department, soon became the chief clerk with three employees to assist him, and has since seen that branch of the service develop until now nearly a hundred and fifty persons are employed. Few employees of that now gigantic organization are held in higher esteem by the "powers that be" and by his numerous subordinates than our former townsman.

TO TERRORIZE COUNTRY

Large Numbers Leave Warsaw For Rural Districts.

Two Hundred Persons Without Passports Are Arrested — Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel and Other Officers May Be Tried Again by Newly Appointed Supreme Court-Martial—300 Revolutionists Are Expelled.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 5.—Three hundred revolutionists were expelled from here yesterday, among them being many persons connected with the local press.

The Government, within a few days, expects to publish its full program of reforms, on which it will go before the country at the coming elections.

By order of the Emperor, unless Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, the former commander of Port Arthur; Lieut.-Gen. Flock, who commanded the fourth East Siberian division at Port Arthur, and Gen. Reiss, chief of staff of Gen. Stoessel, are either unanimously acquitted or are punished by the commission entrusted with the investigation of the surrender of Port Arthur, the three officers mentioned will be tried by the newly-appointed supreme court-martial.

Two Hundred Arrests.

Warsaw, Sept. 5.—Soldiers yesterday afternoon occupied the Salsian Garden, which was crowded with nurses and children, and arrested two hundred persons who was without pass-passports.

There are general indications that terrorists in large numbers have left Warsaw for the purpose of terrorizing the county districts. Governor-General Skallon accordingly has ordered the return to the country of the police who had been brought into the town, leaving the country districts comparatively unprotected. The wholesale searches which have been made here have resulted in complete failure.

MAKE PRISONERS WORK.

Police Chiefs In Convention Pass Resolution to That Effect.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—At the opening session of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada in the City Hall yesterday papers on the police systems of Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba were read by Chiefs Campeau of Montreal, Smith of Hamilton, Inspector McLelian in place of the absence of Chief Power of Halifax, Clark of St. John, and McRae of Winnipeg. Discussion, at the suggestion of Secretary Stark, was deferred until all have been read.

After the reading of these papers, this resolution was passed:

"That in the opinion of this organization work should be provided for all persons undergoing sentence no matter how short, and that the attention of the proper authority be called to the facts where this does not exist, urging the necessity of inaugurating some system of useful work for these prisoners under their control not herewith provided for the material benefit of the individual, and with a view, as far as possible, of making him self-sustaining."

Chief Detective Carpenter read a paper on "The Habitual Criminal."

Chief Slemin of Brantford read a short paper on the "Enlargement of the Criminal Code."

The secretary-treasurer, Deputy-Chief Stark, presented his report. The total income was $148.15, and the balance on hand $56.

REV. DR. BEATTIE DEAD.

Canadian, Who Attained High Place In U. S., Expires Suddenly.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 5.—Dr. Francis R. Beattie, one of the widely-known ministers in the Presbyterian Church, and president of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, died suddenly yesterday at his residence here of heart failure.

He was born in Guelph in 1848. After passing through the Guelph public and high schools he entered Toronto University and graduated in 1875. He graduated from Knox College in 1878, and gained his B.D. degree. He was the recipient of many other degrees. He was ordained in 1878 and filled with great success different pulpits in Canada, mainly that of the Park street Presbyterian Church, Brantford, until 1888, when he became a professor in the Presbyterian Seminary at Columbia, S. C. From 1893 he had been professor of apologetics and systematic theology in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky.

He was associate editor of The Christian Observer and associate editor of The Presbyterian Quarterly. He was a member of the executive committee of the Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Dr. Beattie was a voluminous author and was also the editor of the memorial volume of the Westminster Assembly celebration at Charlotte, N. C. Dr. Beattie was twice married.

NEW YORK DAIRY MARKET.

New York, Sept. 4.—Butter—Firm; receipts (two days), 9822; street price extra creamery, 24c to 24½c; official prices, creamery, common to extra, 18c to 24c; state dairy, common to fancy, 17c to 23c; renovated, common to extra, 15c to 21c; western factory, common to firsts, 15c to 18c; western imitation creamery, extras, 20½c to 21c; firsts, 18½c to 19c.

Cheese—Steady; receipts (two days), 1515; state, full cream, large, fancy, 12⅝c; do., fair to good, 12½c to 12½c; small fancy, 12½c; do., fair to good, 11¾c to 12¼c; inferiors, 10¼c to 11¼c; skims, full to best, 2c to 10c.

Eggs—Strong; receipts (two days), 10,702; state, Pennsylvania and near-by fancy selected white, 28c; do., choice, 26c to 27c; mixed extra, 26c to 27c; western firsts, 21c to 21½c; official prices, 21 to 21½c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Best Grade Cattle Are Steady at Chicago.

London, Sept. 4.—Cattle are quoted at 10¼c to 11½c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 9c to 9½c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 14c to 15½c per lb.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—Receipts of live stock at the city cattle market since last Friday, as reported by the railways, were 60 car loads, composed of 758 cattle, 370 hogs, 1963 sheep and lambs, with 163 calves.

Exporters.

Trade dull, few offering, 2 loads being sold at $4.75 per cwt.; export bulls sold at $3.50 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

Choice picked lots were reported at $4.40 to $4.60; loads of fair to good at $4 to $4.30; medium at $3.60 to $3.90; common at $3.25 to $3.50; cows, $2.50 to $3.30 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

Harry Murby reports a limited trade in stockers and feeders. The most of the enquiry is for the good kind, which are scarce. The run to-day was small and more of the good kind would have sold. Following are the quotations: Best feeders, 900 to 1100 lbs., at $3.60 to $4; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., at $3.40 to $3.65; best stockers, 600 to 800 lbs., at $3.25 to $3.50; medium stockers, 600 to 900 lbs., at $2.75 to $3.25; common stockers, 600 to 900 lbs., at $2.25 to $2.50.

Milch Cows.

A limited number sold at $30 to $63 each and more good to choice quality cows would have found a ready market, as there were several dealers on the market, amongst whom was Mr. Hooper of Montreal, as well as M. Vincent and some others.

Veal Calves.

The demand for veal calves was good, with prices firm for all of choice quality. Prices ranged from $3 to $7.25 per cwt., three calves being bought by Mr. Dingle for the Hamilton trade at the latter price. Farmers will do well to feed their calves on new milk, as there is an excellent demand for those of prime quality.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep and lambs were easier in price. Cables for export sheep came lower. One local dealer received a private cable that gave the best export sheep at 12c as being the top price on the English markets. Export ewes, $4.40 to $4.60; bucks, $3.25 to $3.75. Lambs sold lower, but it must be remembered that the Toronto market is being flooded with an inferior lot of small lambs and bucks that are not wanted at Buffalo. Mr. Dunn reports 90 per cent. of the lambs coming to Toronto as bucks. Prices ranged from $5.50 to $6.15, but there were a few picked lots of ewes and wethers brought a little more.

Hogs.

The run of hogs was light, but prices remained steady, at last Friday's quotations. Mr. Harris was paying $6.40 for selects and $6.15 for lights and fats.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, Sept. 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 250 head; steady; prime steers, $5.65 to $6.25; shipping, $5 to $5.60; butchers, $4.25 to $5.35.

Veals—Receipts, 150 head; active and 25c lower; $4 to $8.

Hogs—Receipts, 3800 head; heavy lower; others fairly active; heavy, $6.50 to $6.60; mixed, $6.50 to $6.65; Yorkers, $6.60 to $6.70; pigs, $6.60.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 3000 head; active on good; slow on common; lambs, $5 to $8.50; yearlings, $6 to $6.50; wethers, $5.75 to $6; ewes, $5.25 to $5.50; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.50; Canada lambs, $7.75 to $8.15.

NEW YORK LIVE STOCK.

New York, Sept. 4.—Beeves—Receipts, 1027; very little doing; two cars of bulls sold at $2.25 to $3.10; steady feeling for steers; exports to-day, 900 cattle and 3400 quarters of beef; to-morrow, 2800 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 552; prime hardy veals steady to firm; others slow to easier; grassers and buttermilks weak; westerns dull; veals, $5 to $8.50; choice selected, $8.75 to $8.87½; throw-outs, $4 to $4.50; grassers and buttermilks, $3.25 to $4; do. feeders, $4.12½; western and Indiana calves, $6.50 to $4.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2350; sheep steady; good to prime lambs wanted and firm; others selling at steady prices; sheep, $3.25 to $5.50; culls, $2 to $3.10; lambs, $6 to $8.75; one car culls, $3 to $5.

Hogs—Receipts, 3148; market easier; state and Pennsylvania hogs, $6.65 to $7.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 10,000; market for best steady; others weak; common to prime steers, $2.75 to $6.80; cows, $2.75 to $4.75; heifers, $2.60 to $5.25; bulls, $2.25 to $4.50; calves, $3 to $7.80; stockers and feeders, $2.60 to $4.35.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; market 5c to 10c lower; choice to prime heavy, $6.10 to $6.20; medium to good heavy, $5.90 to $6; butchers' weights, $6.20 to $6.35; good to choice heavy mixed, $6 to $6.10; pigs, $5.50 to $6.40.

Sheep—Receipts, 20,000; market steady to strong; sheep, $4.25 to $5.75; yearlings, $5.50 to $6.50; lambs, $6 to $7.90.

FARMERS' ASSOCIATION

Not Much Discussion as Delegates Were of One Opinion.

Resolutions Passed Unanimously Touch Many Topics of Public Interest and Impartially Commend and Condemn Acts of Both the Federal and Provincial Parliaments — Will Furnish Food For Political Heartburning.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—The Farmers' Association of Ontario met in Victoria Hall here yesterday. J. Lockie Wilson presided and delivered his annual presidential address. There was little discussion on the resolutions passed, as there was apparently little difference of opinion in the meeting.

Resolutions Passed.

That we ask the railway commission to equalize and regulate express rates upon an equitable basis without waiting for any formal complaints.

That we endorse the federal ownership of long-distance telephone and telegraph lines, and regard the transmission of messages by these means as logically belonging to the federal postal system.

That we favor the enforcement by federal legislation of a two-cent-a-mile passenger rate whenever the passenger earnings shall exceed $3,000 a mile.

That we commend the Federal Government for putting express rates under the control of the railway commission, and the Provincial Government for its power act, its municipal telephone act, and its reservation of the Gillies limit in the interests of the general public.

That, recognizing the right of ownership, that the people of Ontario have in the mineral wealth of this province, we ask the Provincial Government to levy a progressive royalty upon all mineral output for the benefit of the general public.

That no Cabinet Minister should be connected with any corporations seeking or likely to seek, legislative favors.

That we are opposed absolutely to the policy of granting bonuses and bounties, either in money or in public lands, to private corporations, and that the public domain should be reserved for the actual settlers.

That we affirm our belief in the justice of the main principle of the Pettypiece bill, and regard the recent railway taxation act to the Provincial Government as both unjust to the average taxpayer and as discriminating unfairly between the railways themselves. We demand that the assessment and taxation of corporate property be similar to those of farm and other private property. We shall be satisfied with nothing less than the equalization of taxation.

That we are emphatically opposed to the increase of expenditure for military purposes as being both unnecessary and demoralizing, as diverting our national resources into unprofitable channels, and as tending to lower those ideals which should inspire the rising generation.

The association will meet again at 9 this morning. Prof. Goldwin Smith will speak at 10.30 a. m.

Healey Falls Water Power Lease.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines, handed out an official statement of the Healey Falls water power lease to the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., in which he denied emphatically that the Government had ever over-ridden or ever proposed to over-ride the powers vested in the Hydro-Electric Commission. The statement also contained the details of the lease, which, Mr. Cochrane said, he was at any time prepared to justify and defend.

Hill Sues Gow.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—The Hill tragedy of Dummer Township was recalled at Osgoode Hall yesterday, when Robert Hill, father of the murdered boy, took action to set aside the sale of Gow's farm to his father, on the ground that it was put through to defeat the ends of justice. Hill was awarded $650 damages, which have not been paid. The master-in-chambers gave judgment, allowing the plaintiff to revive the action, and proceed to trial at the Peterboro sittings in October.

Two Train Fatalities.

St. Thomas, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Shippey, aged 75, was killed at West Lorne by a special Michigan Central Railway express train yesterday morning, as she was crossing the track. Her body was thrown a rod and a half.

The eight-year-old daughter of A. T. Cromp, Wabash agent at Nelles' Corners, was struck by No. 8 Wabash express, while she was playing on the track with a kitten, and both she and the animal were killed.

Live Stock Day.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Crisp addresses, appreciative of the progress being made by Canada in the live stock industry, were made at the directors' luncheon of the Canadian National Exhibition, when the guests of honor were William Duthie of Aberdeen, Scotland, and Sir William Mulock.

"Bob," as last year, won the sheep driving trial. He is owned by W. Burns.

Murder at a Prize Fight.

Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 5.—As the result of a quarrel, caused by a dispute over the Gans-Nelson fight, Joseph Lynch, 28 years old, was kicked on the head and killed, it is alleged, by a companion with whom he had been drinking.

Millionaire's Son Suicides.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 5.—William M. Archer, about 25 years of age, son of a millionaire tobacco planter of Richmond, Va., suicided in a city hotel yesterday, by shooting.

Fifty Engines For C. P. R.

Montreal, Sept. 5.—The C. P. R. yesterday placed an order for fifty locomotives with the American Locomotive and Machine Works at Longue Pointe, to cost $19,000 each.

METHODS OF PROMOTER

nipeg President Gordon stated that not a share of stock had been given witness, who admitted that he sat through the meeting and did not contradict that fact although the transfers, one signed by President Gordon for 50 shares (presumably for a man named Denham) and several signed by Vice-President Graham, and four which the president had signed and cancelled, were in his pocket.

Witness had nothing to say about these transactions. He would not say that Mr. Gordon's statements were incorrect. More evidence will be taken to-morrow on the transfer stunt.

Mr. Tilley took up briefly the journal and notebook. Pages were stripped for no reason whatever, which led Commissioner Kent to remark that the bookkeeping was in terrible shape, and that he wished the auditors to be placed on the stand.

Before adjournment the fact that directors and witness had given notes to the company and when the interest came due it was cancelled. Witness could not explain why this was done.

The examination will be continued to-morrow.

HAD ONLY ONE REGRET.

Great Reception at Whitby to Canadian British M. P.

Whitby, Sept. 5.—Hamar Greenwood, M. P. for York, England, a native of this town, was greeted here to-day by a lettered streamer which caught his eye first as he left the Toronto train: "The town is yours."

The whole town was at the station to meet him, and hundreds of friends of his own and the family had driven in from miles around.

A procession through gaily-decorated streets, a crowded opera house, a representative gathering of the friends of his boyhood and early manhood and a warm address of congratulation and welcome followed.

Mr. Greenwood's speech in reply was such as flows only from so grateful a heart that his ordinary vocabulary proves inadequate to express his feelings. The past and the present, the ten years absence from his birth town and the progress he made towards realizing his ideals, was a most interesting chapter, but no paragraph in it touched so responsive a chord as this one:

"My only regret is that my beloved father and mother were not spared to see their boy Tom come back an English M. P." (Applause.)

After speeches from Warden Henry, W. F. Maclean, M. P., Col. Henderson, Col. Farewell, and others, the gathering broke up with the singing of "God Save the King."

For half an hour afterwards Mr. Greenwood was kept busy shaking hands. It was a proud day for his four sisters and his brother, W. H. Greenwood of The Toronto World.

Makes Northwest Passage.

New York, Sept. 5.—A Christiania, Norway, despatch says that the Norwegian Polar expedition on the ship Gjoa has reached Behring Strait, having thus accomplished the northwest passage.

Capt. Roland Amundson, who commanded the Polar expedition on the Gjoa, left Norway in June, 1903, to try the northwest passage. In the summer of 1905 he established a base on King William's Island, where he later reported that he had located the true magnetic pole.

Inquiring Into Auto Fatality.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Coroner Young opened an inquest into the death of Jane Porter, nurse at the asylum, who was killed by an auto on College street Monday night, and after taking evidence from several witnesses adjourned until Thursday night at the City Hall. The body was identified yesterday. The dead woman was 56 years of age, and was a night nurse at the asylum. She had been ailing for some time, and her eyesight also was defective.

Yankee Sailors Desert.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Numerous desertions have occurred among the crew of the United States revenue cutter Dallas, whose cruising ground is the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario. Seven sailors deserted last week and crossed the river into Canada. One man who returned was arrested and tried by court-martial aboard the cutter and sentenced to one year imprisonment.

Three Brothers Suicide.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Three brothers in the Kenney family have committed suicide. This fact was brought out in evidence at the police court last night when Coroner McCallum conducted an enquiry into the death of Mauson Kenney, the 20-year-old youth, who took carbolic acid. The jury only took a few minutes to reach their verdict of suicide while insane.

No One Can Get Away.

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—District Attorney Bell yesterday continued his investigation into the affairs of the Real Estate Trust Co., which failed last week. Sufficient evidence of criminality has been discovered to warrant the statement that one or two, and perhaps three, arrests will be made today. "I cannot mention any names at this time," said Mr. Bell. "No man will get away, and every person, no matter what his position may be, who is implicated, will be made to answer."

Draws Hering Across the Trial.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—A cable despatch from Tangier says: Paul Stensland's confession, made to Assistant States Attorney Olsen, makes no attempt to deny his guilt, and only tried to minimize it. He said that Hering suggested the first crookedness and that he also committed all the forgeries.

Struck By An Auto.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—An automobile owned by Mr. Harris struck Bert Roberts, a civic employe, who was working on York street yesterday. His arm was broken and he sustained injuries to his head. Roberts has a large family of small children.

SQUIRREL RIFLE KILLS.

16-Year Old Son of Dr. Fontaine of Maniwaki the Victim.

Hull, Que., Sept. 6.—Maniwaki was terribly shocked Tuesday by the accidental shooting of Arthur, the 16-year-old son of Dr. T. D. S. Fontaine of that place.

The gun that did the deed was in the hands of a man named Charlebois, whose assistance the unfortunate victim had invoked when the shell-ejector of the little 22-calibre squirrel rifle refused to work. Charlie Lougue, aged 15, who was hunting with young Fontaine, stood beside Mr. Charlebois and Arthur stood in front.

When the refractory mechanism was righted young Lougue thrust a new cartridge in and the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering the boy's abdomen. He died fifteen minutes afterwards.

Child Burned to Death.

Ingersoll, Sept. 6.—The 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Christie died at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, from the effects of burns received Tuesday evening by having her clothes ignited by matches with which she was playing.

Boy Drowned In Lock.

Lindsay, Sept. 6.—The body of Garfield Barjaros, 7-year old son of Frank Barjaros, was found in the lock yesterday morning. He disappeared Saturday evening.

Bicyclist Loses Arm.

Winnipeg, Sept. 6.—While riding to work on his wheel yesterday morning Howard Griffith, a 15-year-old boy, ran into a street car, losing an arm. He will recover.

Body Found In River.

Port Robinson, Sept. 6.—The body of Mrs. George Ellis of Niagara Falls, Ont., was found yesterday morning floating in the Chippewa River here. She had been of unsound mind for several months.

Arm Mangled In Thresher.

Kingston, Sept. 6.—While feeding a thresher Joseph McRory of Pittsburg Township got his hand caught in the cylinder and the lower part of the arm was badly mangled. It was amputated at the hospital.

Farmer Kicked By Horse.

St. Thomas, Sept. 6.—William Gage, 50 years of age, a farmer, and former resident of Ridgetown, was found lying dead beside his wagon while drawing beans yesterday morning. Examination showed several ribs crushed, supposed to have been caused either by a kick from one of his horses or a blow from the doubletrees.

Farmers Call Upon Government To Repeal Indemnity Act.

Favor a Reduced Tariff and Affirm That Protection Is a Prolific Source of Political Corruption and Moral Degradation—Think Railways Should Pay a Bigger Tax, and Lay Views Before The Government.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—The last sitting of the Ontario Farmers' Association was held yesterday morning at Victoria Hall.

The following resolutions were submitted and carried:

Condemn Indemnity Act.

"That this association reiterate its previous emphatic condemnation of the indemnity and pension legislation of 1905, and call upon the Federal Government to rescind the whole act."

"That we heartily approve of the position taken by the executive committee of this association before the Tariff Commission last November, and that recognizing protectionism to be a prolific source of political corruption and moral degradation of our national life, as well as unjust to the great masses of the Canadian people. We strongly re-affirm our belief that the tariff should be revised in a downward direction with a view to eliminate wholly the protective principle."

"That the resolutions passed by this association be formally conveyed to the Labor Congress, to be held at Victoria, B. C., and that the congress be requested to co-operate with the Farmers' Association in presenting the tariff question to the Federal Government."

Dr. Goldwin Smith.

Dr. Goldwin Smith addressed the convention, and in the course of his speech mentioned that a member of the United States House of Representatives had recently called upon him and enquired as to the feeling of the people of this country with reference to trade relations with the United States. He had replied that any reasonable proposition would be fairly considered by the farmers of the country. He expected a proposition would be made to Canada at no distant date, and he hoped the farmers would consider it favorably.

The Officers.

The following were the officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Jas. McEwing, Wellington; vice-president, J. W. Wyatt, Prince Edward; secretary-treasurer, W. L. Smith; directors, W. C. Good, Brant; J. W. Kennedy, Glengarry.

Wait on the Government.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the association waited upon the Ontario Government, which was represented by Hon. Mr. Hanna, Hon. Mr. Monteith and Hon. Mr. Cochrane. The visitors, headed by President McEwing, were about 35 strong and very much in earnest, both in approving some legislative acts and in expressing disapprobation of others.

Mr. McEwing, introducing the deputation said that while some of the Government measures were approved, others were thought wrong and should be righted.

J. W. Hyatt, Prince Edward, was called on to explain the attitude of the visitors on railway taxation.

"Taxation, we believe, should be on agricultural lines," declared Mr. Hyatt, who spoke of large grants made by the Government and the country for a railway line. The people believed there should be one basis of taxation for all land.

SWINDLERS FOR MILLIONS.

Three Trust Wreckers Charged With Guilty Knowledge.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—Warrants in connection with the recent failure of the Real Estate Trust Co. were issued yesterday for the arrest of Adolph Segal, the promoter, who borrowed more than $5,000,000 from the company on insufficient collateral; William F. North, treasurer of the Real Estate Trust Co., and Marshall F. Collingwood, the assistant treasurer.

Segal's bail was fixed at $25,000, and that of North and Collingwood at $10,000 each.

The affidavits aver that Segal, North and Collingwood, with Frank K. Hipple, the president of the company, who committed suicide, and other unknown persons, defrauded the Trust company "out of many millions of dollars," and applied the money to their own use.

ONTARIO LIBERALS MEET.

No Change In the Local Leadership of Party Is Announced.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—The Central Reform Association of Ontario met in the Labor Temple yesterday morning and was a thoroughly secret affair. Reporters, with the exception of two who had credentials as representing party organs, were not admitted. It was stated that there was no mention made of any change in the leadership of the party in Ontario.

The old officers were re-elected, and speeches were delivered by Mr. G. W. Ross, M. P., Hon. Mr. Hyman and Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, in addition to President Mowat's presidential message.

SCHOOL TEACHER ARRESTED.

Trounces Pupil and Boy Is Now Confined to His Bed.

St. Catharines, Sept. 6.—J. V. Ames, a school teacher in the Village of Wellandport, has been arrested, charged with aggravated assault upon Dean Horton, one of his pupils, on Thursday last, as a consequence of which the boy has been confined to his bed.

It is claimed that Ames jerked the boy from his seat and shook him so ivoorug wfiflc, HR SHRD HR HRRDR vigorously that he tore his collar and tie from his neck, and that on leaving the room at the teacher's order, he was again trounced and kicked.

Ames has been let out on bail.

Plate to "Dominion."

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—The Minister of Marine has decided to present a piece of silver plate to the officers of the battleship "Dominion" on behalf of the Canadian Government, in recognition of the courtesy and thoughtfulness displayed by them during the conveyance of the late Mr. Prefontaine's body from France to Canada.

Australians For Canada.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—J. S. Larke, Canadian commercial agent at Sydney, Australia, points out that, proportionately, the increase in imports from Canada to the Australian Commonwealth last year was greater than that of any other country.

During the last three months 312 Australians removed to Canada.

Boy Given Two Weeks In Jail.

The Case of Fielding.

Certain Liberal papers profess not to understand why the Conservatives "pursue Hon. Mr. Fielding" in the election court, after the length of time that has elapsed since the election. They think the past might be "sealed with seven seals," and affairs allowed to go on as if the elections in Nova Scotia had not been gained by the most corrupt methods.

How Mr. Fielding is to prepare a tariff for the coming session, therefore let him alone; leave the honorable gentleman free to revise his schedules, and, in short, proceed to business.

This reasoning, says the London Free Press, is of a parity with the political plea for mercy which an Ontario schoolmistress has written in favor of a man who set fire to his barn in order to get the insurance. He was tried for a serious crime, and sentenced to the penitentiary. But the poet asks that he be let off. Why? Oh, he had a mother and a crippled brother to help! Therefore, open the prison door and say to him go and sin no more!

The one is about as rational a pleading as the other.

If Mr. Fielding broke the law by providing large amounts of money to purchase votes and thereby 'win victories' over the Conservatives of Nova Scotia, why should they be asked to condone it? The province was swept from end to end as by a hurricane. Was it all fondness for Mr. Fielding and his friends? It appears that fondness for the hard cash supplied through Mr. Fielding was accountable for the large vote in his favor and for the Laurier Government

It came out in evidence that money was furnished 'by the barrel.' After all the expenditure for votes which produced this result, the victory was celebrated by a dinner which cost $650.

Who supplied all these riches for election purposes? The "Conservatives" had none. They went to the wall before the tremendous force of the cash brought against them. Mr. Fielding did not provide it himself. He is rated as "a poor man." Granted that personally he is free from the charge of political impurity, that he has failed to enrich himself through the opportunities of office.

Mr. Fielding is not "pursued" on this theory at all What the petitioners is after is to discover who was behind the Minister of Finance in his ability to overthrow the Opposition so completely as was done in the election of 1904.

Where did the money come from? When asked this and similar questions, Mr. Fielding "by advice of his solicitor" refused to answer. He defied the court with the same effrontery as Preston displayed in refusing to answer a committee of Parliament in regard to the mysterious North Atlantic Trading Company.

If any Liberal organ asks what is behind the presentation of the case against Mr. Fielding, as the Ottawa Free Press does, the answer is, that that is behind it. Why should so prominent an offender against the laws escape on the plea that he has some public business to perform?

There is another public business of interest to the people of Canada besides that of preparing tariff schedules They are concerned for the purity of elections, for the punishment of wholesale corruption, and in upholding the law no matter who should suffer, high or low.

A Bark Lost Forever.

While on its way to a fire yesterday afternoon, the hook and ladder outfit ran over and killed a bulldog owned by Mr. McCormick. The fatality took place on Front St. The canine ran out to bark at and run in front of the horses; they were going faster than he thought; one of the horses' feet struck him and rolled him over, and before he could get out of the way the wheel of the wagon passed over him. Surveyors' Report Will Decide Matter

SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY TALKS ON THE PROPOSED C.P.R. EXTENSION TO THIS CITY.

Montreal, Sept. 5. — The report that the C.P.R. contemplate supplementing their Toronto-Montreal line by building a branch from Tweed to a point near Pickering was verified by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy to-day, but only to the extent that engineers and surveyors were working over the proposed route, and that their report would determine the company's future action in this connection.

For a long time the towns along Lake Ontario have been urging the C. P. R. to build this branch to enter into direct competition with the G. T. R for carrying trade that originated in the locality. The towns mostly interested are; Pickering, Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Port Hope, Cobourg, Brighton, Trenton and Belleville.

Swell Wedding In Peterboro Yesterday

Peterboro, Sept. 5.—A society house wedding was celebrated this afternoon at the family residence, when Margaret Cox, second daughter of the late Aaron Cox, and niece of the Hon. Senator Cox, was united in marriage to William Moxon Johns, president of the Cleveland Lithograph Company, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The Rev. Prof. F. H. Wallace, of Victoria University, performed the ceremony at 1.30 o'clock in the prettily adorned south drawing-room of the residence.

The bride was attired in a handsome Princess robe, entrain, of white pointe de plique, with touches of lace of silver, and an underskirt of white chiffon, over taffeta, the only ornament being a heart-shaped brooch of sapphire and pearls, the gift of the groom.

The bride was given away by her uncle, the Hon. Senator Cox.

The bridesmaid was Miss Ethel Johns, sister of the groom, gowned in a lingerie robe of white batiste, with embroidery of insertion of eyelet.

Miss Emma Cox, sister of the bride, was the flower girl and the four shepherdesses were: Misses Ethel Ames, Toronto; Louise Hanley, Rochester; Minnie Pearce, niece, and Lilian Cox, sister of the bride. All were gowned in pale pink chiffon voile, trimmed with pink ribbon, with hat, shoes and gloves to match.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mrs. Harry Thompson, and at the conclusion of the ceremony Miss Trebilcock, of Toronto, sang, "O, Promise Me," after which the wedding breakfast was served.

The bride received many beautiful and costly gifts, among wheih was a magnificent Chickering baby grand pianoforte from Senator Cox.

Mrs. Johns will be at home at "Somerset," Cleveland, after Nov. 1.

LOST HIS NIECES

PECULIAR EXPERIENCE OF A YANKEE BETWEEN KINGSTON AND TORONTO.

(Kingston News.)

"Though I and my two young nieces started on the str. Kingston yesterday for Toronto, I find myself back in Kingston and my nieces in Toronto. What shall I do?"

With those words on his lips a prosperous looking stranger rushed up to a News reporter at 7.15 this morning and endeavored to gain some comfort.

"Here's how it was," continued the excited and much worried man: "I belong way down in Pennsylvania. Well every year as a reward for passing their examinations I give my two little nieces a good long trip. We came through to Rochester and took the steamer Toronto for the Thousand Isles. We saw the river scenery and arrived safely at Charlotte after a short visit in Kingston. At Charlotte I had a friend, so I disembarked and had a chat with him. Returning to the wharf I clambered aboard and went to my stateroom. What was my surprise a few minutes hence to hear the door open and see a strange face enter.

"Get out of here," he said.

"Get out yourself," said I. "This is my stateroom and what business have you here?"

We agreed to call the bell boy, who examined our tickets and told me I was in the wrong boat. Instead of boarding the Toronto, bound for Toronto, I had got on the Kingston bound for the very place I had just left. The worst of it was that those two precious nieces were on the other boat, quite ignorant of my whereabouts. I arrived in the Limestone City this morning at five, after being unable to sleep all night, and I find I can't get a telegram to them in Toronto before 8 o'clock, nor can I reach there by train until 3.20 this afternoon. It's a —— of a fix for a man to be in ain't it?"

Sure enough it was.

The fact of the two big steamers crossing at Charlotte has more than once caused similar mishaps.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WOMEN AND DRINK.

CAUSES FOR INCREASE OF INEBRIETY—ART IN COCKTAILS.

London physicians offer various explanations of the admitted increase of inebriety among women, says the Buffalo Express. One, who is a well known authority, states that a potent cause is the freedom with which children are permitted—in many instances encouraged — to acquire a taste for alcoholic beverages. He added that during the last few years a large number of deaths attributed to apoplexy, or heart failure, were due primarily to excessive drinking.

"Fifty per cent. of women drink more alcohol than is good for them," he said, gravely. "Not only the mothers but the children are affected. The woman who becomes intoxicated is not the hopeless case, but the society woman who can drink a large quantity of spirits and still keep her head.

"I venture to assert that the women drunkards of to-day are the grown-up children of twenty years ago. I attribute the present grievous increase in feminine intemperance to the teaching of children to acquire a taste for strong liquors.

"I can cite examples among my own patients. I recently dined with a family where the children were present at dessert. The baby—a child of four years—climbed on his father's knee and, snatching at a glass of benedictine, swallowed the contents at one gulp. For a moment his eyes filled with tears, then he held out his glass, crying, 'Good —more.' A roar of laughter went round the table, and the boy was complimented on his pluck.

"I have been forced to forbid the nurse of one of my tiny patients to allow her charge to have a daily sip out of her mother's glass of brandy and soda. The elder child—a boy of seven—calls the footman for a glass of beer at luncheon. Two elder children have a four-course dinner with champagne served in the schoolroom every night.'

Another specialist has some curious experiences to relate of queer drinks and he traces the increase in drunkenness to the kitchen.

"When a woman becomes a rabid inebriate she will imbibe any form of spirit," he said. "I recently attended a woman who was locked in her room and deprived of all alcohol. Her favorite beverage was methylated spirit. In spite of our precautions her symptoms did not abate. One day I noticed a row of bottles on her dressing table. I learned from the nurse that her patient was constantly receiving bottles of hair lotion.

"This lotion was found on analysis to contain rectified spirits of wine, eau de cologne, and sal volatile. My patient had gratified her craving for alcohol by drinking her hair tonic.

"There is no doubt that the cook may often be blamed for implanting the germ of intemperance. Maraschino jelly, port wine blanc mange, and rum omelette figure on all the hotel menus. Marmalade or raisin puddings are steeped in whisky and set on fire. Even wholesome fruit is tainted, and ladies eat their strawberries in gin, or cherries in brandy. Tipsy cake is, in many cases, the origin of tipsiness in women."

A novel theory was advanced by another physician, who said:

"Women are so affected by their surroundings that, I believe, the most insidious form of drunkenness—liqueur drinking—is often indulged in because the beverages are pretty. Creme de menthe, served in a slender pink glass, or orange gin in a miniature Venetian glass goblet appeal to the feminine ideal of art.

"A patient of mine is dying, her disease being contracted by too free indulgence in cocktails. I believe she has delighted more in the making of her favorite intoxicant than in the drinking.

"She makes her cocktail in an opal glass, the interior of which she paints with rum and coats with fine sugar. For years she has taken with each gin cocktail enough Angostura bitters to poison an ordinary woman, but frequent indulgence has seasoned her. She once told me she did not care for bitters, but she liked to watch the crimson drops color the liquid."

IT IS FOR LADIES, TOO.

They Can Stop Their Hair Falling Out With Herpicide.

Ladies who have thin hair and whose hair is falling out, can prevent the hair falling out, and thicken the growth, with Newbro's "Herpicide." Besides, Herpicide is one of the most agreeable hair dressings there is. Herpicide kills the the dandruff germ that eats the hair off at the root. After the germ is destroyed, the root will shoot up, and the hair grow long as ever. Even a sample will convince any lady that Newbro's Herpicide is an indispensable toilet requisite. It contains no oil or grease, it will not stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

"The Holy City" His Last Number.

New York, Sept. 5.—More than a thousand persons crowded around the band stand at McComb's Dam Park, the Bronx, yesterday afternoon, to hear Freidjen's band give its concert. The feature of the programme was Joseph Alessio's cornet solo, "The Holy City."

When the cornetist, who had become a great favorite with the music-lovers, walked to the front of the stand, he received applause. He always played well, but yesterday he seemed to put his whole soul into his work. There was not a sound from the crowd as the man played. For a moment after he finished there was silence, then applause, which broke into cheering. Alessio bowed and returned to his seat at the rear of the stand.

The cheering continued, and the band leader motioned to the soloist to give an encore. He did not respond and the other musicians finished the air. This did not satisfy the audience, and it took up the hand-clapping and cheering anew. The man who was sitting next to the cornetist noticed that the man's eyes were closed and shook him.

Alessio pitched forward and fell to the floor. It was thought he had fainted, and a physician was summoned, but the soloist was dead. Coroner Schwannecke and Dr. Reigleman were sent for and the physician said Alessio had died of apoplexy The musician was forty-nine years old. He lived at No. 1869 Lexington avenue with his wife and children.

R. E. Church Synod.

Toronto, Sept. 6. — The first Synod for the Dominion of Canada of the Reformed Episcopal Church convened yesterday morning in Christ Church, this city. The Right Rev. Samuel Fallows, D.D., LL.D., rector of St. Paul's Church, Chicago, and presiding Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, presided.

Gratifying progress, both numerical and financial was reported by the various officers and committees at yesterday's meetings. A new church has been established at Alliston during the past year.

An address was delivered at the afternoon session by Bishop Pope, missionary Bishop of the Independent Methodist Episcopal Church.

The report of the Constitutional Canons Committee was presented and discussed, further consideration to be given to it to-day. An evening session was held in the form of a public service, at which Bishop Fallows presided and addresses were given by a number of leading delegates.

On Sabbath morning next Bishop Fallows will administer the rite of confirmation to a number of candidates.

A Satisfactory Report.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—For the first time in twelve years the Superannuation Fund Board of the Methodist Church has the eminently satisfactory report to present of the payment of all claims and a surplus remaining of $4,750. A number of new applicants for standing and special grants were considered and dealt with by the Board, which held its annual meeting on Tuesday morning and afternoon in the Board room, Wesley building.

The Clerical Treasurer read the minutes of the Investment Committee, also the annual statement of the finances, which were considered particularly satisfactory. The report for the quadrennium was also presented, and was referred to the General Conference.

The commission appointed by the General Conference of 1902 presented its report, which was received and forwarded to the General Conference. The changes proposed are not very radical in their nature, consisting chiefly of a more equitable scale of assessments, and provision for a special reserve fund to be accumulated from the surpluses in the annual account, and to be available to meet any possible deficiencies that may arise in the future.

"Hecla" Furnaces certainly do cut down coal bills.

Take the Cast Iron Combustion Chamber, for instance.

I make it heavily corrugated (or fluted). This almost doubles the heating surface — enables practically twice as much air to be heated with the same amount of coal or wood.

As the combustion chamber is really a continuation of the fire-box, I make it of extra heavy iron, corrugated to allow for the contraction and expansion and to ensure greater durability.

Then my FUSED JOINTS make the "Hecla" dust-tight, smoke-tight, gas-tight.

SCHOOL OPENS.

(McL. Wilson in N. Y. Sun.)

Across the village schoolroom floor
The checkered shadows flit,
While on the benches, stained and hacked
These dignitaries sit.

A president is in the rear
With freckles on his nose,
Beside him sits a pirate chief
Who wiggles all his toes.

The generals are scattered thick,
An admiral is near,
A cowboy and a learned judge
Each flank an engineer.

Then comes a curly-headed chap,
God bless the little tad!
His high ambition is but this;
He's "go'n" to be like dad."

O dad, the job thus rests on you
And failure would be sad;
Don't let the great men beat the chap
Who's "go'n' to be like dad."

Men who have ever marched in a long procession will appreciate the following story. A New York veteran was arrested on Memorial Day on a charge of drunkenness:

On being brought before the magistrate, he was asked whether he had anything to say in his defence.

"Why, your honor," was the reply. "I wasn't drunk; I've never touched a drop in my life. You see I was marching in the parade, and there was a band in front and a band behind, and I was trying to keep step with both."

He was discharged.

JUVENILE JARGON.

(New York Sun.)

I hear the children's voices
As the little darlings play
And the tears arise unbidden
At what I hear them say,
Especially when they shout out
"Yah! Don't yer get so gay!"

There's music in their modern mode
Of saying 'paw" and "maw," There's melody in "You're a peach!"
And could you find a flaw
In that conclusive argument
"I'll smash yer in the jaw?"

There's juvenile authority
In "come off! Don't you sass!"
And really there's a certain charm
In listening to a lass
Of some twelve tender Summers say,
"Ger-long! You're full o' gas!"

I wonder whether in our youth
We were brought up amid
Such repartee as "Ah, skiddoo!
Shut up yer face, fresh kid!"
Did we use these expressions then?
Did you? I know I did!

A BIDDING TO A WELSH WEDDING.

(Youth's Companion.)

In writing of Welsh scenery and customs, Mr. Edward Thomas finds occasion to notice many characteristics of social life that are as strongly marked as are the features of the landscape. None of the curious usages is more characteristic of primitive Wales than is the one mentioned in this paragraph:

I passed through a village in which I found that the old fashioned bidding marriage was not dead. For a printed sheet with this announcement in Welsh fell into my hands:

A Bidding to a Marriage.

Inasmuch as we intend entering the state of wedlock on——, we invite wedding gifts, which will be repaid with thanks on a like occasion.

T. WILLIAMS.
ELIZABETH JONES.

It is expected that gifts due to them and to their parents and brothers will be paid on the wedding day.

There are many Americans who know by experience that practice in this country often differs from the custom in Wales only in the greater frankness with which the Welsh state the case.

POWER OF MIND.

Always a Valuable Asset in Presence of Danger.

Presence of mind is always an asset. It is especially valuable in presence of danger such as springs from the presence of men intent upon murder. This was never better exemplified than when a gang of men set out to take the life of Mazzini. He got to hear of their project. All the precautions he took was to get ready a store of very excellent cigars. The ruffians presently appeared at his address. "Come in, gentlemen," he said and produced his cigars. To each man he handed one. Taken aback at their reception, they seemed abashed and confused. "I know that you came to kill me," he said. "Why do you not proceed to your task?" This was too much for even this bloodthirsty deputation. They could not kill the man whose cigars they were smoking and who invited them to carry out their task. Muttering some excuse for having interrupted his studies, they shuffled out of the room and troubled him no more.

Each man has his own method with would be assassins. With Napoleon it was the eye which counted. While he was visiting the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha one of the duke's retainers made up his mind to slay him. He had so frequently heard the great man denounced as the curse of Europe that he felt impelled to seize the chance to destroy him. He was a common soldier at the time and had to do sentry duty in one of the corridors of the palace along which Napoleon passed. He put his finger to the trigger as the duke, accompanied by Napoleon, drew in sight. He aimed for Napoleon's heart. Napoleon saw him. He said nothing, but simply fixed his eagle eye upon the youth. The latter seemed spellbound. He let the musket fall with a crash to the floor of the stone corridor. He felt, he said, as if he must have swooned. Napoleon took no further notice, said no word, passed upon his way as if nothing had happened. That one flashing glance had saved his life. He knew its effect and value.—St. James' Gazette.

LANGUAGE EVOLUTION.

Use of the Suffix "Less" in Verbs, Nouns and Adjectives.

Many will remember that some years ago there went on a violent controversy about the word tireless. The discovery had been made that "less" was a suffix which could properly be appended only to nouns; hence the form must be discarded, and we must all take pains to say untiring. The duty of so doing was preached from scores of professional and newspaper pulpits. No one seemed to think or care for the various other adjectives similarly formed and therefore liable to the similar censure which they never received. Hostility was directed against it alone. The actual flaw which vitiated the arguments against tireless its censors never knew or took into consideration. This was that the fancied rule covering the creation of such words had practically long ceased to be operative whenever a new formation struck the sense of the users of language as being desirable.

Unquestionably in our earliest speech the suffix "less" when employed to form adjectives was joined only with nouns. But the general sloughing off of nominal and verbal endings which went on in later centuries reduced a great proportion of substantives and verbs in the speech to precisely the same form. In consequence the sense of any fundamental distinction between the two broke down in many ways—in one way in particular. There is nothing easier in our speech than to convert a verb into a noun or a noun into a verb. It is a process which has taken place constantly in the past and is liable to take place at any time in the future, either at the will or the whim of the writer or speaker.—Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's.

A Horse Story.

Our Dumb Animals tells a remarkable story about the intelligence of a mare who saved her colt from death by stopping a train on a railroad in Texas. The colt had fallen with its legs through a railroad bridge, and the mother started down the track to meet the coming train. As the train came up she stood on the track whinnying. The train stopped, and then the mare trotted ahead of it as it moved slowly to the bridge. Here the colt was discovered and extricated from its perilous position. The story was vouched for by the engineer, railroad men and passengers in the train.

He Was at Church.

Saunders, the village slater, was a very poor attender at the church. One day the minister met him and said:

"Come, now, Saunders, why is it you are never at church nowadays?"

"Never at the kirk?" replied Saunders. "Ye're quite wrang there, sir; I spent the hale o' last week on the tap o't."—Glasgow Times.

This Was in 1806.

Says the London Times of May, 1806: "A decently dressed woman was last night brought out into Smithfield for sale, but the brutal conduct of the bidders induced the man who was, or pretended to be, her husband, to refuse to sell her; on which a scene of riot and confusion highly disgraceful to our police took place."

It does do good baking

This is the range that bakes better because the diffusive oven flue draws in cold air from the kitchen-floor, carries it around the oven, and pours it HOT down into the oven FROM THE TOP in a current that moves all round the whole oven and up and out the flue. When that clean, hot air leaves the oven it takes with it all the moisture, all the odors, which in OTHER ovens stay in and saturate the baking food. Perfect draft control, perfect oven, draw-out oven rack for easy basting,—all points singular to

MRS. ROSE E. WATKINS.

She Is the First Woman River Pilot In Illinois.

The honor of being the first woman in Illinois to secure a license as river pilot and master is possessed by Mrs. Rose E. Watkins, wife of Captain George T. Watkins of Lasalle county. She holds a certificate from the United States government giving her the authority to handle boats up to a capacity of 100 tons upon the waters of the Illinois river or its tributaries.

MRS. ROSE E. WATKINS.

Mrs. Watkins was formerly Miss Rose Scoenheider of Peoria and was raised near the banks of the Illinois river. She taught school for several years, and when her husband, following their marriage, purchased the steamer they now own she assisted him in running it and soon completely mastered the details of navigation. Her charming personality made her popular with excursionists. Mrs. Watkins has a reputation for coolness at all times and has never lost her presence of mind while handling a steamer. Her husband acts as engineer, and his wife steers the vessel. She is proud of the honor of being the first woman pilot in Illinois.—Chicago News.

Children and Sleep.

Probably sleep is the desideratum most regularly abused by the children of the modern town and city parents. Parties, calls and social engagements of many kinds are allowed to invade the hours of rest which the growing organism absolutely requires if it is to attain its highest possibilities. Not only are boys and girls of fourteen and fifteen allowed occasionally to dance until long after midnight, but from day to day the hour at which they go to bed is permitted to vary almost as much as they may desire. It demands no prolonged experience to prove that even a person of mature years cannot practice indefinite irregularity in the amount of sleep gained daily without paying the penalty in the form of depleted vitality, and sooner or later, if the habit be carried to an extreme, in the form of nervous breakdown. How much more necessary, therefore, must adequate sleep be in the case of the growing body?—James Rowland Angell in The World Today.

For the Sewing Room.

In the sewing room fasten to the wall back of the machine or beside it a set of hanging pockets, at least a dozen in number. Mark each plainly with the sort of thread it is meant to hold—"black silk, No. A" or "white cotton, No. 60." At bottom of the pockets hang a book of flannel leaves numbered from one to ten and holding needles of sizes to match their numbers. Another set of marked pockets for bindings, stay casing, buttons, hooks and eyes, crayons, chalk, basting cotton and so on should be put up on the wall where it can be reached from the low sewing chair provided for hand work. Each set of pockets can be backed with a square of denim. Sew small brass rings to the corners to slip over screw hooks in the walls. Thus they can be put up without defacement. In a permanent sewing room it is helpful to tack up on the wall the plates after which the garments of the moment are to be fashioned.

Why Women Get Tired.

A wise counselor tells tired women that it is not the work they do that tires them; it is the way they do it. The woman whose work is never out of her mind is the woman who is always tired. The farmer's wife doing a week's work in her imagination after she goes to bed, the bookkeeper searching in her dreams through columns of figures for an obstinate balance—all these are tired because they do not know what it is to have a mind at ease. A story is told of a conscientious worrier who, hurrying about her work, slipped and fell. The result, a broken hip, placed her for weeks out of reach of "the things which must be done." Weeks of lonely rest brought her a new perspective of life and a conviction that peace of mind is more than pies and cakes. Realizing at last that the worst enemy of good work is worry, she afterward said, with a peaceful smile, "My broken hip saved my life and soul."

When Baby Is Feverish.

In a little baby a feverish cold may possibly be pneumonia. Such a case should have careful attention and treatment under a good doctor. It is nevertheless true that many times baby will have great relief when breathing is hard and fever is high and the bronchial passages seem to be closed if the stomach is emptied. An eminent physician says that an emetic at bedtime has saved many a little life. In a little helpless child the secretions sometimes gather, and the baby has not the capacity to throw them off as an active child or an adult would do, so that what really amounts to a form of strangling takes place. If the stomach is cleared the reflex action of the effort often clears out the passages. It is well known that in an attack of spasmodic croup an emetic is often effective, and one of the well known and successful croup remedies acts on this principle.

Women House Decorators.

Mrs. Davidge, who studied for more than ten years before she attempted to decorate a single house, says: "A natural gift of arrangement or tasteful instincts may be very important elements in the makeup of a furnisher, but they are by no means a sufficient ground for taking up that career. Only after long preparation and the study of the history of furniture, architecture and design is a furnisher qualified to handle the question of interior decoration." Therefore let the girl who thinks to enter the ranks of decorators without arduous training beware.—Good Housekeeping.

Emancipation of Women.

While it is impracticable to consider the laws in detail, generalizing, it may be said that woman now possesses (1) complete control of her person and of her property, real and personal, (2) freedom to enter into contracts, (3) the right to sue for injuries to her character, person or property, (4) the joint custody of her children, though this is a recent development and it must be admitted that the excepted states far outnumber those where the rule is in force, (5) in four states the right of equal suffrage and in twenty-two others and two territories a restricted right, applicable only to school affairs.

Mock Prairie Chicken.

What to Eat gives a recipe for "mock prairie chicken," a glorified fricassee. Steam one or more large fowls several hours until tender. In a large skillet place a tablespoonful of butter, several slices of bacon, half a dozen peppercorns and some whole cloves. Cut up the chicken, if it was steamed whole, roll the pieces in salted flour and fry until brown. Just before serving pour in a cupful of cream. Allow it to boil up once and serve immediately.

For Anaemic Children.

This drink for anaemic children is said to be good: Place four ounces of sugar in a jar, add half a gallon of boiling water. Stir. Now add sixteen drops of strong solution of perchloride of iron. Fill up with water to make one gallon. If the proportions are kept a smaller quantity may be made. The liquid contains one drop of iron in each half pint. The dose may be one wineglassful three or four times daily.

Avoid a Shiny Face.

A greasy skin may arise from various causes, but generally from lack of cleanliness or debility of the skin. Only an astringent has any effect upon it, and a very simple, harmless one may be made from one pint of rosewater, half a pint of white wine vinegar and a few drops of essence of rose. This lotion may be applied occasionally with a piece of soft linen or a very fine sponge.

Modeling Clay.

If parents would invest in a small amount of ordinary modeling clay they would feel well repaid in seeing what a source of amusement it is for the children. They rarely tire of the work and very quickly learn to model useful household articles. Vases, jardinieres and even flower boxes can be made, and when covered with enamel paint prove useful.

A Kilt Skirt.

In pressing the plaits in a kilt skirt it often seems difficult to make them keep the fold long after the pressing has been apparently satisfactory. In order to make the plaits hard and stiff press on the wrong side with a heavy iron and over a very damp cloth. The important thing is to be sure that the cloth is entirely dry before removing the iron.

To Save Sifting Ashes.

A piece of rather fine wire netting cut to fit the ash tray under a range will save all sifting of cinders, as only the fine dust will drop through it. The netting should be cut slightly larger than the tray, so that an edge can be turned up all round it to keep it in place.

A good scheme in buying children's underwear is to select the drawers without seams up the back. When the knees begin to be worn cut off the drawers just above the knee, sew them on again, putting the worn part underneath the knee, thus making them last almost twice as long.

The safest way to cleanse bronze is to rub it with a soft cloth moistened with sweet oil, polish afterward with an oil chamois. All dust must be removed before attempting to clean and polish it.

Inflammation in the knees is a rather disagreeable form of retribution for wearing high heels. Lifelong lameness sometimes results from overindulgence in high heels.

When cooking, do not leave a spoon in anything that you want to boil quickly. A spoon conducts the heat away from the liquid.

Petticoats of all kinds are of the greatest importance toward the fit of skirts to costumes.

A TROUBLE BREEDER.

Quick Wit and a Ready Tongue Make a Sad Combination.

Don't be elated if anybody tells you you have a quick wit and a ready tongue. Especially if you are a woman. This is about one of the saddest combinations a woman can be cursed with, it seems.

It gets her into pecks of trouble.

The nice, amiable girl, who never thinks keen, sarcastic thoughts about people or whose tongue is too slow to frame her thoughts instantly into flashing words is a favorite with everybody. Even if she isn't good natured (generally she is, though), she gets the credit for being so. Because she is never tempted to electrify the atmosphere with sarcastic sparks about people and things, she is universally supposed to be a creature of sunshine and sweetness, full of kindness and charity to all.

Well, sometimes she is this paragon, and again, sometimes, she is just sluggish!

Anyhow, it isn't fair to label her opposite, the sarcastic girl, as inevitably malevolently inclined. She isn't invariably.

Her affections are just as strong and her human kindness as broad. She wouldn't willingly hurt anybody for the world. Yet an unkind nature has given her the keen, quick thought and the ready tongue—a combination as sure to go off as powder and matches.

And the worst of it is that in the explosion nobody gets so badly burned as the keen-witted woman herself.—Pittsburg Press.

KITCHEN TINS.

Be Sure They Do Not Become a Home Poison Factory.

The dread ptomaine poisoning develops through the action of acid in tin, a fact that all householders should lay to heart, for the poison can very easily be developed in any kitchen unless great care is exercised in regard to tin receptacles.

A number of women were reported ill from eating salad at a reception. So many were the victims and so severe their illnesses that rigid investigation was set on foot, which disclosed the fact that the salad dressing, containing a good deal of lemon juice, had been allowed to stand in a tin pail. The physician who had made the investigation was satisfied that enough poison had been generated to kill forty persons, the only circumstances that prevented such a frightful catastrophe being that the bottom of the liquid had not been disturbed.

Every can of meat, vegetables or fish should be turned out immediately after opening into a dish or earthenware vessel. Refrozen ice cream is a fruitful source of ptomaine poisoning, as are loose oysters.—Vogue.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Sulphur soap and ichthyol soap are both good to use when the face is unsightly with pimples.

An occasional washing of the face in hot rain water, softened with two or three spoonfuls of oatmeal, is good for the complexion.

Don't rub your face downward. It makes the cheeks hang down. The forehead should be rubbed from the center to the temples.

First class complexion specialists do not steam the face except for treatment of acne. Cold water, electricity and scientific massage are more stimulating.

If the cheeks are hollow it is because the muscles have become weak. To strengthen them wet with cold water and rub gently and deeply round and round with a soft Turkish towel.

Do not breathe through your mouth even at night when asleep if you wish to preserve the teeth. If you cannot keep it shut in any other way, do as the Indians with their pappooses—tie it shut.

Watch the Kitchen.

A social leader who was renowned among her friends as a practical housekeeper was congratulated at one time on her skill in fine cookery. She answered laughingly: "I have no time to do cooking. I spend some time in my kitchen daily for quite another purpose. I go to examine the sinks, the garbage pails and the general condition of the premises. My servants were very much disgusted at first that a lady should take interest in such matters, but they are used to my eccentricities now and manage to keep things as I desire to have them." If more housekeepers made these tours of inspection it would pay them in the increased health of their household.—New York Tribune.

Excessive Perspiration.

The girl who suffers from excessive perspiration should go in for the salt water beauty bath every morning. Throw a handful of salt into a wash basin and moisten slightly. Rub well all over the body, jump into the tub and turn on the cold spray. Use the bath brush freely; be out in thirty seconds and dry well with a towel that takes hold like a guilty conscience. Powder the armpits with a mixture of half a pound of pure borax, an ounce of baking soda and a dram of primrose sachet powder. Alcohol rubs are very good.

Less Haste In Marriage.

Young girls are less eager to marry than they used to be. At one time a girl who remained unmarried when she had been out one or two seasons was almost a reproach to her parents and an unfashionable blot on the marriage market. But the unmarried have tacitly formed a union which has as silently insisted upon the standard of the disgrace of their state being lowered.—London Lady.

THE CORSET.

Women Usually Too Careless About This Important Garment.

There is more carelessness possibly about this one garment than any other. Many women will without question pay $50 for a gown and get a $1.50 corset to go with it. Then they do not understand why the gown does not keep its shape.

It is amazing how the majority of women economize in this one addition to their dressing. They would throw up their hands in horror if told to have a pair of corsets made for $8 or to give $5 for a good pair fitted by an expert at a shop. Yet they will think the little hat they "picked up" for $6 such a nice change for their best one.

Even the most practical women do this and won't see their extravagance as such. The "just as good" fallacy is applied more here than at any point of their dressing.

Do you put on your corset right? An expert fitter will give you these directions: First, always loosen the lacing as soon as you take off the corset. This is imperative if you would have it not only keep its shape, but yours.

Put it as far down on the figure as it can be got. Then fasten the top button and the second one, holding in the abdomen with a deep breath and throwing the figure out in the back. Then slip the left hand under the lower part and hook with the right hand. Now fasten the elastics. Many corsets have these at the sides as well as the front.

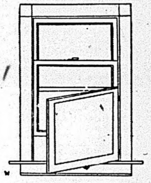
Then the lacing begins. Pull in from the lower part first. This pushes the flesh up. Pull slowly and surely from the strings in the center. Press the waist line in continually at the sides with the thumbs as you pull. Then tie in the center.

You may think this is entirely too much trouble to do every day. You are accustomed to flinging the corsets on in one minute, having them already laced from the week before. It is trouble. No one will deny that. But looking well in this world is a trouble. It is more work in the end to repair the ravages of careless, slovenly dressing.—Boston Traveler.

A BEDROOM HINT.

How to Avoid Drafts and Too Much Early Morning Light.

An ingenious householder recently added two conveniences to his house which may be suggestive to other home makers. There was a sleeping room in which the bed and windows were so related that if a window was opened at night there was a direct draft on the bed, and in the summer a flood of early morning light. To obviate these annoyances he made a wooden frame such as he would have built for an ordinary window screen and stretched white oilcloth tightly over it. The frame was made the size of the lower window sash and provided with two hooks on one edge which fitted into corresponding screw eyes on the side of the window frame nearest the bed. These hooks and eyes served as a hinge. An eight inch hook on the lower edge of the frame fastened into an eye on the window sill a few inches from the hinge side and held the screen at an angle of about forty-five degrees. The oilcloth obscured the light sufficiently and the current of air was diverted from the bed. The amount of ventilation, of course, was regulated by adjusting the window sash.—Good Housekeeping.



A GOOD WINDOW SCHEME.

Shoeing the Baby.

The sole of a baby's bare foot is more or less wedge shaped, broadest at the toes and narrowing toward the heel. A shoe made on nature's plan should conform in a general way at least to the shape of the foot, being neither too loose nor too tight. The toes of a little child, instead of being cramped together, should have room to spread out, and mothers should see that the baby's shoes are made on this plan. The shoe should also be a trifle longer than the foot, allowing room for growth and motion.

Of late years the idea of putting moccasins on the baby's feet has grown in favor, and there is much to commend it. And really soft leather will suffice, though chamois is the most popular.

If made to lace well up above the ankle, the moccasins will stay on the active little feet much better.

A Too Tight Ring.

When a ring which is too small for the finger seems impossible to get off, the use of cold water to the finger and hand—the hand and arm being elevated at the same time—may cause sufficient shrinking to permit of the removal. If this does not succeed the following may: A piece of fine pack thread or linen thread is to be wrapped evenly and firmly round the finger from the tip as far as the ring, through which the end is to be inserted, which being done the pack thread must be gradually unwound by means of the end thus placed. If this process does not succeed the ring must be filed off. It cannot remain without risk.

BISON FURNACE

With a Bison Hot Water Furnace in the basement, there is little need for brush or scraper.

No place in it for soot or dirt to lodge, and its flues are practically self-cleaning.

In most furnaces the water jackets are constantly covered with soot and ashes, requiring constant cleaning to enable the fire to heat the water—a dirty job.

The Bison has more good heating points than all other heaters combined.

Pandora Range

Managed Like an Engine.

One-third of a housekeeper's life is spent in her kitchen.
One-half the labor of housekeeping is at the cook stove.
Your range can double or halve the cooking slavery of housekeeping.
A poor range adds worry as well as work, and worry multiplies the housekeeper's care.
Get a range that reduces the work and eliminates the worry.
The Pandora Range is as easily and accurately managed as an engine—it responds to the touch as quickly and certainly as the huge engine obeys the hand of the engineer.
The Pandora Range saves worry, and because worry kills, it prolongs life. Sold by enterprising dealers everywhere. Write for booklet.

TURNER'S SETTLEMENT.

Mr. Wm. Ward, a pioneer of this place sold his estate here to Mrs. Broadworth, of Madoc, and will be moving to Belleville the 1st of October. He will be greatly missed here as he always took a leading part in all church and Sunday school work. On Monday evening last about one hundred of his old neighbors and relatives gathered at his residence here and presented him and his wife each with a beautiful present, and after spending in social intercourse a most happy time, and wishing them a pleasant life in the city, brought the evening's doings to a close.

The farmers, who are stripping the cows down to the last drop, are wearing the smile that won't come off, when they know cheese is selling at 13 cents per pound, and if the merchant, minister, blacksmith and editor are not all paid up in full next December, there must be a peg loose somewhere that ought to be tightened up.

Mr. A. Ward has returned from his trip to Manitoba and says crops are heavy and laborers scarce. Big wages are offered to able-bodied men, but he does not think he will sell out and leave Ontario to better himself.

Very successful religious services are being held at Holloway in a large tent each evening during the week, by two speakers from Belleville, and a large number of people attend the same.

Mr. J. A. Bird has his new barn painted.

SECOND LINE THURLOW.

Mr. John Kelly took in the picnic at Read's Corners.

Mr. W. Henderson, our cheesemaker, took a trip to the N. W. T.

The lawn social held at Mr. Dodd's was a grand one. There was a large turnout.

Mrs. Wm. Gates, of Kingston, and Miss Alida Sutton, of this place, took in the Toronto fair this week.

There was a good many of the Second Line took in the lawn social at Mr. Hall's, on the Front, on Tuesday night last.

Mr. Fred Milburn is putting up a fine drive-house.

HAROLD.

A number from here are spending this week in Toronto.

Miss Osborne spent Friday and Saturday with her parents at Melrose.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Mason and Master Sherwood have returned to their home in Eldorado.

Mr. F. A. Ashley, of B.B.C., Belleville, spent a couple of days with friends in this village.

Mr. Glen Roberts has returned to his home in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Archer, of Marmora, spent Labor day with Mr. and Mrs. J. Bailey.

Mr. Willie Heath is attending Stirling High School.

Don't Leave the Farm.

Newark Advertiser: The large city is like the lion's den of the fable; tracks are numerous leading to it, but very few point the other way. It is easy to give up a good home and sure prospects for the lottery of city life, but when once settled in the dusty brick prisons of the city, to return again is not so easy as it seemed at first. Most city men talk and plan to return to the farm, but very few manage to do it.

Most young men who leave the country to live in the city have made a mistake in so doing. Our advice is, don't do it because you can't make a living on the farm; a man not smart enough to be a successful farmer will be a worse failure in the city.

Don't come because you dislike hard work; the average city man works harder the year round than does the average country man. Don't come expecting to get rich in the city; not one in a hundred ever does. Don't come expecting to be happier in the city; you will not be so after the novelty wears off. Don't be tempted by a little larger salary; money melts in the city air. Don't come expecting to associate with the four hundred; you can't do it, and you will have no time to spare if you could. Don't think store and office work is easier in the long run than hoeing corn and raking hay; it is harder and will probably wear you out many years sooner. Don't think you will be any more respectable than you are on the farm; you will not unless you deserve it. Don't imagine you will save your employer's life or property and be taken right into partnership like the boys in the story books; you will be just as likely to find a gold mine in your farm. Don't think you are bound to succeed, just because you come from a farm; you have thrown away the training which has fitted you for one business in order to learn another for which many city boys have been fitting themselves for years.

When a young man comes to the city from the farm much depends on the first few weeks of the new life. If he makes good friends he will be safe; if he gathers them by chance from the street, the shop and the boarding house, he is liable to go wrong. But the young man from the country is always lonesome and a little homesick, and he longs for company. There is just one thing to be done. Let him go regularly to some church; not, perhaps, to the most fashionable one of his denomination, but to any live, active church where strangers are desired. Let him attend persistently especially the young people's meetings, and in a few weeks he will have acquired a new set of friends of the most desirable kind. To make his way among strangers is not easy for the farmer boy, but he needs good friends as much as he needs a situation in order to succeed. The writer has known many young men who have gone to the city, but never one who has gone very far wrong after having acted according to advice such as that given above.

A Theatrical Golf Story.

When Mr. Lionel Mackinder was very new at golf, says T. P. O'Connor's paper, M. A. P., it was his fate to fall in with wags of the links who tried to lead him astray as to the rules and regulations of the game. When he got into a bunker they would tell him he must do all sorts of ridiculous things before attempting to get out again, and, for a time, and a long time, too, it was the comedians's habit when he knocked his ball off the course to put it carefully on his head and then let it roll down his back to the ground, according to directions he had gravely accepted from friendly 'instructors.' At last, through meeting with men who were not jokingly inclined, it dawned upon him that he had been humbugged very extensively by his earlier fellow players, so that, when they met him on the links again, they found him a very difficult subject for a lark. He was so keenly on his guard that he would take no advice from them whatever, good or bad, and it took a serious member of the party, one who had never tried any tricks on him before, an entire afternoon to convince him of the genuineness of the request to players to "replace the divots." He steadfastly refused to go back after a stroke to repair the face of the earth, and winked knowingly even at the caddies (thinking them to be in the conspiracy) when his friends, in all earnestness, begged him to attend to this most important rule. It was only when he saw a stranger to the party doing what he himself had refused to do that he recognized the legitimacy of his companions' instructions.

Never call a convention of your friends to find out what you think yourself.

BLAZING METEORS.

The Short Lived Splendor of a Shooting Star.

A small body as large as a paving stone or not as large as a marble is moving round the sun. Just as a mighty planet revolves in an ellipse, so this small object will move round and round in an ellipse, with the sun in the focus. There are at the present moment inconceivable myriads of such meteors moving in this manner. They are too small and too distant for our telescopes, and we can never see them except under extraordinary circumstances.

At the time we see the meteor it traverses a distance of more than twenty miles a second. Such a velocity is almost impossible near the earth's surface. The resistance of the air would prevent it. Aloft in the emptiness of space there is no air to resist it.

In the course of its wanderings the body may come near the earth and within a few hundred miles of its surface, of course, begins to encounter the upper surface of the atmosphere with which the earth is inclosed. To a body moving with the appalling velocity of a meteor, a plunge into the atmosphere is usually fatal. Even though the upper layers of air are excessively attenuated, yet they suddenly check the velocity, almost as a rifle bullet would be checked when fired into water. As a meteor rushes through the atmosphere the friction of the air warms its surface; gradually it becomes red hot, then white hot and is finally driven off into the vapor with a brilliant light, while we on the earth, one or two hundred miles below, exclaim:

"Oh, look! There is a shooting star."

A FISH HOOK.

The One You Should Buy and the Test You Should Try.

The most common flaw is the temper of the hook. Some hooks are brittle and break easily. There are other hooks still that bend, and bend so easily that they "straighten" on every big fish, and yet other hooks that bend, but bend so hard that a big fish never flexes them, and they only straighten and come away when the full tension of the line is laid upon them if caught on a tough snag or tree bough. These last are the hooks to buy—if you can find them—and the hard breaking hooks classifies next in merit. Tests by the eye are quite useless, as so many hooks carry exactly the same tints in blue or black. Test the hook instead by the hand, catching the point in a firm bit of wood and trying it out both by the hard, firm pull and by the jerk. Watch particularly in this trial for weakness at the foot of the barb, where the wire is apt to be attenuated overmuch and the whole point give way on a strong fish, especially if hooked in bone or very hard gristle. What vasty depths of angling profanity, in spirit if not in word, have been stirred in boat and on bank when the pointless hook comes away from the hard played fish must be left to memory.—Outing Magazine.

Telling Time by Flowers.

"With a little time and labor it would be possible to construct a garden whose flowers would combine to make a first rate clock," said the botanist. "It is 3 a. m. when the sow thistle opens," he continued. "It is 5:30 when the dandelion opens. It is 7 when the white lily opens. It is 8 when the hawkweed opens. At 11:12 a. m. the sow thistle closes. At noon precisely the yellow goat's beard closes. At 2 p. m. the hawkweed closes. At 5 the white lily closes. The dandelion closes at 8 sharp. Since Pliny's time forty-six flowers have been known to open and shut with great punctuality at certain hours of the day and night."

Bills of Different Birds.

The bill of the canary is built for crushing seeds—has strength, but in many of the doves the bill is slender and weak. Many of the pigeons and doves that feed on seeds have gizzards that are large and muscular—crushing and grinding being accomplished in that way.

It is difficult to say how much birds experience taste, probably in a small degree. Ducks and parrots have soft, fleshy tongues, but in most birds much of the tongue is sheathed in horn. Food may be selected by intuition as to what is wholesome, more than by taste.

Purity of Milk.

In Paris the municipal chemists accept milk as pure when it contains one ounce of butter and four ounces of solids per quart. At Bern milk must contain at least 3 per cent of butter and may contain 90 per cent of water. At Berlin the police seize all milk offered for sale which is below the legally required standard of 2.7 per cent of fatty matters. This allows the dairymen to add with safety from 10 to 13 per cent of water to fairly rich milk.

Safer.

"Of course, I don't want to criticise, but I don't think it was altogether right for David to say 'all men are liars.'"

"Well, at any rate, it was safer than to pick out one man and say it to him."

An Old Clock.

The great clock at Rouen has been measuring time and striking the hours and quarters for over 500 years and, it is said, has been running all this time without interruption.

Modern Gallantry.

The Man (in the street car)—Take my seat, madam. The Woman—Thank you, but I also get out at the next corner.

Calumny is the worst of evils. In it there are two who commit injustice and one who is injured.—Herodotus.

MAKING PORCELAIN.

The Most Exciting and Romantic Trade In the World.

The maker of porcelain and pottery has decidedly the most exciting and romantic trade in the world.

The great factories of Sevres and Dresden were founded by Bernard Palissy. This man invented white enamel, but it took him sixteen years to make the invention—sixteen years of hunger, misery and persecution, which culminated in the episode, used in H. A. Jones' play of "The Middleman," wherein Palissy maintained his furnace fire by burning all the furniture in his house and finally opened the furnace door to find within the glaze which he had sought throughout the best years of his life.

Bottgher invented hard porcelain. He was an alchemist, and one day, chancing to discover that his powdered wig was unusually heavy, he inquired the cause and found that the weight was due to the kaolin with which the wig was powdered. This kaolin was the substance for lack of which Bottgher's investigations had for years failed.

When Elers opened a porcelain factory at Burslem he employed none but the most stupid and illiterate workmen, so that his secret processes might not become known. But Samuel Astbury resolved to learn the Elers method, and, affecting ignorance and stupidity, he got a place in the factory, mastered all of Elers' secrets and eventually opened a plant of his own, wherein he duplicated in every detail the work of Elers.—Exchange.

MANY, MANY DOCTORS.

A Sixteenth Century Wager That Might Be Won Today.

The story is told in Joubert's "Popular Errors Concerning Medicine," published at Bordeaux, France, in 1579, that one Gonelle, a jester at the court of the Duke of Ferrara, insisted once upon a time that the trade which had the most followers was that of doctor. To prove his assertion he left his home one morning to go to the palace with his nightcap on and his jaws wrapped up. The first person he met stopped him with the question, "What is the matter with you, Gonelle?" "A terrible toothache." "Oh, is that all? I'll tell you what will cure it." And every person he met had some advice to give him.

When the jester reached the duke's chamber, the same question and answer were repeated. "Ah," said the prince, "I know of something that will take the pain right away." Gonelle instantly threw up his kerchief, saying: "And you, too, monseigneur, are a doctor? I have only passed through one street in coming from my house to you and have counted more than 200 of them. I believe I could find 10,000 in the city." Whether the story is true or false, it could be told again in our days, and Gonelle would win his wager without dispute.

The Stars Were Once Human Eyes.

The most remarkable belief or superstition concerning the human eye is one that is current in Australia. Among the natives of that country it is the general belief that the left eye of every chief becomes a star the moment the chief in question is done with it. The sun, they say, is the eye of the "greater god" and the moon the eye of the "lesser god." All the stars were once the left optics of human beings of high rank. Shungle, a celebrated chief, once ate the eye of a valiant chief, thinking thereby to increase the brilliancy of his own "eye star." But the eye burned through Shungle's belly and killed him, whereupon his own left eye became joined to the one he had eaten, and the two may now be seen as a beautiful double star lying just to the east of the Southern Cross.

Liquid Corn.

An easterner was prospecting in the north Georgia mountains when he came on a native apparently clinging to the side of a steep hill tilling corn.

The prospector stopped for a chat, and the mountaineer, nothing loath for a rest in the shade from his fatiguing toil, was agreeable.

"Say, friend, how in the world do you get the corn down off that hillside after it is ready for harvest?" asked the stranger.

"In jugs," was the laconic and probably truthful reply.

Seals Learning to Swim.

Young seals do not know how to swim. They have to become gradually accustomed to the water either by entering it to paddle about by themselves or by being carried into it in their mothers' jaws. They have great fear of the waves that break into foam, and as soon as they see one approaching take to flight in terror and do not turn round until they have ascended to a very high place above the sea.

It Happens.

"You are a very successful prophet," we said. "Will you tell us the secret of your success?"

"Certainly," the sage replied in a kindly tone. "As it is always the unexpected that happens, I merely prophesy the unexpected."

Foresight.

Winebiddle—I hear that you dictated to your new typist an impassioned love letter to another girl. Gildersleeve—Yes, it was a fictitious sweetheart. I wanted to nip in the bud any designs she might have on me in a matrimonial way.—London Mail.

Give Up.

When a burglar asks the conundrum, "Where's your money?" it is generally the wisest plan to give it up.

A virtue always outweighs a talent.—Monarion.

THE FIRST BALLOON.

Result of the Experiments of the Montgolfier Brothers.

Proceeding on the principle that heated air expands and so becomes lighter, bulk for bulk, than air at the ordinary temperature, the brothers Stephen and Joseph Montgolfier filled a paper bag with heated air, which rose to the ceiling of the room. This preliminary success was rapidly followed up, and they gradually increased the size of the balloons experimented with until they were so satisfied with their progress that in 1783 they gave a public exhibition, sending up a linen balloon 105 feet in circumference, which was inflated over a fire supplied with small bundles of chopped straw. The balloon succeeded beyond their utmost expectation, and after rising to a height of over 6,000 feet it descended ten minutes after in a field a mile and a half away. The next balloon carried a car, in which were a sheep, a cock and a duck.

The success of this further experiment induced M. Pilatre de Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes to risk their lives by making the first ascent in the new and wonderful machine. Their balloon, which was forty-five feet in diameter and seventy-five feet high and was inflated with hot air, passed over Paris to the great astonishment of the people, attaining an altitude of half a mile. Ballast was then for the first time employed in regulating the ascending power of the balloon. The first venture was followed by others, and De Rozier, the first to ascend, was also the first to meet his death in this manner, having been killed, with a companion, by the burning of his balloon near Boulogne.

BACKBONE.

The Self Reliant Man Is the One Who Is In Demand.

Haven't you depended upon clothes, upon appearances, upon introductions, upon recommendations about long enough? Haven't you leaned about long enough on other things? Isn't it about time for you to call a halt, to tear off all masks, to discard everything you have been leaning on outside of yourself, and depend upon your own worth?

Haven't you been in doubt about yourself long enough? Haven't you had enough unfortunate experiences depending upon superficial, artificial, outside things to drive you home to the real power in yourself? Aren't you tired of leaning and borrowing and depending upon this thing and that thing which have failed you?

The man who learns to seek power within himself, who learns to rely upon himself, is never disappointed, but he always will be disappointed when he depends upon any outside help. There is one person in the world that will never fail you if you depend upon him and are honest with him, and that is yourself. It is the self reliant man that is in demand everywhere.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Tobacco Smoke.

The composition of tobacco smoke is complex. Analysis gives nicotine, pyridic bases, formic aldehyde, ammonia, methylamin, pyrrol, sulphuretted hydrogen, prussic acid, butyric acid, carbonic acid, oxide of carbon, the steam of water, an etherized empyreumatic oil, and tarry or resinous products, among which we detect small quantities of phenol. Of all the products of tobacco the most venomous are nicotine, pyridic and methylamin bases, prussic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, oxide of carbon and empyreumatic oil, and all that we draw into our lungs with more or less satisfaction.

Under the Rose.

The expression "under the rose," or sub rosa, to indicate secrecy, originates in the Greek mythological story that Cupid gave Harpocrates, the god of silence, a golden rose, desiring him at the same time not to betray the amour of Venus. According to another account, the traitors against the Greek states during the invasion of Xerxes held their meetings in an Athenian arbor formed of rose bushes. At Greek and Roman banquets the guests were always crowned with roses, and a cluster of these hung above the banqueting table was a sign that what was said in that place should not be repeated elsewhere.

Decline of the Bath.

One strange feature in the advance of civilization has been the decline of the bath. Washing in the golden age of Greece and Rome was a fine art, and baths were built with as much care as temples. There has been a revival in this century of public baths, but from an aesthetic point of view they cannot compare with those of a barbarous age. This is not an age of washers.—London Lady.

Should Have Said Shoes.

"Miss Backbay,' said Mr. O'Bull, who had been strolling along the country road with the lady from Boston, "I suppose your feet are very dusty. Permit me"—

"Sir!" cried the precise young woman witheringly. "How dare you!"

Unreasonable Freddy.

Tommy—Ma, Freddy's crying 'cause I'm eating my cake and won't give him any. Mother—Is his own cake finished? Tommy—Yes, ma; and he cried when I was eating that too.

A Traveler's Tip.

A guide is too often a man who tells you what you do not want to know in a language you do not understand.

Where life is more terrible than death it is then the truest valor to dare to live.—Browne.

Jack Tar, Humorist.

There's never any telling what our bluejackets will do when "out for a lark." A number of them were in Londonderry a week or two ago, and a couple of them, walking along Foyle street, noticed a woman standing on the footpath with a baby in her arms. One of the "tars" in passing snatched the baby out of her arms and made off at full speed toward the Great Northern railway. For a moment the astonished mother stood in bewilderment. She then raised an alarm and ran screaming after the bluejacket. He was joined by others, who seemed to appreciate the joke immensely. The whole body rushed through street after street, the mother still pursuing. In Ferryquay street the "tars" halted, dashed into a shop, bought a perambulator, placed the child in it and retraced their steps at a rattling pace until they met the infuriated mother. They then pulled up, quieted her fears and handed her over her child in the handsome new perambulator, which she wheeled off in pride and triumph, the bluejackets meantime cheering.—London Answers.

What "Paste" Is.

"Paste" from which imitation precious stones are made is widely known, but few are acquainted with the ingredients, though it is generally understood that the paste gains its brilliance from the lead it contains. Formulas vary for the paste, but all contain rock crystal, red lead, carbonate of potash, borax and white arsenic. It is required that these articles shall be of a high grade of purity, as there is a considerable waste, so that the gems made from "strass," as the composition is technically known, are by no means inexpensive. The lead gives to the strass its brilliancy, while the rock crystal contributes brilliancy. A paste diamond cannot scratch glass and is thus easily detected, but colored stones are made of crystal alone that are considerably harder than glass. In the making of these a crystal stone is hollowed out and filled with some colored liquid, the orifice being closed with a plug of crystal, which is ground down so that there is no trace of the junction.

Why the Eggs Didn't Hatch.

A famous Michigan egg raiser occasionally sells some of his product to his grocer, and some smart town people who thought they could get his eggs for hatching cheaper by buying from the grocer were disappointed when they found that none of the store eggs hatched out. Some one told the old man about the disappointment, and he expressed no surprise. He only said: "They should come to me for their setting eggs. Whoever hear o' buying settin' eggs in a grocer shop? When I sell eggs for eatin' I just dip the ends in boiling water—kill the germ. Them was eatin' eggs the grocer had. If these people want settin' eggs they should come to me honest like."

Eating Snails.

Four Britons ate snails at a French restaurant in Brighton, England, not long ago. Their experiences are described as follows: "In due course the plates appeared, each bearing half a dozen snail shells of a dingy white. A slender two pronged fork accompanied each dish. With this the snails were jerked out, their big black horns coming first, accompanied by a small eruption of gravy. One of the experimenters looked critically at the uninviting object at the end of his fork, then he shut his eyes and popped it into his mouth. His teeth met on something yielding, but tough, rather suggestive of india rubber. All four epicures manfully ate their six snails."

Baking Bread.

The action of yeast on dough converts some of the starch into sugar. Then the sugar is made into carbonic acid gas and alcohol. When the dough is baked the alcohol is driven off. If the bread is underbaked some of the yeast may remain unkilled, and such bread by being kept may have more of its starch changed into sugar. Thorough baking kills all yeast, and keeping of such bread does not cause any ripening. Stale bread is more digestible than new bread solely because it is more easily masticated.

Children and Influences.

The reason why children so easily contract the mien, gestures and habits of their surroundings is that they have no power of resistance—everything outside them is stronger than themselves, and they have to borrow from all outward influences for their own growth; hence they are good, cheerful and contented or bad, morose and discouraged, just according to their surroundings.

His Little Claim.

Mrs. A.—Don't you know, I really have an attachment for this piano. The Maid—Yessum, and the gentleman who was here while you were out said he had an attachment for it also. Mrs. A.—Indeed! Who was he? The Maid—The sheriff, mum.

Treasure Good Health.

How few of us stop to count good health as a great blessing! We are so busy grumbling over some financial wrong that we forget that all the money in the world would profit us but little if we were invalids.

Honest About It.

Kind Lady—Poor man! Are you really anxious to earn a good dinner? Truthful Thomas—I'm more anxious fer de dinner dan I am t' earn it, ma'am.

All travel has its advantages. If the passenger visits better countries he may learn to improve his own, and if fortune carries him to worse he may learn to enjoy his own.—Johnson.

DESTRUCTION OF POMPEII.

Buried So Deep That It Was Lost For Sixteen Centuries.

When one hears of a buried city it is very difficult to realize what it can look like—still more so to realize how a city can be buried so deep as to be utterly lost and the place of it know it no more for sixteen centuries. Yet this is what happened to Pompeii and Herculaneum, Stabiae and Retina and thirteen other cities of the plain on the ninth day before the calends of September, in the first year of the reign of the Emperor Titus. Thus it was when Pompeii was buried. When next the sun shone into her streets George III. was king of England. Sixteen years before the burial of the city an earthquake had done so much mischief that the ruin was not yet quite restored, but Mount Vesuvius had been quiet ever since. The 24th of August was a terribly hot day.

Most of the people were in the amphitheater at a wild beast fight when they saw a strange cloud rise from Vesuvius. It seemed like a pine tree. The trunk rose up high into the heavens and then spread out in branches—some white, some dull and spotted—until, slowly detaching themselves from the parent trunk, they began to darken the sky. Pliny the elder, over at Misenum, was reading in his study when his sister came in to tell him of this strange cloud. He ordered a light galley to be got ready, and as he was coming out with his tablets in his hand ready to note down all he saw the mariners belonging to the galleys at Retina came up to implore of him to go to their help.

By the time Pliny got there with his galleys the ashes were falling thicker every instant. Then came broken and blackened stones and pumice. Vast fragments were rolling down the mountain, and the sea had suddenly retreated. The pilot was for putting back, but the undaunted old philosopher admiral would not go back. "Fortune," he said, "favors the brave." Everybody knows something about the rest and how the poor old gentleman, being weakly and asthmatic, was suffocated by a sudden outburst of flames and sulphur fumes. In that awful darkness, when the sudden rush of flames was the only light which pierced the dense smoke, the fields were full of terrified people fleeing they knew not whither. It is true that the destruction was not instantaneous, and a great number of the inhabitants saved their lives, and even took away a good deal of their treasure, but it is estimated that at least 200,000 persons were entombed in Pompeii, Herculaneum and the other cities of the plain.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

It isn't a good thing to repeat half you hear.

There is only one way to raise a child—as if it belonged to some one else.

A fool doesn't envy you because you are smart; a fool never knows he is a fool.

A man who knows he does not deserve confidence has very little confidence in other people.

It is enough to make today act mean the manner in which every one slights it in looking forward to tomorrow.

There is one reward no man seems to be in a great hurry to get to, and that is the reward piled up for him in heaven.

It seems that to exaggerate your blessings is looking on the bright side, but that to exaggerate your troubles is plain lying.

Do You Get Up Early?

It is not healthy in any country, at any season of the year or at any time of life, to get up early habitually. The old are better rested by lying late, even if not asleep, while the young require all the sleep they can get. In all latitudes, in warm weather, the morning air, although feeling cool and fresh, is laden with the pestiferous miasma. In winter the atmosphere before breakfast is so cold and chilly and searching that it fairly shrivels up man and beast, chilling to the very marrowbone sometimes; hence the average duration of human life would be increased and the amount of sickness largely diminished by late rather than early rising, as all the older nations full well know and practice.—Exchange.

Equal to the Occasion.

A lady entering her kitchen one morning saw a knife, fork and plate as well as the remains of a rabbit pie. Suspecting that a certain policeman had supped at her expense, she questioned the maid. "Jane," she said, "what has become of the cold rabbit pie?" "I gave it to the dog, mum," replied Jane. "Does the dog use a knife and fork, then?" demanded the mistress. "Not very well yet, mum," said Jane, quite unabashed, "but I'm teaching him to."—London Telegraph.

Pedestrian.

"Do you understand the meaning of the word 'pedestrian?'"

"Yes, sir. A pedestrian is a man who stands on the curb and watches the autos go by and wonders how he'll ever get across the street in time for his 6 o'clock dinner." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fond of Cabbage.

"Where'd you get that half dollar?"

"Papa gave it to me."

"What for?"

"I left my rabbit in the house all night and it ate that box of cigars mamma gave him."

Generosity often clasps hands with extravagance, while economy sometimes walks shoulder to shoulder with avarice.

The Eyes and The Nerves

When feeling nervous or tired go to the window and look away into the far distance. Continue this for a few minutes and note the soothing calming influence that comes over you. Then turn again to something that requires a close range of vision, and at once the nervousness will return. Business men when tired often close their eyes for a moment, as they have learned by intuition that it rests the entire system. Closing the eyes has this calming effect, because one-third of the brain is for the time being shut off from work, and using unnecessary energy. It proves "brain strain" undoubtedly present, though the vision may be seemingly excellent. This form of brain strain we relieve by the proper glasses.

A BOY AND A DOLLAR.

Police Constable Naphin had quite a run for his money yesterday afternoon. A call came to the station saying that a theft had been committed near the station, and an officer was wanted. Constable Naphin responded. He found that a boy named Ernie Littles was charged with stealing a dollar from his aunt, Mrs. Walter Stapley. The boy was pointed out to the officer, sitting on a fence some distance away, and the "cop" tried to execute a flank movement and secure his prisoner. When the youngster saw the blue coat and brass buttons, however, he ran like a jack rabbit. The constable took after him and, after an exciting chase, during which he lost enough perspiration to water a lawn, almost secured the boy and took him before Magistrate Flint, who released him from custody and told him to appear in court this morning.

This morning the matter came up in the court. The Magistrate, after hearing all about it, told the boy to give back the dollar and dismissed the case.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"DOLLY VARDEN."

The score of "Dolly Varden," the comic opera success to be seen at the Carman on Tuesday, Sept. 11, was written by Julian Edwards, the composer of many notable successes. Its originality, and that peculiar quality called "catchy," made the music of "Dolly Varden" extremely popular with all lovers of bright harmony, and the excellent comedy in the book commends it to everyone who likes a clean and refreshing performance. The same elaborate production which completed the first triumph of this opera will be seen in the presentation here, and one of the largest and most powerful singing organizations of the season is promised.

Marmora Girl Met A Very Sad Fate.

WAS SOON TO BE MARRIED, BUT WAS ASPHYXIATED IN TORONTO.

Toronto, Sept. 6. — Miss Mary Connor was found dead, asphyxiated, this morning by her sweetheart, Frank Cook, to whom she was to be married in a few weeks.

Miss Connor and her fiance came from their home in Marmora, Ont., yesterday afternoon to see the Exhibition. They spent yesterday afternoon together at the Fair, and then came back to their boarding house at 21 Soho street to spend the night, intending to visit the Exhibition and Island to-day.

"Call me early Frank," said Miss Connor, on retiring to her room last night.

This morning he went to her door and knocked, but there was no response. He knocked again, and on opening the door a little, smelled gas. He then rushed into the room, which was filled with carbon monoxide fumes, and found his intended bride unconscious. Dr. Theophilus Stewart was called, but the unfortunate girl was past all human aid.

She was but 22 years old, and the couple were devoted to each other. Mr. Cook is broken-hearted over his loss. As it is a clear case of accidental death there will not likely be an inquest. The gas was found partially turned on, and the poor girl must have gone to sleep thinking it was all turned off.

Crump-Burris Nuptials

PRETTY WEDDING IN ST. THOMAS' CHURCH YESTERDAY.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at 11 o'clock a. m., in St. Thomas' Church, this city, yesterday, when Mr. John Crump, a popular young man of Corbyville, and Miss Ethel May Burris, daughter of Mr. Robert Burris, Strachan St., were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, only the immediate relatives being present. The young couple were unattended. The bride looked very pretty in a suit of navy blue ladies' cloth and white silk waist, with hat to match. After the ceremony the young couple repaired to the bride's home, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The bride received many pretty and useful presents, which showed the esteem in which she was held by her friends. Mr. and Mrs. Crump left on No. 1 train for Winnipeg, where they will reside in future. Their many friends wish for them a happy and prosperous married life.

A Small Fire.

The firemen had a run for nothing yesterday afternoon, an alarm being sent in for a small blaze behind the telephone building. It did not amount to anything.

The Auditors' Report.

INTERESTING FIGURES GIVEN — CRITICISM OF GAS OFFICE.

The Auditors' report for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1905, has been issued from The Intelligencer press. It contains much of interest. In their opening remarks the auditors says;

To the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Belleville;

Gentlemen, — We hereby certify that we have made a careful and exhaustive audit of the books and accounts of the Municipality of the City of Belleville, for the year ending December 31, 1905.

The audit includes the inspection and examination of all books, accounts and vouchers pertaining to the City Treasurer, Police Court, Board of Education, Waterworks, Tax Collector, and Gas Departments.

We submit herewith the necessary statements showing the exact condition of the books of the several departments.

We have found all Insurances, Bonds, and Sinking Fund investments in proper order and satisfactory.

We can only repeat our remarks on the Gas department of last year and emphasize the absolute necessity of a better service in keeping the accounts and running the office properly. The assistance in the office is wholly incompetent, and is anything but a credit to the department. The fact that we spent half our time in going through their accounts before the result was satisfactory should convince you that the service is not what it should be.

Instead of an inexperienced female assistant there should be a man who could be utilized to collect and push accounts, besides helping at times to read meters. By looking at the increased arrears the force of these remarks will be apparent.

We submit a list of documents necessary for publication, and all documents in duplicate.

Yours respectfully,
THOS. THOMSON,
JOSEPH D. CLARKE,
Auditors.

SOME FIGURES.

The receipts during the year were $222,948.64, and the expenditures the same.

The assets are set down at $945,706.66, and the liabilities the same.

The Waterworks assets are $202,371.13, the liabilities showing the same figures.

The gas receipts in 1905 were $15,779.58, which was all expended.

The salaries paid were;

On account of city	$4,810.00
Waterworks	2,072.00
Police Commissioners and force	3,575.00
Firemen	1,560.00
R. McCoy	2,250.00

The High School received $5,773.03, and expended the same.

It cost $16,471.66 to run the Public schools.

The report shows that, on Dec. 31, 1905, there was a shortage of $46,000 in the sinking fund, the same being just about the amount of unpaid taxes on rolls not returned.

A Prospective Purchase.

It is said that negotiations are in progress for the purchase of the old Pitceathly terrace, on Dundas St., the intention being to renovate and fix up the property with a view to its rental as apartment houses. The price offered, it is said, is in the neighborhood of $16,500. Magistrate Flint is the bidder.

Died After Stroke.

Mrs. Catherine Callaghan, who lived on Pinnacle St., had a stroke on Monday last, from the effects of which she did not recover. She died yesterday morning. Deceased was born in Ireland 57 years ago, and had been a resident of Belleville for many years. She was a member of St. Michael's Church and leaves three sons and three daughters.

Bridge St. E. L. C. E.

The re-opening of the Junior League of Bridge St. Church, on Wednesday at 4.15 p.m., took the form of a grand rally. The members showed their renewed interest, after two months' holidays, by turning out in full force. Master Harry Hunt, president, occupied the chair. The programme consisted of an address of welcome by the superintendent, Miss Adams; a paper by Miss Nina Yeomans; brief and bright addresses from Rev. J. P. Wilson, Mr. G. F. Stewart and Mr. Wm. Johnson, interspersed with choruses by the boys and girls of the League. Light refreshments were then served, bringing to a close a very pleasant and profitable hour. Following is a list of the officers;

President—Harry Hunt.
Vice-President—Jas. Booth.
Secretary—Clayton Rose.
Treasurer—Stella Luffman.

Conveyor of Committees.

Lookout—Nina Yeomans.
Programme—Bessie Guenther.
Missionary—Phyllis Bogart.
Social—Gladys Vermilyea.

SOME QUEER SIGNING

Monarch Life Certificates Under Insurance Probe.

Vice President Graham Says Manager Ostrom Made a Suggestion Regarding His Evidence — Directors Who Did Not Appear to Know Much of the Company's Affairs — Considerable Confusion in Management.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Some odd occurrences in connection with the management of the Monarch Life came to light at yesterday's session of the Insurance Commission. Mr. Ostrom, Hon. Robert Rogers of Winnipeg and a vice-president, and T. H. Graham, another vice-president, were witnesses. President Gordon will be a witness to-day.

Mr. Rogers declared that he did not see how the company could now be doing business at Toronto, as an adjourned meeting of the shareholders, to be held in Winnipeg, had never been held.

Mr. Tilley told of a directors' meeting held Aug. 9. This Mr. Rogers did not attend, being notified only on the same day. There was another meeting called by some of the directors for Aug. 10. On Aug. 9 the head office was transferred to Toronto, but this was never mentioned on Aug. 10.

Mr. Rogers said that names of directors elected March 21 were omitted and other names substituted. The shareholders on March 21 postponed the sanctioning of the transfer of 1,400 shares to Manager Ostrom, pending consideration by the directors. The executive was to meet with Mr. Rogers to discuss the matter, but never did so. In April they confirmed the transfer, in a resolution setting forth that the shareholders had already passed favorably upon it, which was not the case.

Mysterious 'Phone Orders.

Vice-President Graham admitted in the box that he had signed the stock certificates transferred instead of the president, because he was "in the habit" of signing; he also admitted that he had done so without authority of the shareholders, but said he thought it was Mr. Ostrom's right to have them. He further admitted that he did not sign the certificates until 9.30 a. m., Tuesday, just before the Commission sat. They were sent to his office, and he received a 'phone order to sign them; he swore he could not say from whom. He told of Mr. Ostrom, the manager, taking him out of the court room yesterday morning and sounding him as to what his evidence would be, suggesting that he had signed the certificates "since coming from Winnipeg." The witness told Ostrom that he would tell exactly when he affixed the signatures.

Mr. Graham also told of having been called up over the telephone to confirm minutes which were not all read to him. Indeed, he was down in them as moving and seconding resolutions of which he knew nothing.

Mr. Graham and Mr. Rogers did not agree as to who is first and who second vice-presidents. Mr. Wilson, the secretary, says that in his draft minutes the Winnipeg man had the honor; the typewritten minutes give it to the other.

Ostrom's Certificate.

Mr. Ostrom was recalled at the morning session. Referring to the transfers of the fourteen shares, witness said that President Gordon signed some of them at the Toronto office. The remainder he took to Winnipeg. These were blank certificates. He was going to get them signed there. The only certificate for one hundred shares signed by President Gordon he had forgotten to bring.

Hon. Robt. Rogers of Winnipeg was the next witness. He was one of the original permanent board of directors of the Monarch Life, and had attended but one meeting last March. He did not know prior to the shareholders' meeting where Ostrom got off at. A couple of days prior to the meeting, however, he received a notice that the matter of transfer of 1,400 shares would be one of the items of business. A directors' meeting was held immediately after the shareholders' meeting. The first step was to change the head office from Toronto to Winnipeg.

To Mr. Tilley witness said: "If it were necessary to have my consent to the transfer of the 1,400 shares to Ostrom for his copyrights, that consent was never given by me."

The meeting of the eastern directors on the 9th of August passed a resolution to remove the head office back to Toronto. Witness did not know this. He attended a meeting called by the western directors on the 10th of August. This was a long meeting. The directorate was an important item of business. Two names, Messrs. Burns and Lane of Winnipeg were left off. Two names, Messrs. Alfred Brunet and Gonzolve Desalliers on the list of directors, were not elected at all.

Mr. Rogers volunteered the information that stock was subscribed for Monarch Life shares on the distinct understanding that the head office was to be in Winnipeg.

Signed Without Knowing.

Witness told of the bringing up of the purchase of the copyrights and the handing over of 1,400 shares to Ostrom for same. The president made a positive statement that these transfers had not been issued. He had signed one transfer for 90 shares, not knowing that it was part of the 1,400 shares. This transfer was not in effect. Ostrom and Vice-President Graham were present and did not contradict this. He was unaware that the stock had been issued, signed partly by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Graham. Mr. Ostrom's contract for remuneration was not fully decided on as far as witness knew.

The active operations of the company were to be commenced in Winnipeg. Witness did not see how the company could have commenced business issuing policies when at the March meeting the matter was left in abeyance until the 10th of August, when a meeting of the directors would be held to place all matters in shape before the ball started rolling.

T. H. Graham, L. D. S. of Toronto, vice-president of the company, was called. He had signed several stock certificates, some in Ostrom's name and some in blank. These were signed in witness' office. He was unaware that the president had left some blank certificates signed in case Ostrom was away. He had also signed certain agreements with Ostrom. He could not tell exactly when these were signed. The agreements were signed sometime during the last two weeks. The transfers were signed at different times.

Certificates Signed Tuesday.

Witness signed all of these certificates Tuesday morning at 9.30. He did not have any talk with Ostrom about the matter at all. Ostrom had tried to get them signed before witness went to Winnipeg, but he was too busy to sign them.

"You knew that the shareholders did not want him to get these certificates?"

"I believe so," answered witness. "I knew that I was doing something yesterday morning they did not want done."

"On what authority did you sign these certificates?"

"I was in the habit of signing certificates."

"What did Mr. Ostrom say to you when he took you out of the court-room."

"He said to tell I signed certificates after I came back from Winnipeg. I said that I would tell I signed them yesterday. He said very well. When I signed the agreements I did not read them. I don't know why I signed them."

John I. Sutcliffe was put in the box next. He was the auditor of the Monarch Life since March. He helped prepare the statement for obtaining the Dominion license. Up to March he was supervisor of the bookkeepers. Since that he was auditor, but had not been asked for more than a general statement.

Mr. Vansickle, the bookkeeper since May 18 last, was the first witness at the afternoon session. To his knowledge, the company had never taken out a license for Ontario. He had prepared a statement last May, which he thought was correct.

THE POLICE CHIEFS.

Say County Constable System Is in Need of Reorganization.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—A resolution introduced by Chief Randall of Guelph was adopted by the Chief Constables' Association yesterday requesting the police throughout Ontario to use "every legitimate means" to induce members in the Legislature to support a police pension bill if it is again introduced next session.

A committee to make recommendations to the Minister of Justice regarding the treatment of habitual criminals was appointed, consisting of Chief Trudel, Quebec; Chief Detective Carpenter, Montreal; Lieut.-Col. Sherwood, Ottawa; Chief Harrison, Westmount; and Deputy Chief Stark, Toronto.

Staff Inspector Archibald and Chief Randall moved that the executive take steps to recommend in each province a reorganization of the present "crude system" of appointing county constables.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Montreal in July, 1907. Officers were re-elected. The executive committee was revised a little with the following result: Lieut.-Col. Sherwood, Chief Trudell, Chief McRae, Chief Harrison, and Chief Randall.

Re-Elected by Acclamation.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Sir William Ralph Meredith, the present chancellor of the University of Toronto, has been re-elected by acclamation, and will thus be at the head of the reorganized senate.

FARMERS' DAY AT THE FAIR.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Farmers' Day supplied the biggest list of guests that have yet sat down at the exhibition directors' luncheon. Of the farmers themselves, William Duthie, who owns the greatest shorthorn herd in the world and who is at home at Tarves, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, was the most eminent.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. Nelson Monteith, Cecil B. Smith and Hon. Robert Jaffray, were also among the speakers of the day, all praising the progress of the science of agriculture.

Earl Grey in B. C.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 6.—Lord and Lady Grey and party are guests of the City of Nelson, where elaborate ceremonials have been arranged in their honor. The vice-regal party will visit the mines of the Boundary district today and return to spend Saturday and Sunday in Nelson. They will reach here Sept. 14.

Deserter Sentenced.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—John Bishop, a deserter from the Allan steamship Victorian, who was caught in Toronto, was yesterday given the maximum penalty of 12 weeks in jail.

Date For Bye-Elections.

Montread, Sept. 6.—Provincial bye-elections in Argenteuil and Brome are fixed for Sept. 17.

More Elevators Needed.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—The Grand Trunk Railway Co. has filed plans for increased elevator capacity at Tiffin, near Midland.

Eight Months For Bigamy.

St. Thomas, Sept. 6.—James See of Springfield was yesterday sentenced to eight months in Central Prison for bigamy.

Lucky.

"Of course, like most of your class," remarked the cynical cad, "you are superstitious. No doubt you consider the horseshoe a sign of good luck."

"It is," replied the sporting gent, "if it goes under the wire first on your horse."

Of Absorbing Interest.

"Aside from the principle involved and in addition thereto," remarked the great financier, "the banking business is one of absorbing interest."

TELEPHONES IN CANADA

Annual Meeting of Canadian Independent Association.

Hon. Colin Campbell Describes What the Province of Manitoba Is Doing to Secure Government and Municipally Owned and Operated Lines—How the Independent Telephone Business Has Grown in Canada.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—The first annual convention of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association opened at the City Hall yesterday morning.

There was a good attendance of representatives from the various independent telephone companies in Canada.

Hon. Colin Campbell, Attorney-General of Manitoba, described the situation in that province and outlined the policy laid down by the Government.

President Alph. Hoover, of Green River, occupied the chair.

Hon. Colin Campbell.

The response to the address of welcome was delivered by Hon. Colin Campbell, Attorney-General of Manitoba.

"I presume that this is the only Government represented at this convention," said Mr. Campbell, "but if I mistake not it will not be long before every Government will find it in their interests to be identified with this movement." Mr. Campbell said that Toronto had taken a foremost position in telephone matters in fighting for the people's rights. "The interests we represent are the interests of the people," he said. "We believe that the days of telephone are just beginning. We believe that it should be taken hold of and given to the people at a reasonable cost.

"It is three years since I took up this question with the Premier of the province. We have made some progress, although not all we expected."

The Greater Canada.

Speaking of the west, he said:—"We are the greater Canada lying west of Lake Superior, not in what has been but what has to be. The Government has come to certain conclusions and these will be submitted to the people of Manitoba at an early date, and if these are adopted a new telephone era will be established in that province. This is not a political movement in Manitoba. The commission appointed by the Manitoba Legislature never had a division and it came to the unanimous conclusion that the long distance lines should be owned by the Government and that the municipalities should own and operate the local exchanges, and by so doing remove one of the greatest obstacles to the local telephone business."

Must Be Near Users.

Mr. Campbell said that the management of the telephone system should be as near to the users as possible. The closer it was the easier it would be to remedy any defects and look after any complaints.

The Manitoba Government had agreed to construct the long distance lines, and had asked the municipalities to submit to the people the question as to whether they are willing to operate their local systems, and if there were enough prospective subscribers the Government would endorse their bonds. This was submitted as a municipal question, and the Government looked forward to the result with confidence.

Business Is Growing.

The report of the secretary was received with enthusiasm. It contained the following interesting statistics: Number of absolutely independent or non-Bell companies or private systems, 73; number of shareholders, 3,248; number of subscribers, 1906, 12,073; increase in one year, 5,646; capital invested, $550,000.

The annual report of the Bell Co. of Canada shows that on the 31st of December, 1905, it had 78,695 subscribers, and an increase in 1905 of 12,035.

Mr. F. Dagger of Toronto, read a paper on "The Canadian Telephone Situation From an Independent Standpoint," showing great progress made by independent companies.

Railways and Long Distance.

Resolutions were passed to secure, under the railway board, access to railway stations, etc., so that all telephone companies should be placed on level and equitable footing, and that long-distance lines should be owned by independent companies, the province or the Government according to the conditions prevailing.

$800,000 Windfall For Farmer.

Thamesford, Sept. 6.—By the death of an uncle in New York, Lafayette Goodnow of North Dorchester has been left a fortune of $800,000. Five million dollars were divided between Goodnow, his five brothers and sisters. Goodnow has not even owned his farm up till this time. He was merely a tenant, and although he was always thrifty and comfortable, luxuries were almost unknown.

Horses Stand Test.

Calgary, Alta., Sept. 6.—The Malleine has been applied to all the horses purchased for the British army by the remount commission, by orders of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. No reactions occurred. The test is a complete vindicating of the stand taken by the Alberta horsemen who contend that glanders is not prevalent in the province.

For Consumptive Hospital.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 6.—Lieut.-Governor Dunsmuir has offered, upon $50,000 being raised, to build and equip a tuberculosis sanitarium in the dry belt of British Columbia, to augment this amount by $10,000. The Provincial Government also promises substantial aid.

Hull Relief Fund Closed.

Hull, Que., Sept. 6.—The relief fund for the fire sufferers by Hull's conflagration is now closed, and amounts to over $2,000. This amount was collected in Hull alone.

Declines Professorship.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 6.—Dr. Magill of the Presbyterian College, Halifax, has declined the call to a professorship in Manitoba College.

SEGAL AND HIPPLE CONSPIRED.

District Attorney Says Looting Amounts to $5,000,000.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—The hearing in the Real Estate Trust Co. cases of Adolph Segal, the promoter; Treasurer William P. North and M. S. Collingwood, the assistant treasurer, was held yesterday. They were held for trial. Segal claims that he will prove his innocence; that he has property valued at $10,000,000 and that all his debts will be paid.

District Attorney Bell said he would prove that the accused men, with Hipple, were engaged in a gigantic conspiracy to defraud the trust company, and that more than $5,000,000 had been abstracted from the institution and embezzled for the use of one man—Adolph Segal.

Hipple's Confession.

F. Wharton Hipple, the son of the suicide president of the trust company, identified the handwriting on the paper containing the confession as his father's. The confession is as follows:

"To the state trust commissioner: No one is to blame but myself. Segal got all the money. I was fooled in lending it to him, thinking his business good."

Ship Liners Strike.

Montreal, Sept. 7.—One hundred and fifty ship liners are out on strike in the port of Montreal, the consequence being that some of the steamships due to sail to-day and Saturday are likely to be delayed. They demand pay ranging from 25 to 50 cents an hour.

Chatham Barber Raided.

Chatham, Sept. 7.—Nine bottles of choice liquor, five packs of cards and a gaming table were captured in a raid made at a room over the King street barber shop of Tom Smith at 10.30 yesterday morning. Smith is charged with keeping a common gambling house, and probably selling liquor without a license, and seven well known men of the city are being summoned as frequenters of the place.

Steamer Nelson Mills Sunk.

Detroit, Sept. 7.—The Western liner Milwaukee collided with the steamer Nelson Mills in the St. Clair River today. The Nelson Mills sank at once. James Barber of Port Sanilac, wheelsman on the Nelson Mills, and Mrs. T. J. Moore, wife of the engineer on the Nelso Mills, is reported missing.

Babe Dies In Jail.

St. Thomas, Sept. 7.—The infant daughter of Newton Stonehouse and wife died in jail Wednesday night. The parents are in jail waiting trial for attempted murder. The babe on Aug 2, an hour or two after its birth, was found partially buried in a closet.

Thrown Under Train.

Cornwall, Sept. 7.—A Grand Trunk brakeman named Joseph Leclair met with a serious accident at Morrisburg Wednesday night. He was thrown between the cars, one of which passed over his leg and thumb. Both were amputated, and he will recover.

Cancelled 90 Shares.

How President Gordon of Monarch Dealt With Mr. Ostrom.

Merging of the Home Life and the People's Life Companies and How It Was Done—Mr. McCutcheon Paid $80,000 and $25 Per Share For 1,164 Shares to Manager and President Of the Home Life.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—The examination of the Monarch Life Insurance Co. was concluded yesterday morning. D. A. Gordon, M. P. of Wallaceburg, was the last witness called. David A. McCutcheon, manager of the Home Life, was put in the box to give an account of the merger of the People's Life, with the Home Life one year ago. J. R. Stratton of the Home Life was present, and J. McLaughlin of Lindsay appeared for the company.

President D. A. Gordon of the Monarch was examined briefly by Mr. Tilley. Mr. Gordon succeeded Hon. James Cochrane as head of the Monarch Life. He was acquainted with the transaction prepared by Manager Ostrom in reference to the transfer of 1,400 shares, but gave no instructions that stock certificates should be issued to Ostrom nor was any agreement specified. Prior to leaving for Winnipeg Ostrom wished to sell one hundred shares, and witness took every precaution to ask him if these were his own, and Ostrom assured him they were. He signed two certificates for fifty shares each, and four for twenty and one for ten before he found out these were part of the 1,400 shares. In accordance with his promise to the directors at Winnipeg witness cancelled the 90 shares that he explained to them were signed by mistake.

The meeting on the 9th of August was called with the president's approval. A bylaw was passed moving the head office to Toronto. On Aug. 31 witness wired Ostrom to have meeting called immediately to rescind that bylaw. Mr. Gordon wanted the bylaw repealed and understood it would be repealed.

Witness was unaware that the 1,400 shares had been issued to Ostrom until the evidence came out.

Mr. Ostrom Recalled.

Manager Ostrom was recalled.

"Did you bring the stock certificates?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"No, I did not have time to think about them," replied witness.

"Is the seal of the company here?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any search for the draft form of the agreement with yourself?"

"Yes and I have not been able to lay my hands on it since."

"Has it been destroyed?"

"Not on my part."

Mr. Ostrom wished to ask questions, but Mr. Tilley told him he could make a statement. He wanted to know why other companies longer in the field had not been examined. The newspapers had made many statements that were not true.

"Probably others have also," said Mr. Tilley.

"Not on my part and not on the part of any member of our company has anything that is not true been said intentionally," was Mr. Ostrom's retort.

Commissioner Kent asked witness if he would have sold one share of stock if he had put in his prospectus that he (Ostrom) was to receive $50,000.

Mr. Ostrom assured him that every single shareholder knew he was to get $49,000 of paid up stock and $1,000 in cash.

The Home Life.

Mr. McCutcheon of the Home Life took the stand at 11.30. He has been manager since Oct. 12, 1905, the date of the merger of the People's Life and the Home Life. Prior to that date witness was manager of the People's Life, for four or five months, coming from the Federal of Hamilton, where he was superintendent of agencies. Mr. McCutcheon left the Federal to assume the management of the People's Life, by preferment, at the instance of the president, Hon. Mr. Stratton.

Mr. McCutcheon received $5,000 per annum and commission of five per cent., of the increased interest per annum from the Peoples' Life.

To show the condition of People's at that time, Mr. Tilley read a statement. This showed that the improvement from the beginning of the company was great. In 1904 it was $221,000. The result was very disappointing to people connected with the company, and it was this feature that brought on the amalgamation. Hence the witness' suggestion that the business be reinsured, was carried out. Witness did not carry out the negotiations, however. J. J. Warren, solicitor for People's, put the deal through.

Where the Money Came From.

Witness had paid $80,000 cash and $25 per share for 1,164 shares to Messrs. W. J. Patteson and J. Firstbrook, the cash payment representing the value of their contract as manager and permanent president of the Home Life.

"Where did you raise the money to pay for these shares?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"From the People's Life."

Mr. Tilley read a statement prepared by Mr. McLaughlin, showing the disposition of the shares.

"You were not acting in trust for any particular individual?"

"No."

On being cross-examined witness admitted he bought them for Mr. Stratton.

Judge McTavish: Who owns the stock now?

Witness said the People's Life owned it, although it was in his name. If there was a loss he would have to stand the loss.

"Isn't it a fact that Mr. Stratton was using your name and position for the purpose of carrying it through?"

Witness evaded the question.

Five hundred shares were sold at the same price as witness had paid the Home Life.

"Who paid the $80,000?" asked counsel.

"Where did the money come from?"

"Mr. Stratton guaranteed the money."

"Did the People's Life advance to the buyers of the stock anything to pay for their shares?"

"Yes. To Messrs. Karn, Kleopfer and Warren."

"The question of the propriety of such a transaction was not discussed by yourself and Stratton?"

"No."

"Had they any power under charter to lend on life insurance stock?"

"Our solicitor thought so. I didn't know."

"Was this 1,164 shares stock upon which 20 per cent. call and 25 per cent. premium had been paid?"

"Yes."

"What could this stock be bought at? Were the Home Life shares being purchased by Patteson? Was the stock on the market for less than 25?"

"I don't know."

"What would Patteson have to pay for his shares that he sold you?"

"125."

"Was the $80,000 loaned to you or to you through Mr. Stratton by the People's Life?"

What Bryan's Plan Would Cost the United States

Mr. William J. Bryan's proposal to own and operate the railways of the United States by government is discussed by the New York Times by reference to details which the Presidential candidate in embryo is thought not have taken into full account. That journal figures out broadly the sum which would have to be added to the public debt.

In 1904 the total railway assets of the country amounted to over fifteen billions. The railway liabilities, including capital stock, bonded debt, unfunded debt, current accounts, and sinking and other funds, amounted to $14,862,122,748. Leaving out of account everything except bonds and stocks, the Federal and State governments under Mr. Bryan's plan would have to acquire shares of capital stock amounting to $6,447,045,374, and bonds to the amount of $7,475,810,203.

It is asked, what should be the interest rate upon bonds given by the government in exchange for these securities? The total distribution in dividends on stock in 1904 was $188,386,093, which is equal to 2.9 per cent. upon the total outstanding capital stock. But while some railways pay 10 per cent. or more, others have for years paid no dividends on their common stock. Shares on which large dividends are paid command a high price in the market. But the non-dividend paying shares of many roads nevertheless command a very steady price in the market. The government would have to give something for them. In 1904 the railroads paid $242,992,755 in interest on bonds, equal to about 3.25 per cent. per annum on the entire bonded debt. In justice and equity the holders of these securities should receive from the government a bond that, measured by market value or by annual return, would be a fair exchange for what they now have. Our New York contemporary would like to know how Mr. Bryan would figure it out.

The Fifth Wheel Of the Government Coach.

There is little doubt in the minds of practical people, that the Department of Trade and Commerce, in the Laurier Cabinet, as at present constituted, deserves the description once given it by its present Minister, Sir Richard Cartwright, viz., "utterly useless," the fifth wheel of a coach. Here are a few instances ;

Canadian products at the Milan exhibition have been a cause of astonishment to the people of Italy. The wonder is that a country which yields so many things needed in that part of the world should have so little trade there. Statistics show that Canada's exports in 1904 to Mediterranean countries aggregated only $500,000, less than 1-7th of Newfoundland's. The United States in the same year exported to those countries goods to the value of $68,000,000. And yet Canada, except in such products as raw cotton and tobacco, has as good, if not a better chance in that rich market than the United States.

What is the cause of Canada's backwardness in this matter? Our Government agents seek in Southern Europe for immigrants to work in our cities, and settle on our new lands. Why has it been derelict in seeking new markets for our products there?

The Canadian Gazette in London points out that Southern Europe offers a field for Nova Scotiian coal, which can be sent from there cheaper than American coal, now shipped in large quantities. It is suggested that the Italian Government might be induced to assist the trade at the outset by placing contracts for fuel for the state railways with Nova Scotia collieries, and that in this way also an assured supply of freight for a direct line, at its inception, might be found.

There are also the by-products of coal, lumber, fish, meat (a most promising item of Canadian trade, in view of the Italian consumption of macaroni) and other products in which Canada may expect to compete successfully with the United States and other traders in the Mediterranean.

Commenting on these matters, the St. John Sun (Liberal) observes that "of course to establish such trade a direct steamship service would be necessary. But the great possibilities there seem to justify government assistance in the inauguration of such a service. Certainly they justify some energetic action in the way of investigation."

As a matter of fact, however, no investigation of the sort has been thought of. After ten years of office this profitable field of commerce has been left in utter neglect by the Dominion Government. Direct steamship service has been established with Mexico under reservations with regard to return traffic, but the larger interest has received no attention.

It may well be asked, what is the Department of Trade and Commerce, presided over by that venerable and somnolent back number, Sir Richard Cartwright, doing in return for the immense amount it costs the people of this country?

Why, under such circumstances, should the Council not insist on tax rolls being returned promptly?

There is talk in Ottawa now of Parliament being called for November 15, This would give a month or five weeks in which to do business before the Christmas holidays, and for less than this, as a Montreal contemporary pertinently remarks, it would hardly be worth while for the members to assemble. The Stars and Stripes floated from the main flagstaff at the Toronto exhibition yesterday, in spite of protests. Toronto people are very patriotic, of course, and the papers do a lot of kicking about the Yankee flag being seen in Canada, but the fact remains that one could hardly throw a brick in Toronto lately without hitting "Old Glory." The average Toronto man never lets pride or patriotism stand in the way of his making a dollar.

"The warning given by the medical men at the great convention recently held in Toronto should be remembered. It was that the child mind should be duly considered during the school term, and that overloading or cramming should be carefully avoided.

"The scholars, or at least some of them, received a jolt on the opening day, and one that was not to be expected. They were given home work out of all keeping with the occasion. Study must be resumed with some regard for the fact that the mental machinery of the children has been running slowly. No one thinks of throwing it into a condition of intense activity at a stroke any more than the motor man of a car, after turning off the current, applies it again suddenly and in full.

"The scholar who is employed actively for five hours and a half a day, under the direction of teachers who know how to impart their spirit in knowledge, ought to be excused. That time should be sufficient for the average pupil. The night work should be a diversion, not a burden."

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN PRUNES FOR SMITH.

(Brockville Times.)

We observe that about a hundred of our esteemed contemporaries have been treated to a dinner by the directors of the Toronto fall fair, and that they hurled a few bouquets at each other, and exchanged a few hearty compliments. No doubt at the end of the dinner all agreed that an agreeable time had been spent. As usual the venerable Professor Goldwin Smith was on hand and gave a few prehistoric reminiscences and a few high thoughts upon higher journalism. They were beautifully expressed and all that sort of thing, but we confess that we often wonder what sort of a success the Professor would have made of an ordinary country newspaper. We fear that if he had depended upon his newspaper for a living he would never have celebrated his 83rd birthday as he did recently.

Caught Strange Fish

Peterboro Review: A party of Toronto gentlemen who are enjoying a few days fishing and duck hunting at Wedlock caught a fish the other day that is certainly a curiosity. There have been stories of all kinds of fish having been caught during the summer, but this one, and it is well authenticated, takes the cake, pan and all. The fish is a horned specimen about eighteen inches in length. The head is of most peculiar construction and two well formed horns protrude from the front of the face near the eyes. In many respects the latest subject of piscatorical lore greatly resembles a young devil fish, only it has not the six legs that the devil fish possesses. The fish is regarded as a great curiosity down the river.

The party who caught it consists of Messrs. J. O. Goodsell, A. W. Seagram, J. J. Rose and B. H. Bennett. They were up to the city on a jaunt yesterday and had their strange looking prize along with them.

SPOTLESS SERVICE.

Service over the Lake Shore Railway may well be called spotless service. Throughout this entire system there is a noteworthy lack of dust and dirt. Sparkling linen and white-clad waiters greet the traveller in the dining cars, and this "spick and span" appearance extends throughout the train. One steps down at a journey's end over the Lake Shore as clean as when he boarded the train. Cleanliness is but one feature that has made The Lake Shore the most popular road in America. Others are its luxurious coaches, absolute safety, highest speed and punctuality. Tell the agent to have your ticket read "Via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway," and write for information concerning rates and routes to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

COLD KILLS THE GERM.

Lieut. Perry Says There Are No Bald Heads in the Arctic Regions.

The people who come back from Klondike testify to the fact that no native bald heads are there. The evidence is that the cold climate kills the germs that eat the hair off at the roots. Lieut. Perry, who went to the Arctic Regions, gives the same evidence. Newbro's Herpicide has the same effect as the cold climate. It kills the germ that eats the hair off at the roots, and the hair grows again Herpicide is the first hair remedy built upon the principle of destroying the germ that eats the hair off. Its phenomenal sale demonstrates the correctness of the scalp germ theory. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Forcing Food Down The Doukhabors.

Winnipeg, September 6.—Fourteen Doukhobors, incarcerated in the jail here, absolutely refuse to partake of food. Nourishment has to be forced through their teeth by scientific means. These men are leaders of the famous band that braved the prickly cactus with naked feet while they wandered in nude condition over the face of the prairies. But humiliation has only steeled their hearts with a firmer determination, and they have resolved that if the police authorities will not allow them to turn Saskatchewan into a veritable garden of Eden they will starve their bodies.

It was not long ago that several Doukhobor fanatics who were imprisoned in the same jail refused to eat unless they are fed on California peaches, unwashed potatoes and peanuts. But these fourteen will not even eat the rawest of vegetables or the most tempting fruit from Peachland. Finally the authorities realized that extraordinary measures had to be adopted. A physician was summoned and he hit upon an expedient. Each Doukhobor was laid on his back, pinned to the floor, and liquid nourishment pumped into the throats of the whole outfit by scientific means.

This proved so successful that it was resolved to repeat the operation three times a day until the fanatics came to their proper senses, and now the Doukhobors have got to live whether they like it or not.

To Meet In Ottawa.

An important meeting of the Board of Directors of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association was held in the Rossin House, Toronto, on Tuesday. Among those present were D. Derbyshire, R. G. Murphy, L. Patton, Brockville, and John R. Dargavel, Elgin. Mr. Derbyshire presided.

An Ottawa delegation was heard in support of that city for the next convention and the Board decided to meet in the Capital in January of 1907.

A draft of the revised constitution and by-laws under the terms of new Act governing this and similar bodies throughout Ontario, was presented and adopted. Under the old Agricultural and Arts Acts the Eastern Dairyman's Association was divided in six dairy districts and a committee was appointed to increase the number to twelve. The purpose is to have one director for each district on the Board, who will be responsible for the preliminary arrangements of local dairy meetings which will be held throughout the winter in addition to the regular convention.

A committee was appointed to confer with a like committee from the Western Dairymen's Association as to the advisability of holding a provincial winter show. It is most likely that the first show will come to the east and Brockville being the chief dairy centre will get it.

A committee was also appointed to arrange for cheese scoring contests to be done by experts at Montreal. —Brockville Times.

Cheap Cement Walks

Peterboro Examiner: Mr. John Finlay, M.P.P., East Peterboro, is either a philanthropist or content with small profit, or, possibly, he may have a corner on cement. His offer to put down pavement in Norwood at 7 cents per square foot is perbaps within the limit of reasonable profit, and being an important property holder, and having a material interest in the village, he is willing to benefit the public, and through it, himself, by doing necessary work at the reasonable price. The very fact of this offer being made is a sort of revelation. Seven cents per square foot is at least fifty per cent cheaper than concrete was put down in Peterboro less than ten years ago. It is possible that in Peterboro the corporation is, when conditions are favorable —not too much filling— laying pavement this season at as cheap a price. As it is, Mr. Findlay has set a figure that will, to a certain extent, form a precedent.

AQUATICS.

Thinks Harvard Will Win.

Putney, England, Sept. 6.—It was in every way a record crowd, especially in the matter of the number of American visitors, that was seen on the river to-day testifying to the increasing interest in Saturday's contest between the Cambridge and Harvard University crews. Muttlebery, Escombe, Lehmann, Goldie and many other famous scullers followed the practice from a launch. The crews show unabated confidence, which, judging from their practice displays, is well justified from both sides. There is so little to choose that betting to-ight again has become even. The Harvards have improved considerably in the matter of starting, but in other respects appear little different in style from a few days ago. Dr. Thomas Manahan says they could not be in better condition.

Cambridge to-day showed the finest style, breaking from 29 to the racing pace of 36 strokes to the minute. Their tactics evidently will be devoted to an attempt by hot work to wear down their opponents in the first mile.

"I am plump, whole-heartedly for Harvard," writes Vivian Nickolls, the well-known oarsman, to The Daily Mail this morning. My reason for so doing is because I consider that in nearly all their trials the Americans have shown more speed and staying power than their rivals."

Mr. Nickolls expresses the opinion that the leg work of Harvard will bring victory. There is likely to be rough water. Mr. Nickolls says, and he prefers the Americans to the Englishman on a disturbed surface.

SPORTING NOTES.

It is reported in Ottawa that Smith's Falls will endeavor to gain a place in the Eastern Canadian Amateur Hockey League the coming winter. The idea is to replace Shamrocks. The Falls team will likely remain the same as it was last year, when it won the Federal League championship.

Nigel Barker, the Australian champion sprinter and quarter miler, has arrived in New York, and will compete in the National A.A.U. championships at Travers Island on September 8. Barker is the champion sprinter of the Antipodes, and he defeated Arthur Duffy several times while the latter was on a tour of the southern hemisphere. He has a record of 48 4-5 seconds for the quarter mile, and it is with the intention of trying for the quarter and 100 yards that Barker has landed in America. Barker was a competitor at the Olympic games at Athens last spring and was beaten in the quarter by Paul Pilgrim, of the New York A.C., by a distance of two yards.

The Victoria, B.C., Times has the following to say about cricket: The Times has on more than one occasion expressed its opinion that cricket is the most interesting game played to-day with bat and ball. There is nothing in the list of pastimes that occupy us in moments of leisure that is to be compared with it either from the point of view of participant or spectator. One of the chief charms of cricket is the absence of all wrangling between players and umpires. The decisions of the autocrat of the field are accepted with equanimity and philosophy by fieldsmen and batsmen alike. If there be difference of opinion upon a point of play, they are not given expression to on the ground. The consequence is that there is as much difference between the American game of baseball and a British game of cricket as there is between a howling mob of maniacs let loose for a season of "relaxation" and an orderly crowd of peace-loving citizens taking their pleasures as gentlemen should.

Sir Thomas Lipton in an interview said he was ready and willing to challenge for the America's cup next year. The reason that he has hesitated htihierto was because the designers said they did not think they would have an equal chance against an American boat.

Mrs. Hillyard, one of the leading lady tennis players of England, in a tournament played last month was obliged, so as to secure a foothold on the slippery grass, to discard her shoes and play in her stockings. Under these conditions she managed to win the open singles and doubles.

Peterboro Review: Will Port Hope challenge another Midland League team to a series of games for $100 a side? Well, hardly, at least not this season, anyway. It will be remembered that they challenged Oshawa to a series of games for $100 a side, thinking they had a cinch. The Oshawa bunch took them up and covered their money. They played the first game in Port Hope and lost 5 to 4, but they won from Port Hope in Oshawa 6 to 4, and again yesterday they trimmed them for the second time in Bowmanville and carried off the little wad of 100 bucks. The score was 10 to 6. This gives Oshawa two of the three games and 20 runs against Port Hope's 15. Too bad, Port Hope. You'll be wiser next time. The old adage came true once more, "Pride goeth before a fall.

Even the milk of human kindness may contain a few germs.

THE GENTLE COP

CHARGE OF BRUTAL CONDUCT LAID AGAINST TORONTO POLICE.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—There was a peculiar incident in the police court this morning when one of the prisoners charged with disorderly conduct complained to Police Magistrate Denison about the treatment prisoners received while in the cells. His charge was that they were brutally treated, beaten and kicked, but that they had been afraid to complain because they were threatened with a double fine if they said anything. Another prisoner in the dock had his face bruised and cut. "How did you get that?" asked the magistrate. "I fell off a bench in the cell," replied the prisoner. "No man could fall off a bench and get bruised like that," was the comment of the magistrate, who thereupon ordered all the police who were on duty at the central station last night to appear before him to-morrow, so that the charges could be investigated.

THE OLD MAIDS.

THEIR INCREASING NUMBERS BRINGING PERIL.

(New Haven, Conn., Register.)

It is stated that race suicide is actually overtaking our sister state of Massachusetts, and the Bay State spinster is no longer a joke, but a fearful fact. According to the new state census the increase of population has fallen off 5.31 per cent. in the five years since the last federal census was taken, compared to the rate of increase during the half decade preceding.

Special inquiry, based on the alarming figures developed by the inventory of the population, is being made by the census bureau among the married women of the state in order to determine the birth rate. There is a belief among some students of the situation that a marked falling off in the birth rate in proportion to the married population will be shown, but aside from that the increasing preponderance of spinsters calls for serious consideration through the analysis of the statistics already at hand.

Bachelors, too, are increasing in Massachusetts—the "he" old maid, who hasn't as good a general excuse to offer, three years out of four, at least, for his single state is becoming alarmingly prevalent. Theorists are advancing various views in support of their respective calculations as to the why and wherefore.

The dry summers have wrought the havoc in which the leguminous schools of theorists charge an enervating diet is one of the natural complements of race suicide. But there is a more practical reason for the failure of the population to keep up its natural proportion of increase, and that is the increased cost of living.

Again the exponents of Boston's baked staff of life attribute this to the lack of sufficient quantities of this nourishing and economical bean, forcing resource to the more expensive meat diet to sustain existence Living has increased, it is admitted, whatever may be the cause, and for this reason it is believed to be a fact that many young men who have contemplated matrimony have hesitated about assuming the responsibilities of married life.

IN MEMORIAM

THE LATE JOHN FRANCIS.

John Francis, an old and respected resident of Cherry Valley, departed this life on Monday, August 27. The deceased was born in the county of Hastings 75 years ago and moved with his family in the early 80's to Greenwood, Wis. He was one of the pioneers of that country, having settled on and cleared a large farm which was heavily timbered. About five years ago he sold his property there and removed to Prince Edward county and bought a farm near Cherry Valley on which he lived up till the time of his death. He was of a kind and cheerful disposition, well liked by all who knew him both young and old, and was known in the neighborhood in which he lived as "Uncle John." He had always been blessed with good health and was often heard to remark that he had never taken any doctor's medicine. About two months ago he was taken ill which seemed at first to be only trifling, but which gradually grew more and more serious and despite the best medical attendance and kind nursing it soon proved fatal. He had possession of his mental faculties almost to the last moment and less than an hour before he died conversed with those around him, bidding them good-bye and hoped they would all meet him in a better world. The funeral was held on Wednesday and the services were conducted at the church by the Rev. Mr. Batstone, after which the remains were consigned to the earth, there to await the resurrection. It is needless to say the bereaved family, and especially the aged widow, have the sympathy of the entire community.—Com.

The Other Woman

There is one question that should come to every wife who sees her husband attracted by another woman: "Where does she charm where I do not? Does she try to please him more than I have done? What is the unconscious need back of this outcome of it, the thing that I have unconsciously failed in? Why should any one have more attraction for him, more power over him, than his own wife?"

The woman who seeks to charm in your place, may be stimulatingly intelligent or a jolly good fellow or honestly sympathetic, or she may be bold and wholly reprehensible. But she doesn't complain, she doesn't scold, and isn't self-absorbed, she doesn't talk about money all the time to him she enjoys his society, without always thinking of something for him to do. Perhaps there is something to learn from her, if one only thought so.

Literary Notes.

In the Designer for October are shown, in addition to many up-to-date patterns, the newest designs for coats and jackets for ladies, misses, girls and boys. The millinery pages display autumn hats, and "Fashionable Frivolities" and "Fashions and Fabrics" describe and illustrate many new articles in the dress line to be found in the shops. "Points on Coat Making" instructs how to make a "Peter Pan" blouse coat, one of the latest styles off wrap. In fancywork are supplied directions for crocheting a hood, baby cap, bootees, bedroom slippers, baby sack, and hug-me-tight jacket for lady.; also for making in lace stocks, handkerchiefs a chemisette and gauntlet cuff, while Miss Moeran continues her lessons in Carrickmacross lace.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE VAGABOND.

In the dew and the sunshine of morning, in the glow of the fresh dawning day
I'm footing it over the meadows, the trail of the wanderer's way;
A blotch on the skyline's crimson, you can see the black smoke of the freight
That dumped me off here while a-rolling along at a twenty-mile gait.

You can call me a tramp, and you're welcome, the name doesn't matter to me,
For the world seems glorious at present, whatever the finish may be;
I have borne the burden of toiling, but thank God I ha' shifted the load
And I'm tasting the joys of free living, the endless delights of the road.

In patches of white on the hedges the blossoms of hawthorn gleam,
And the buttercup, jonquil and crocus resplendent in gold and in green
Are nodding their heads to the primrose and daffodil low in the grass,
While the scent laden breezes of April are lilting a tune as they pass.

Forgotten the crime and the squalor, the noise of the streets and the town,
Out here where all Nature rejoices with the sun and the sky smiling down—
On the countryside peaceful and verdant, the past and its miseries seem
But a vague, vagrant trick of the memory, the shadow of some evil dream.

I have broken the chains of my bondage, I care not for hearthstone or home,
The world is my heritage splendid, a gypsy unfettered I roam.
And my pulses are throbbing and dancing to the notes that the mating birds sing,
For I'm quit of the curse of the city and freed by the call of the spring.

A Newfoundland exchange says:—This year's cod-fishery promises poorly and the prospects are against the situation improving in the rest of the season. The catch on the south coast is very short, on the east coast the showing is better, the Labrador, however, is much backward and the Banks likewise have not yielded a harvest as rich as ordinarily. Long stretches of coastline report only meagre returns for hook-and-line fishermen, while "traps," contrivances of netting in which the fish are enclosed, have done scarcely anything. In some places, it is true, conditions are better than these, or else there would be consternation, but, on an average, the season has been an adverse one. Bait has been scarce and no refrigerators have been supplied, save in one or two places, so that this lack adds to the drawbacks of the situation.

The canning of air is now in order, as a California invention. It is now possible to eat oranges which have not left their native air in their passage across the continent. The plant for doing this is at Los Angeles. It is perhaps futile to hope for the canning of this September air in Ontario for winter use. 'Cause why—the average winter air is good enough for most people.

Much is heard of the reclaiming of land in the great West by irrigation. It looks ideal, to be able to command a supply of water at will. But in the alkali lands it is otherwise. The salts underneath are brought to the surface greatly to the injury of the crop. This trouble is greatest in regions where the rainfall is least, because rainfall tends to wash the salts down again. It is found that many farms which have been irrigated a long time have gradually been taken possession of by these poisonous salts and made unfit for crop growing. Regarding irrigation in the Canadian West these remarks do not apply.

ALLSPICE.

Berries of the Beautiful and Fragrant Pimento Tree.

The pimento, or allspice, tree is cultivated in the West Indies and Jamaica. This beautiful tree usually grows to a height of about thirty feet. It has a straight trunk, much branched above and covered with a very smooth brown bark. The leaves vary in size and shape, but are always of a dark, shining green color. During the months of July and August the tree is in full bloom, the blossoms consisting of very fragrant small white flowers.

When a new plantation of pimento trees is to be formed no regular sowing or planting takes place, because it is next to impossible to propagate the young plants or to raise them from seeds in parts of the country where they are not found growing spontaneously. Usually a piece of land is selected either close to a plantation already formed or in a part of the woodland where pimento trees are growing in a native state. The chosen piece of land is then cleared of all wood except these trees, and the felled timber is allowed to remain on the ground for the purpose of protecting the very young pimento plants.

At the end of two years the land is thoroughly cleared, and only the most vigorous pimento trees and plants are left standing. The plants come to maturity in about seven years.

In favorable seasons the pimento crop is enormous, a single tree often yielding a hundred or more pounds of the dried spice. The berries are picked while green, because if left on the tree until ripe they lose their pungent taste and are valueless. The green berries are exposed to the sun for a week or ten days, when they lose their green color and turn a reddish brown. When perfectly dry they are put in bags and casks for exportation.

The odor and the taste of the pimento berries are thought to resemble a combination of those of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves; hence the familiar name "allspice."

Try Again for Health Gin Pills Will Cure You

OR MONEY REFUNDED

If you have wasted money on doctors, and taken medicine after medicine, without relief, of course you are discouraged. But don't give up. There is one cure—certain and sure—that will make your kidneys well and strong.

Here is a letter from an old gentleman, 72 years of age, who had just your experience, but who was convinced that he owed it to himself to at least try GIN PILLS. Read what he says:—

The Bole Drug Co. Boissevain, Man.
Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,
I am now 72 years of age. I have been ill for about six or seven years, and have been attended by different doctors, but I could get no help. I started taking ——— Kidney Pills and I have taken several odd boxes, and I found they helped me a little. This spring I started to take Gin Pills and believe they have cured me. I cannot say too much about them, and recommend them as a good kidney pill.
(Signed) WILLIAM CUMPSTONE.

Note that Mr. Cumpstone not only found quick relief, but "believe they have cured me."

Try just once more. Give GIN PILLS a fair trial. So sure are we that GIN PILLS are a positive cure for all Kidney troubles that we will let you test them free.

Send name and address, and tell in what paper you saw this offer and we will send you a sample box of GIN PILLS free of charge. Gin Pills are sold by all druggists at 50c a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50.

Testing Prudence

.....By M. J. PHILLIPS

Copyright, 1906, by Beatrix Reade

Berkeley Marshall leaned luxuriously back in the shady chair, hoisted his feet to the bed and blew a ring of smoke ceilingward from his cigar. "To recapitulate," he began, directing his remarks to the calendar which hung on the wall and from which stared back at him the face of a supposedly beautiful young woman with a fixed and sugary smile, "your left ear is confoundedly out of drawing. I beg your pardon, I'm not an artist. I'm a civil engineer—or will be next June. And that isn't what I started out to remark.

"To recapitulate, I have peddled maps over three states, and the net profits of these adventures are $531.62. I have a steady job during the college year waiting on table at three per and found. Furthermore, I have a dress suit and clothes and ties and things. Further yet, I have an invitation from my cousin, Torrence Marshall, to spend a week with him at Sylvan Cove, the swellest resort on this little old ocean. It is now Saturday night, Sept. 15, and college opens up the 25th.

"The question seems to be shall I go on peddling maps and accumulating more filthy lucre, which I may possibly need; shall I go home, which is 300 miles away; to college, which is 450, or to Sylvan Cove, which is under a hundred and where pretty young women, it is presumed, abound?"

In due parliamentary form the Sylvan Cove question was put and carried unanimously, whereupon the boy—he was little more—bowed gravely to the calendar lady and thanked her for her kindness in voting with him. Then he ran down the stairs of the country hotel to consult the time table, for he was in a hurry to be off.

Marshall found Sylvan Cove in the elaborate simplicity stage of summer resort development. Everything was costly, but very plain, for the Cove was inhabited each season mainly by wealthy people who had become accustomed to their money.

On the first day of his stay Marshall naively confided to his cousin that he believed Prudence Fairchild to be the prettiest girl at the Cove, whereupon Torrence grinned and replied, "Stung, are you?" On the second day he learned that she could swim like a seal and golf like a Scot. That evening, by virtue of four dances which she generously gave him at the pavilion party, his stock of knowledge was augmented by the fact that Miss Prudence danced like a fairy.

His approval of the tanned, red lipped and wholesome young woman deepened during a long sail the next morning, when he discovered that her taste in books and tennis rackets was identical with his own. When Torrence informed him later, however, that her father, Rufus Fairchild, was credited with more millions than there were letters to his name the young man experienced a novel and entirely unpleasant sinking of the heart.

His own financial situation did not trouble Marshall—in fact, he found humor in his poverty. Marshall's father had been rich until an industrial flurry had left him broken and penniless. Berkeley himself, a natural engineer and in love with the profession he had chosen, felt the prescient stir of genius within him, vague but real. His teachers predicted great things of him, and with the knowledge of his own powers and his burning desire to achieve, fame and wealth were merely around the next corner.

Yet the fact of Miss Fairchild's wealth depressed him. "I've almost monopolized her since I've been here," he told himself, "and she'll think it's the blooming money. I suppose half this bunch that's hanging around her would marry a Digger Indian for the old man's pile. I wish she were poor!" The latter aggrieved and sincere remark revealed to Marshall that he was dangerously near being in love.

A certain sensitive pride, for he had a morbid fear that his attitude might be misconstrued, kept Marshall out of the girl's presence most of the time thereafter. Maybe she understood, for the possession of much money often brings a woman bitter wisdom; maybe it was a feminine desire to repay him for his aloofness; at any rate, Miss Fairchild contrived to give Marshall a glance at parting, as he held her cool little hand, that thrilled his every pulse. It was like the song of a nightingale or the scent of June roses. And the memory moved him again and again that winter as he built theoretical bridges in the class room or delivered vegetable soup in the hotel dining room.

Now, a look such as that from a girl who is not a flirt dwells in her memory too. Miss Fairchild's cheeks were hot sometimes when she thought of it and of the answering glance of bewildered joy that flashed from Marshall's blue eyes. "He might take advantage of it," she said to herself in brief, delicious panic when the invitation of a chum, Nell Burrows, to come for the January hop of the seniors at Marshall's college reached her. But she went nevertheless.

The assurance with which he confiscated five of the dances on her card at the ball showed that Marshall remembered. They sat out two, which was delightful, but dangerous. There was little said, and the silence between them was intimate and significant.

Removed from the glamour of the lights and the music, from the half shielded promise of her eyes and the intoxication of her beauty, Marshall was not satisfied. "If she were only poor!" he repeated to himself. "How can she know that it's she I want and not the money? Suppose that she thinks I'm a fortune hunter? And if the money makes any difference with her, then she doesn't care for me. I wish I knew. If you only could give me a sign, sweetheart, that you had faith in my love"—

It was lunchtime, and Marshall was at his accustomed table in the hotel. His musings were broken by the opening of the door. Miss Fairchild and Miss Burrows came in. They were accompanied by Bronson and Carrick, wealthy frat men of his own class.

Out of the corner of his eye Marshall saw Miss Fairchild start a trifle when she recognized him. When the party had been seated two tables away by young Condon, another student waiter, the girl's back was toward him. He had given her no opportunity for a greeting.

For it had flashed over the young man that the sign, either of favor or of contempt for his poverty and his menial occupation, must be given. The girl would show whether her nature were gold or dross. If she were ashamed of him, if she left the room without a word, he resolved to tear the love he felt from his heart and trample it under foot.

Marshall never knew what he did before the crucial time came, the moment of the party's rising from the table after lunch, but no detail of what followed escaped him. He saw the amused lift of Bronson's eyebrows, the scowl on Carrick's forehead and Miss Burrows' undisguised interest as Prudence Fairchild, eyes softly shining, came back to where he stood.

"If the mountain will not go to Mohammed," she said smilingly, "then of course Mohammed must come to the mountain. And I mean to quarrel with you some time for turning your back when I came in. But I shan't scold now; I'm leaving for home tomorrow, and I wondered if I'll see you again."

"I will call tonight to say goodby," he replied eagerly, "and I have something important to say, if I may see you alone. I think I've been waiting all my life to say it."

Her glance thrilled him as it had that September day at the seashore.

"You may see me alone," she whispered.

The Florentine Epicure.

Your typical Florentine is epicurean to the toe tips. His enthusiasms and yearnings are quite other than those of the northerner. Give him 2 francs a day for life, and he will toil no more. He may be a marquis and seventh or eighth in direct descent, but he will be content to forego the assertion of his rank so he may thenceforward enjoy the priceless boon of leisure and independence. His leisure he will dissipate at the cafe with perhaps two three-halfpenny sweet fluids per diem, and you may study the effect of his independence in his courtly manners even though his hat be worn at the brim and his coat back be deplorably shiny. He is a pellucid brook, shallow as you please, yet engaging for his pellucidity. As he sits on the red velvet cushions and looks forth at the carriages and gowns of fashion in the Via Tornabuoni he shows no trace of envy on his open countenance. What, in effect, have these rich ones more than he save the ennui of modishness and the indigestion of high feeding? The monuments and blue skies of Florence, not to mention the glorious or stirring memories of its history, are rather more his than theirs.—Cornhill Magazine.

Disraeli's Retirement.

In 1876 Mr. Disraeli was raised by the queen to the peerage under the title of Lord Beaconsfield, and he left the house of commons before the news of his elevation to the house of lords had been made public. His withdrawal from the stage where he had played so long the leading part in a manner obviously devised to avoid any sort of ovation was in accordance with the dignity which characterized the remaining years of his life after the defeat of the Conservatives, when the general election of 1880, in consequence of the Midlothian campaign, had terminated his public career. No applicant for his opinions on any subject ever received a postal card from Lord Beaconsfield. No speech was ever made by him at railway stations. He died in 1881 as he had lived—alone, a stranger amid a strange people. After his death his memory became to English Conservatives an object of almost sentimental affection; to English Radicals it remained an object of never failing animosity. But to Englishmen of all politics, to Conservatives and Liberals alike, his life continues to be a constant puzzle, an unsolved enigma.—London Standard.

An African Sea Serpent Story.

Here is a sea serpent story from one of the great fresh water lakes of central Africa. The Globe Trotter of Nairobi, British East Africa, tells it: "According to natives on the shore and islands of Lake Victoria the real simon pure water python is a reality. Officers on board the Sibyl and the Winifred have time and again been unable to account for the unrest shown at times in the most tranquil waters. Sir Clement Hill in crossing the lake some years ago in a launch with one Macgregor, the engineer, saw this monster and described it as having a head resembling the hippopotamus, only three times broader, but much more flat and wedge shaped. The opinion of the natives regarding its length, etc., differs very much, but all agree that the reptile is amphibious and declare they have seen forty feet or more lying dormant on the bank, while the supposed tail, sixty or seventy feet from shore, created a commotion in the water resembling the wash of an ocean steamer."

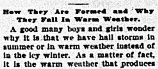
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

GOOD LOOP TRICK.

Performed With a String and a Pair of Scissors.

The following is a very good trick, and one which needs no special apparatus:

Take a piece of string about half a yard long and tie the ends securely. Now take a pair of scissors and pass one end of your string through one of the openings in the handles of the scissors, then thread the other end through this and pass through the opening in the other handle. Now draw the loop tight, and it should appear like that shown in the accompanying illustration.



LOOP AND SCISSORS TRICK.

Next take the free end of the string and either hold it between the fingers or fasten upon a hook, and ask some one to release the scissors from the string without tampering in any way with the end you hold or have otherwise fastened. To accomplish this, loosen the loop against the handle of the scissors; draw it out and pass through other handle in exactly the same way that the strings pass through. Draw this loop through and out until there is sufficient length to enable you to pass it completely over the pair of scissors until you bring it around to the opening from which you started. Keep your string free from twists during this operation, otherwise you will get it hopelessly entangled. If you follow these directions carefully the loop will slip through the openings and your scissors are free.

HAILSTONES.

How They Are Formed and Why They Fall In Warm Weather.

A good many boys and girls wonder why it is that we have hail storms in summer or in warm weather instead of in the icy winter. As a matter of fact, it is the warm weather that produces them. Hail is formed by the meeting of two currents of air, one warm and saturated with vapor and the other very cold. The cold air condenses the vapor into water and then freezes the water into ice particles. The ice particles as they fall toward the earth strike and adhere to each other, thus forming the stones that reach the ground. As it is only in summer that warm, vapor laden strata of air overhang the earth, it is only at that season that the conditions exist for the formation of hail.

The most violent hailstorms occur in the tropics, where the stones are often as large as oranges and sometimes much larger than that. The hail that falls in winter is very different from that of summer both in form and in origin. It is always small and is produced by the freezing of raindrops as they pass through a colder stratum of air than that in which they started.

The High Seas.

You do not often come across the term "high seas," but you ought to know exactly what it means when you do. It is used in article 1 of the constitution of the United States, and allusion to it is sometimes made in the discussion of national or international questions. It means the open sea, outside of the civil jurisdiction of any country, which the law of nations limits to one marine league or three geographical miles from shore. The great lakes, beyond the limits above designated, are regarded as high seas. When a crime is committed on the high seas the person charged with it is subject to the jurisdiction of the United States in the district that the vessel first enters or in the district where the offender is found.

Five Points.

Pile together as many sheets of note paper as there are boys or girls to play. Scatter on the upper one at random five grains of rice. Prick with a pin without disturbing the rice five holes through the spots where the rice has fallen. You will then have a number of sheets of paper each containing five pin holes arranged in the same order. The game consists in each person drawing a figure which shall come within the points, using one for the head, two for the hands and two for the feet. A great variety of amusing figures and attitudes will be the result.

Transferring a Rose Leaf.

The girls, and boys too, will be glad to know that they can with very little trouble transfer to paper a perfect impression of a rose leaf, including its color. Here is the way to do it: Lay the leaf on a sheet of clean white paper and over it put a piece of white linen soaked in spirits of niter. Put the leaf thus inclosed in a blank book and lay away under pressure for a week. At the end of that time it will be found that the rose leaf has lost its color, but that the paper has received it, thus giving a perfect and durable impression of the leaf.

A and E.

Said A, "Whene'er I stand between
The letters B and D
I'm in the midst of all that's BAD,
As you can plainly see."
"How strange!" said merry, laughing E.
"When I between them am
I'm tucked up nice and snug in BED
And happy as a clam."
"It's quality within ourselves,"
Then mused the letter A,
"And not the place we occupy
That makes us sad or gay."

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS KATE E. GRISWOLD.

The Efficient Editor and Publisher of Profitable Advertising.

The success and worldwide reputation which Miss Kate E. Griswold, of Boston, editor and publisher of Profitable Advertising, has won for herself through courageous persistence and hard work ought to be an incentive to other young business women to forge ahead and reach the desired goal. Miss Griswold has had little help, and her attainment of an enviable position in the business world has been won solely through her own efforts.

West Hartford, Conn., was the place of her birth some thirty-five years ago. She was educated in the local schools and finished at Miss Haines' school in Hartford. Love of animals and out of door life have been elements of her success. The first led her to raise poultry when still in her teens, while the other has brought to her the health which has made her success possible.

MISS KATE E. GRISWOLD.

Through her interest in poultry she became attached to the Poultry World in Hartford at the age of sixteen and soon was in full charge of the advertising end. Later it was the journal of the National Trotting association that benefited by her efforts, and so untiringly did she apply herself to business that her health failed and she was obliged to rest for a few years.

Miss Griswold re-entered the business world again as editor and manager of the Hartford City Mission Record and for five years kept that publication on a paying basis. Meanwhile the various competitions in designing advertisements tempted her to try her skill, with the result that she won several prizes.

Through these endeavors she became known to the C. F. David Advertising agency of Boston, which opened negotiations with her which resulted in Miss Griswold becoming an editor upon the staff of Profitable Advertising, its publication.

Two years later this journal was declared a failure and unloaded upon the shoulders of its present owner. It was in 1895, when Miss Griswold became its publisher, and it had few subscribers and fewer assets. With undeniable courage she set to work to build it up, with what success is proved by the fact that it is now the leading advertising journal of the world, with representatives in dozens of foreign countries.

The publication of November, 1895, the first under Miss Griswold's ownership, contained thirty-two pages; a recent publication boasts several hundred and represents many thousands of dollars' worth of cash advertising.

Miss Griswold, as shown by the above picture, is a sweet, womanly woman. She is broad minded, soft spoken, generous to a degree and ever ready to aid her sisters in any laudable undertaking.—Boston Traveler.

A Powerful Woman's Work.

The woman with the queerest occupation in New England is Mrs. Alma Veasey Williams, who lives in a little weather beaten, patched cottage far up among the lonesome hills of New Hampshire. Mrs. Williams, who is thirty-six, holds the unchallenged reputation of being the only professional female woodcutter in the New England woods if not in the whole of the United States. Here are some of her very remarkable feats and abilities: She can cut, split and set up a cord of wood each day as long as she chooses to work. She can cut down and trim a tree as large as a barrel quicker than any man in the neighborhood. She is the best ox driver in Meridith, where she lives. She can drive any horse. She cuts from eight to ten cords of wood for her own and her mother's use each winter, and then she goes into the woods and works wherever she can find employment as an expert woodsman. In the summer time she plows her own garden herself, driving the horses and holding the plow handles while the furrow is being turned. She shingled her own house all over once. A year ago at a country fair she performed with one of the striking machines, proving that she could strike a harder blow than any of the numerous farmers present.

Make the Baby Work.

The physician half closed his eyes and looked at the baby, who was troubled with indigestion, although he was a fat baby. Then he asked for the baby's bottle, looked at the nipple and grunted: "I thought so. You make eating too easy for the baby, like most foolish young mothers. You seem to think that it is doing him a kindness to make him a loafer about his milk. Now let me tell you that a baby is going to get every drop of milk in a bottle anyway, because he's hungry and wants it, and you won't starve him if you use a hard suction nipple. It's much better for him to work while he feeds, on the theory that man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and if the beads of perspiration stand out on his little brow and if he grunts and wiggles, all the better. Ten chances to one he is enjoying his milk twice as much as if the nipple was one of those easy things that fairly poured the fluid down his throat, and his digestion will be stronger."—New York Press.

Home Dressmaking.

The great fault to be found with home dressmaking is that in many cases the work has an amateurish appearance when finished. There are a few tricks of the trade, however, which are invaluable in making up and altering clothes and account for all the difference between a neat and trim garment and one which is ill fitting and ill finished. Always shrink a new braid before sewing to a skirt. In shortening a skirt pattern, too, always fold a plait across the middle of the pattern. Never shorten from the top or bottom of the skirt or the shape will be spoiled. A rolling pin, with a cloth around it, makes a good pressing board.

Her Complexion Secret.

A woman died the other day aged eighty-eight whose complexion was as pink and white as that of a girl of twenty. When asked what the secret of her lovely skin was she invariably answered, "Rochelle salts." It seemed that she took the salts every day, dissolving half a teaspoonful in a glass of water and drinking the solution, now a sip and then a swallow at intervals through the day. The effects upon her skin and blood were certainly most fortunate.—New York Tribune.

To Make Toilet Soap.

To make toilet soap dissolve one box of concentrated lye in half a gallon of rain water. Melt five pounds of clean lard or tallow. When about milk warm pour your cold lye in very slowly and stir it rapidly, says Woman's Life. Add one ounce of oil of sassafras or any other perfume you fancy. Pour into a box a foot square, cover air tight and let it remain three of four days, then cut into cakes, and it is ready for use as a toilet soap.

Kitchen Recipe Book.

The cleanest, neatest book in which a housekeeper can keep odd recipes is made by covering a thick blank book with white oilcloth. The trouble with cloth bound recipe books is that they get greasy and floury in a short time from being handled by the cook while she is mixing ingredients, and there is no way of cleaning them without injuring the cover. An oilcloth book can be wiped off every time it is used.

The Hands.

It is a most decided waste of time to try to make thin hands plump, for no amount of working over them will do any good. Slender hands are considered more beautiful anyhow, provided the knuckles are not too large, and no girl wants pudgy hands with fat fingers. Better spend time and energy keeping the nails in good condition and the hands white and soft rather than in trying to change their shape.

To Clean Ribbon.

An excellent way to clean ribbon is the following: Cover the ribbon with warm water, then spread it on a board or table and scrub it thoroughly with a brush that has been rubbed in soap. After a good lather has been formed and the ribbon looks clean, rinse it in clear warm water, lay it between folds of thin cheesecloth and press until dry.

Thick Lips.

Thick lips can be overcome to a certain extent by acquiring the habit of holding the lips close to the teeth and keeping the muscles about the mouth firm and tight. The woman who stands about with her mouth open permits the muscles to become large and relaxed, and the result is anything but conducive to fair looks.

Juvenile Laundry Lists.

Children may be taught to take care of their clothes and count the pieces for the laundry. Let each child have its own handkerchief bag and bags for other soiled clothes and keep its own laundry list, a little duty which most children like with a saving of care for mother.

Creased Rugs.

A rug sometimes becomes badly creased. To remedy this turn it upside down and wet the crease with a moistened broom until the rug is quite wet. Stretch the rug tight and let it remain overnight after tacking it with tinned tacks, which do not rust.

Paint stains on a floor may be scoured off by soaking them for a short time in benzine or turpentine and then rubbing them with emery paper or a little pulverized pumice stone applied with a damp cloth.

Ivory carvings that are discolored may be restored by a simple process. Paint them over with spirits of turpentine and expose them to the sunshine for two or three days.

Holland window shades that are soiled near the bottom can be advantageously turned. Tack the bottom of the shade to the roller.

If a drop of olive oil is rubbed on dinner knives before putting them away, they will keep their brightness.

CRITICISING OTHERS.

If You Have the Habit, Try This Scheme For a Day.

"Grace has a way of telling me my faults," said a young girl, speaking of her sister, "and as she does it kindly, confessing to the same faults herself, it makes no hard feelings. One day recently she said, 'Do you know, I think we have fallen into a habit of criticising unkindly most of the people we meet.'

"I was enormously astonished, for I fancied myself one of the most charitable of judges, but Grace is usually right, so I did not contradict. The next day we agreed we would pass no criticisms upon our friends and neighbors that would pain them were they present to hear. That, thought I shyly, will show Grace her mistake.

"But, bless you, the day was very young indeed when I committed my first offense by saying that there was no excuse for Mrs. Brown dressing so conspicuously behind the mode. It was some consolation to hear Grace promptly agree with me and add a little more on her own account.

"But the wretched habit cropped up all day. Every hour or two I said something more or less disparaging about others. By night I was thoroughly humiliated and ashamed and before going to bed said, 'Grace, I haven't been a bit better today about that disagreeable habit, but I've noticed every time I've spoken too critically of people.' 'A fault confessed is half redressed,' laughed Grace. 'Tomorrow we'll do better.' And so we did."—Exchange.

THE SHY GIRL.

She Should Make an Effort to Conquer Her Bashfulness.

The girl who knows herself to be tongue tied, though she regret it, need not despair of popularity. Nobody is socially more disagreeable and more dreaded than a woman who talks too much, monopolizing the conversation and giving no one else a chance to speak. People fly from this overgifted and aggressive talker.

A mere chatterbox is equally disliked. A good listener is always sure of appreciation. If you can but master the fine art of listening to each person with an air of deep interest, just as if there were nobody else at the moment in the wide world and as if your greatest wish were to understand what the other is trying to tell you, you will have the effect of talking well.

All that is really necessary is not to let your attention wander and at the right moment, in the right place, make some brief rejoinder or affirmation. You need never fear that you will be thought too silent if you listen well and say yes or no at proper intervals. A good listener is never a bore, while a great talker frequently gains that unhappy distinction.

Girls are sometimes tongue tied because of indifference. A bashful manner up to a certain point is attractive. But when it has its root in a hampering self consciousness which makes one awkward and clumsy or surly or defiant it is a fatal handicap.—New York American.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Kitchen floors painted with boiled linseed oil are very easily cleaned.

Be sure to put scalding water in each saucepan or stewpan as you finish using it.

When cleaning knives mix a tiny bit of carbonate of soda with the bath brick and they will polish more easily.

Do not wash the wooden bread plate in hot water and it will not turn black. Wash with soap and warm water and rinse in clean cold water.

Dishes which have become brown and burned from baking in the oven may be easily cleaned after they have stood awhile in borax water.

Use a silver knife to peel apples and the hands will not be blackened as when a steel knife is used. The acid of the fruit (acetic acid) acts on the iron in the latter case, but does not affect the silver.

Closet Door Mirrors.

The pier mirror, which was the delight of a generation or two ago, is not so much in evidence these days, although every woman who has ever had access to one of these full length looking glasses knows what a delight it is to be able to see how one's clothes look from head to foot. The cheval glass, of course, fulfills this mission, but it calls for more room space than the old time pier glass. As a substitute for the banished mirror house designers are introducing a mirror in closet doors which gives a chance for the gratification of artistic taste in the selection of handsome doors and provides a valuable aid to smart dressing for the women of the household. Where room space is at a premium these door mirrors are a positive boon, and they are ornamental as well as useful.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Strengthening Muscles.

Women of sedentary occupations are allowing their muscles to become soft through lack of physical exercise. A good exercise for strengthening all the muscles is as follows: Stand erect, heels together, toes out, chest thrown out. With arms extended touch the toes with the tips of the fingers, bending the body only just below the waist line. Continue the movement with hands extended over the head; then throw the body back as far as possible and away from one side to the other. Exercise in this way for ten minutes, then exercise each leg for five minutes by throwing the foot out in front, at the side and back. This exercise, if persevered in regularly, makes the body supple and the motions graceful

A BAND OF GUZMAN'S

Rout Cuban Government Force After Desperate Encounter.

MANY KILLED OR WOUNDED

Great Excitement at Cienfuegos Over the Victory Gained by the Insurgents—Another Exchange of Martial Compliments at St. Jose de las Ladas—Gen. Menocal, Who is Striving to Establish Peace.

Cienfuegos, Sept. 7.—A detachment of 59 Government troops from this city yesterday encountered a band of Gen. Guzman's insurgents near Camarones. In the fight which ensued the Government force was routed, many being killed or wounded.

There is great excitement in Cienfuegos.

Another Fight.

Havana, Sept. 7.—A body of volunteers and rural guards, numbering 200 men, exchanged shots with Col. Asbert's insurgents Wednesday night near San Jose de las Lajas, Province of Havana.

One rural guard was killed and three insurgents were wounded.

A report that Gen. Menocal, who is using his influence to establish peace between the Government and the insurgents, has an eye on the Presidency, is vigorously denied by the leader of the Cuban veterans. Menocal adds that he desires solely to see the republic at peace.

FLOODS AT VANCOUVER.

One Life Lost by Upsetting of Canoe In Swollen River.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 7.—Heavy rains are causing floods on Vancouver Island.

The down-pour was unprecedented, and at least one life was lost, while several others had narrow escapes.

At Otter Point, the fatality occurred, while two men were attempting to cross the swollen Gordon River. Their canoe overturned on the bay, and Charles Kellum was drowned. Constance Charlton, the other occupant of the canoe, was washed on to the trap of the B. C. Packers' Association, and managed to reach the capping, where he lashed himself, and for five hours remained exposed to the bombardment of the elements.

He was rescued by caretakers of the Malcolm Canning Companies' trap.

Bail For Two Prisoners.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—Judge Anglin yesterday granted bail for Newton and Cora Stonehouse of St. Thomas, charged with attempted murder of the child of Cora Stonehouse on Aug. 22. Their own bond of $1,000 each, and two sureties of $250 for each of the prisoners was accepted.

Why Rain Clouds Are Black.

The color of a cloud depends on the manner in which the sunlight falls upon it and the position of the observer. It will be noticed that high clouds are always white or light in color, and this is because the light by which they are seen is reflected from the under surface by the numberless drops of moisture which go to form the cloud. Heavy rain clouds, on the other hand, are found much nearer the earth, and so the light falls on them more directly from above, giving a silver lining to the cloud, though the undersurface appears black owing to the complete reflection and absorption of the light by the upper layers. Seen from above by an observer in a balloon, the blackest rain clouds appear of the most dazzlingly brilliant white.

Tennis and Lawn Tennis.

There are thousands who imagine that tennis and lawn tennis are identical. In America tennis, the mother game, is always known as court tennis, whereas lawn tennis is generally known as "tennis." The games are in many respects very different. The court, which in lawn tennis is open, in tennis is closed at the back and sides by the walls, and almost invariably above by a roof. There is a considerable amount of play off the back and side walls. The balls are harder than lawn tennis balls, being, in fact, of the consistency of cricket balls. Hence the rackets are heavier and the gut is thicker.—Fry's Magazine.

Songs and Sentiment.

It is a singular fact that in proportion to the wealth of melody of a nation so does its emotional side develop. Remarkable instances of this are to be found in the United Kingdom. In Scotland, Ireland and Wales, countries rich in national songs, the emotional nature is strong. In England, where the melodies, if sweet, at any rate are not so touching and appealing, sentiment is slight.

The History of Man.

The ecclesiastical authorities divide the history of man into six ages: First from Adam to Noah; second, from Noah to Abraham; third, from Abraham to David; fourth, from David to the Babylonish captivity; fifth, from the captivity of Judah to the birth of Christ; sixth, from the birth of Christ to the end of the world.

Typhoid.

By boiling all the water and sterilizing all the milk and thoroughly cooking all the vegetables and killing all the flies the average person may become fairly immune from typhoid fever.

Envy In the Garden.

"I have done nothing but blush all day," complained the rose, "and still that idiot of a poet goes on talking of the modest violet, as if there were not others."

RAINY DAY CLOTHES.

Be Prepared to Make a Good Appearance In Wet Weather.

By the kind of clothes she wears on a rainy day you shall know the mental habits of many a young woman. A girl may have just the nicest kind of garments for all other days in the week, but the day it pours rain is the day that tests the real stuff she is made of.

If she is a girl of forethought, of well balanced mind, she won't be at a loss when she wakes up in the morning to find weepy skies and muddy streets, for she has a neat short skirt, waterproof boots and a small hat for days like this, in which garb she feels as neatly and smartly dressed as when she wears her pretty linen frock and low ties under smiling skies.

But there's another kind of girl who never is prepared for rain and who is shaken into a state of mental confusion at the sound of raindrops pattering on her window of a morning. All her provisions are made for sunshiny days. Half hysterically she dresses in odds and ends of her wardrobe—an old skirt, too long and heavy and too shabby to be hurt; a soiled blouse, untidy shoes, to save her best ones, and probably her usually too big shade hat, decked with flowers and feathers.

You can always tell this girl when you meet her on a rainy day. You know just what a morning frenzy she experienced. And you wonder why it is she never learns that rainy days are as certain to come as clear ones and that it is the part of good sense to prepare for them.

It is surprising how little the weather affects one mentally, if one is dressed to meet it, whereas the girl who never looks out for rainy days is always disagreeably upset by them and considers them a nuisance quite unnecessary in the general scheme of things.

GOOD TEMPER.

A Balance Wheel That Regulates the Domestic Machinery.

Good temper serves as a sort of balance wheel to regulate the working of the domestic machinery, curbing the angry outbreak, checking the impatient response, adjusting differences and averting disagreements with a patient tact that will derive something of added power from the weight of authority behind it.

It will act as a sort of moral solvent, in which hardness of mind and even of disposition with time will disappear, removing sources of feeling that serve not to round and perfect, but to roughen and spoil, the character.

It will create an atmosphere, in short, which will be favorable to the growth of all good qualities and sentiments and in which noxious growths, if they unhappily should appear, finding nothing on which to feed, will wither quickly and die. And so powerful will be this influence for good that it even is conceivable that the atmosphere of such a home would be shown by chemical analysis to differ in its constituent elements from the atmosphere of a household presided over by a woman of a sour or violent temper. That it will affect even the casual visitor with a sense of physical well being as the other does with a sense of physical discomfort, however well ordered it apparently may be, is certain.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Melted butter will not make good cake.

A few drops of lemon juice make cake frosting white.

If oatmeal is soaked overnight in water it requires only about one-half the time to cook.

If eggs are to be boiled hard, have the water boiling when the eggs are put in it. This will prevent the yolks turning dark.

Tomatoes and milk to be blended must be brought to the same temperature and beaten together vigorously. There is less liability of curdling.

Preparatory to frying liver or veal cover it for a minute or two with boiling water. Pat dry with a clean towel, roll in flour and fry (in a covered pan) until brown.

An appetizing breakfast dish is prepared in the following manner: Fry thin pieces of bacon a light brown, but not crisp. Place two strips of bacon on each slice of toast, lay in a pan, break over each slice of toast an egg and bake for a few minutes.

Working Gloves.

Keep the inside of the old gloves you wear around the house for the rough work clean. If they are allowed to become begrimed with the dust and dirt of the work, they are almost as hard on your hands as the work would be. Gasoline will clean almost any sort of glove, although with the heavy ones—the castoffs of the men of the family, which, being loose and strong, are the best to work in—the cleansing fluid sometimes seems to take out the natural oil, leaving them dry and harsh to the touch. When that occurs rub a little pure vaseline into them—just a little, so as not to make them greasy.

Test Your Washing Blue.

Many rust spots of seemingly unaccountable origin may be traced to the bluing used in washing. Prussian blue, the constituent of some of the bluings on the market, is a compound of iron, which, in the presence of an alkali, deposits the rust spot. If you suspect the bluing you use take a little of the compound in a vessel with soap, or, better, caustic potash, and bring to a boil. If iron separates, the compound is prussian blue, and you will have to be very careful in rinsing to get out all the soap.

Town Without Horses or Wheels.

The town of Funchal, in the Madeira islands, is a town with no horses and no wheeled vehicles. In traveling about one either drives in a sledge or is carried in a hammock. The streets and adjacent roads are paved with small and curiously smooth cobblestones, and from the first it was found that runners were better than wheels both for speed and comfort. For instance, when you come to a hill the oxen draw your sled to the top and are then unhitched. Your driver then proceeds to toboggan your conveyance gently down the other side, while the team trots on behind. Horses are not available in Funchal, as the nature of the cobblestone roads would soon ruin their feet. This is why the ox, with his flexible hoof, is the draft animal of Funchal. For expeditions into the country the hammock is used. This is slung on a pole, carried on the shoulders of two men, and is perhaps the most comfortable conveyance in the world—no jar and no need to guide it.

A City on the Cliffs.

Precisely why the town of Bonifacio, in Corsica, is built to the sheer edge of the cliff which forms the sea frontage of that part of the island is a question always asked by the traveler who views Bonifacio for the first time, and he reiterates his question when he observes, upon visiting the environs of the place, that there is plenty of room for the town to have spread out in an inland direction. The early Corsicans apparently thought that farm land was worth more than city real estate and so crowded their dwellings to the dizzy edge of their 200 foot precipice. One's first impression is that these houses, with their walls on a vertical plane with the cliff, were purposely so situated that the body of a victim of a dark vendetta murder might be conveniently dropped out of the window into the sea beneath, with no one the wiser. Certainly there is a suggestion of romance and mystery in the aspect of the town. It forms, at any rate, one of the oddest sky lines in the world.

Bear Hunting.

Bear hunting, with the assistance of guides supplied with a well trained pack of hounds, may be satisfactory if merely the killing of them is desired, but it certainly is no sport and deserves not even to be ranked with trapping bears, as in the latter case the hunter must possess at least some knowledge of the quarry's habitat and habits. Unlike a fox, a bear, when once found by the hounds, stands no chance whatever of escaping, and there would be just as much sport in shooting the animals in a park or pen as to kill a run to bay bear. And, while this truth applies to mountain lions also, there is not even the excuse of the animal's destructiveness, which is applicable as far as the latter is concerned.—Field and Stream.

The Poodle.

Why is a poodle, so called? Some one says: "Probably the natural answer would recall the old lady who said that no credit could be given to Adam for naming the pig, since anybody would have known what to call it. 'Poodle' seems so obvious a name for this dog. And, in fact, this is not far from the truth about the origin of the word. It is quite recent in English, not being found before 1864, apparently. It is the German 'pudel,' which comes from the Low German, 'pudeln,' to waddle, and the dog must have been so called, as Skeat says, either because he waddles after his master or because he looks fat and clumsy on account of his thick hair."

Coldness of Ice.

It seems strange to think that some ice is colder than other ice. The term "ice cold" always seems to signify a definite temperature. All water under similar conditions freezes at a certain definite temperature. But when the thermometer falls below that it continues to affect the ice, making it harder and colder. The test has been made by placing a piece of ice from the north and a piece of ice formed in the vicinity of New York near a stove together. The former took much longer to melt than the latter.

Viewing the Remains.

It had been a strenuous afternoon for the devoted teacher who took six of her pupils through the Museum of Natural History, but her charges had enjoyed every minute of the time.

"Where have you been, boys?" asked the father of two of the party that night, and the answer came with joyous promptness:

"We've been to a dead circus."

Rubinstein on Piano Playing.

When a pupil happened to ask Rubinstein how certain passages should be construed, he invariably showed them. But if a pupil asked, "Shall I play this in this manner or that?"—both equally correct—Rubinstein invariably replied "Play as you feel. Is the day rainy? Play it this way. Is the day sunny? Play it the other way."

Cutting.

A certain photographer is exhibiting in his window the photograph of a young man with the following inscription attached to it: "This is the man who put his hair in curls to have his photograph taken and then can't pay for them."

It Might Have Been Worse.

Lydia—I'm just as mad as I can be with Charlie. He kissed me right before all the girls. Georgette—Well isn't that better than if he kissed all the girls before you?

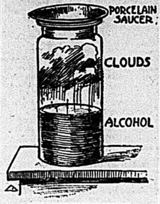
Experience is the great test of truth and is perpetually contradicting the theories of men.—Dr. Johnson.

AN IMITATION STORM.

How You May Produce a Raging Tempest In a Bottle.

Some of our young experimenters may be interested in a simple device for making a real rainstorm in a bottle. The only apparatus necessary is a tall bottle, like the one shown in the cut, and an ordinary coffee saucer. The bottle is half filled with alcohol of 92 degrees strength and heated in a bath of water until the alcohol, the bottle and the saucer are of an almost equal temperature. Then the apparatus is removed from the water, wiped quickly with a soft cloth, and the experimenter is ready to watch some wonderful transformations inside of the bottle.

The vapor of the alcohol soon rises and fills the bottle, but the saucer cools rapidly, and the vapor, being warmer, is quickly condensed. Real clouds appear in the upper part of the bottle, and presently, as the cooling process goes on, tiny raindrops form and fall just as in a regular shower.



THE STORM IN THE BOTTLE.

The whole process of the distribution of moisture on the earth's surface is illustrated in the bottle. The alcohol is the ocean or the lake, the air above it is the clear sky, and the warm bath of water is the sun. The saucer plays the part of the cold currents in the upper air and condenses the vapor which the sun draws up from the ocean.

A still more striking result can be obtained by using a cold saucer in place of the warm one. In that case the difference of temperature will be increased, and there is a regular old fashioned hurricane.

This very simple experiment was invented recently by Professor Errera of Brussels, and almost any of our boys or girls could interest a whole class or a school exhibition with it. Try it.

A Pretty Experiment.

Take a common tumbler, partly fill it with clear water and place upon its surface some pieces of gum camphor. Immediately they will begin to swim around the water, and if the camphor be lighted they will look like balls of fire floating thereon. Put a few drops of oil of any kind into the water and the camphor will cease moving at once. And while you have the camphor at hand put a little in a clear bottle, cork it and place it in the sun for a few hours. Then you will notice beautiful white, silky needles begin to appear around the neck of the bottle, which are so delicate and fragile in appearance that you would hardly think they could hold together.

The Height of a Mountain.

The barometer is the instrument by which the weight of the atmosphere is determined. But how many of you know that this instrument may also be used to determine the height of a mountain? It has been found that the column of mercury in the barometer falls about one inch to every increase of 1,000 feet in altitude, because the higher we ascend the lighter is the atmosphere and the less, therefore, the pressure on the mercury in the reservoir of the instrument. If the barometer marks thirty inches, then, at sea level and twenty-seven inches on top of a mountain, it follows that the mountain is 3,000 feet in height approximately.

Animals Enjoy Music.

Horses are easily trained to step proudly to the sound of fife and drum. At the zoo in Paris a learned professor has been examining various animals with regard to their musical ear. He found monkeys very partial to ragtime, particularly if played on a violin or flute. They stop eating, scratching or jumping about to listen. Elephants or rhinoceroses took no notice of either ragtime or symphony, but the hippopotamus raised his head out of the water and listened with the keenest enjoyment apparently to a waltz by a famous composer—Offenbach.

Conundrums.

Why can a clear summer's night furnish you with an excellent weather forecast? Because it gives you dew, not ice (due notice).

Why is an umbrella like a hot cross bun? Because it is never seen after lent.

Why is life the greatest riddle of all? Because you must give it up.

When does a man have to keep his word? When no one will take it.

My Lucky Brother.

I have a brother not so tall—
I haven't any other—
So he's what you may really call
A very lucky brother,
For when my trousers get too small
For me to wear our mother
Just "takes them in," seams, legs and all,
And gives them to my brother.
—Malcolm Douglas in St. Nicholas.

NECK CULTURE.

Exercise by Which to Acquire a Well Poised Head.

There is nothing that so surely places the stamp of individuality upon a woman as the way in which she carries her head and chest. The proportion of the neck should be in harmony with the head and shoulders. This may be regulated by exercise. The fat neck may be reduced, and the lean, flabby neck may be rounded out. Even the too short neck may be made longer by carrying the head well poised, and the long neck may be made to appear shorter by carrying the chest well elevated.

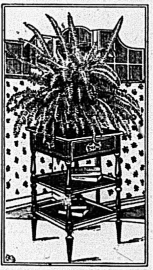
If you want to look strong you must first feel strong; if you want to look good you must first feel good, and if you want a good presence you must first feel that you possess and can express to the world a character of magnificent proportions. With this feeling cultivate a light yet confident step, a firm knee, a prominent chest, a positive neck and a well poised head. Whenever you wish to encourage this feeling practice the following exercise: Stand erect and firm, place a book on the head, the tips of the fingers on the shoulders, with the elbows straight out at the sides; fill and raise the chest to its utmost limits as you walk forward five steps, exale, but do not lower the chest, as you walk backward five steps. Do not look down. Keep the eyes fixed slightly upward or straight in front.

To acquire that much coveted luxury, a neck "rising from the shoulders like a column," requires strength—strength of purpose as well as physical strength. That the graceful poise of the neck and head is dependent on the strength of the lower limbs, and particularly on the knees, would seem at first to be farfetched, but it is quite true. Your position, or, rather, your attitude when standing, is what determines your good presence, and you cannot possibly stand well poised with a weak or bent knee. The chest necessarily sinks and the head inclines forward. The neck is also dependent to a great extent upon the strength of the spine. In fact, much of the grace of the entire body depends on the strength and erectness of the spine. For neck culture it should be specially strong and flexible at the point where the neck emerges into the shoulders. It is here that the neck cranes forward when the chest sinks. This is the point that has to be kept in mind in performing all neck exercises.—Benzinger's Magazine.

FERN STAND.

An Attractive Ornament For Sitting Room or Library.

The note of "living green" that adds so decidedly to the attractiveness of sitting room, library or other apartment is introduced oftentimes in the most satisfactory way by a fernery. In a room where the coloring is very bright or ornate an ornamental stand for the soft green plants is a desirable addition. And it may be as handsome as taste and purse will permit. An example of such a stand is here illustrated, the lower shelf serving as an excellent resting place for books or magazines.—Brooklyn Eagle.



HANDSOME FERN STAND.

Celluloid Articles.

A manufacturer of celluloid articles says that the danger of these articles exploding into flame when near a fire is greatly exaggerated. Nevertheless he adds this long list of "don'ts:" "Don't place hot curling irons near your celluloid hair comb; don't drop a match on the celluloid back of a hairbrush or hand glass after you have lighted the gas in your dressing room; don't use the celluloid handle of your paper cutter to press down the tobacco in your lighted pipe; don't put your celluloid beads near a light; don't hang a celluloid bead curtain where there is an unprotected light; don't keep loose matches in the same pocket with your celluloid cardcase or diary." It would be simpler not to use celluloid at all, as a matter of fact.

Wall Paper Blisters.

If a blister is found in wall paper after it is hung take a penknife, carefully cut the slit, then dip a small camel's hair brush in a little paste and paste the cut surface down. Go over the spot lightly with a small hammer, and when the paste is dry the blisters will have disappeared, and the doctoring of the spot will not be suspected. This is the way that professional paper hangers treat blisters in lightweight and light colored papers. If very heavy, embossed or dark colored plain papers were used a different treatment would be necessary.

MRS. MARY SELZ.

An Ohio Woman Who Has Proved a Successful Miller.

Mrs. Mary Selz of Washington township, Morrow county, O., is an example of what a woman can accomplish when she possesses ability and the determination to use it. There are few women who would care to undertake the management and operation of a flour mill, as did Mrs. Selz, who three years ago was left a widow, with three small children and nothing to support them but an old fashioned country gristmill, which was partly covered with a mortgage. She is thirty-six years old.

It was a big undertaking for Mrs Selz to keep the old mill in operation but she is a woman of pluck and energy and has been running the mill on a paying basis ever since the death of her husband.

MRS. MARY SELZ.

Mrs. Selz attends to all the details of the business personally, and this in part is the secret of her success. She is always on hand at the mill in readiness for the farmers when they arrive with their wagon loads of grain, and her orders are all punctually executed. Only during the very busy season of the year does Mrs. Selz hire any one to assist her in her duties about the mill.

Mrs. Selz is very popular among the farmers, because she is prompt and obliging, and during the three years which she has had charge of the mill she has managed to lift the mortgage and has a bank account.

Self Control.

Mothers need to discriminate. Harshness and severity should never be meted out to the child who is the victim of an accident. With the utmost admiration I remember the perfect poise and unbroken calm of a sweet woman whose little girl had the misfortune to knock over a very costly vase which had for her mother precious associations connected with her wedding journey in the far east. The vase stood on a table where it had been placed after having been shown to guests, who had gazed at it almost with envy. In came little Barbara, her doll in her arms; her foot caught on a rug, and she slipped on the polished floor. She threw out a hand to save herself falling, and, lo, the vase lay in fragments at our feet. "Never mind, Barbara," said the mother gently, "you did not mean to do it. I am so glad you are not hurt and that even dolly has not a scratch." The object lesson in self control was worth going far to see, and its effect would never be lost on the character formation of the little daughter.—Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion.

For the "Finger Bowl" Table.

Cover the side table with a white cloth and there arrange the dessert service. Finger bowls one-third full of cold water should rest upon dessert plates, a little doily between each plate and bowl. A slice of lemon, a leaf of rose geranium or a few English violets floating on the water may be used, but these are not obligatory. Put a knife at the right on each dessert plate, a fork at the left, across the front a dessert spoon. The coffee set should be on the sideboard or side table, a small tray also, with the sugar bowl and cream ewer, because all do not drink black coffee. Have a plate of cut bread or rolls on the side table to offer whenever required. Beside the cut bread place a fork for the waitress to help any one without touching the bread herself. One thing requiring emphasis is this: Hot plates are essential for all viands and vegetables served hot.

Boiling Potatoes.

Choose potatoes to boil in regard to size. For instance, one day they should all be large or small, rarely large and small at the same time, for this necessitates cooking the smaller ones until they are almost in shreds to get the large ones sufficiently tender to serve. If there is no other way, then the large ones should be boiled from ten to fifteen minutes before the smaller ones are put in the water, so that they will both be done at the same time. To test potatoes with a fork when they are cooking leaves a ragged surface that spoils the appearance when they are served. A skewer or a knitting needle should be run gently into the center of the vegetable, for either one of these makes a clean small hole that is not noticeable after it has been withdrawn.

Putting on Ruffles.

There is a knack in putting ruffles on a skirt which makes that usually dreaded task as easy as sewing a plain seam. Let the skirt fall on the floor and draw the hem across the lapboard. Spread the ruffle evenly on the gather thread for an equal length and lay the lower edge even with the edge of the skirt. Stick two or three pins in the gathers to hold them temporarily, then begin at the lower edge and pin to the edge of the skirt. Pin every two inches for the length of the lapboard. The gather thread is then drawn taut and a few more pins put in the gathers, after which the basting is mere play. Use plenty of pins and you will wonder that you ever tried to put on ruffles without them.

A Sand Table.

Every mother who has little children that cannot go to a kindergarten will find a sand table one of the best investments that she can make for their continual entertainment. The sand table is a deep, strong box on stout legs and should be water tight. This is filled with sand to within a few inches of the top and provides a place to dig—to make garden roads, to create hills, mountains and rivers and valleys and with the aid of blocks and the miniature trees to be had at the toy stores to construct cities, filled with architectural beauties and lovely parks.

Round Shoulders a Defect.

Round shoulders and a stooping figure are defects that can be overcome, even in elderly women, although the process is much longer and more tedious than in correcting the same fault in a young child. High and large pillows should be abandoned, the person sleeping flat and without the pillow. Practice all exercises for chest expansion; also exercises for the shoulders alone, raising the shoulders up and down, forward and back and in a circle. Carry the head high and practice the exercises persistently. This is the only remedy.

Combs.

All combs with finely pointed teeth have a tendency to scratch the scalp. They promote dandruff. Many persons try to overcome dandruff by the use of such combs. The remedy makes the disorder worse. All combs should have coarse teeth nicely rounded and with blunt ends. It is worth while getting the best comb, for a comb when properly used—that is, used for a long time daily and brought right down upon the scalp—promotes nutrition of the hair. Combing is of far greater importance than brushing.

Cream Cheese.

A very old English recipe for cream cheese is so enticing as to tempt one to try it. Take a quart of thick cream and put it with two drops of rennet into a napkin which has been freshly wrung out of ice cold water. Sprinkle a little salt on the napkin before pouring in the cream. The rennet causes the cheese cream to turn almost at once, and it is soon possible to tie it up very tight in the napkin. Hang in a cool place for twenty-four hours, changing the napkin several times.

Children's Letters.

Children should be encouraged to write letters. It gives them facility in expressing their ideas, and if the habit is established in childhood it is less difficult in after life. When they leave the old home a regular correspondence is a source of the greatest comfort to both parents and children, and frequent letters help to keep the fraternal tie strong and unbroken between brothers and sisters.

Felling.

Tailors make use of an unusually short needle called "betweens" for their felling and other fine hand work. Women who are fortunate enough to know about these handy little needles all like them very much indeed for hemming and felling, as they are more conducive to fine work than the longer ones.

Burned Pots.

No matter how badly burned on the bottom the contents may be, put a tablespoonful of washing soda into the pan, add a quart of water and set on the back of the range to heat. Shake the pan gently occasionally, and in a couple of hours the burned particles will dissolve in the water.

A Good Bleacher.

A good bleacher is made by boiling one pound of soda in a quart of water. Add a packet of chloride of lime, strain and bottle, and discolored doorsteps and tables that are a bad color may be cleaned with the fluid. Well brush over and leave for the night, then wash well off in the morning.

Diet to Increase Weight.

Diet plays an important part with those who desire to gain plumpness, and nothing will help the painfully thin girl more than eating the kind of food she likes. The stomach will nearly always digest what it likes and reject what it does not crave.

Door mats should be always as wide as the door and deep enough to stand a good deal of treading on. If this is not the case the edges are constantly rubbed with dirty boots and the carpets suffer.

A strong decoction of poke root mixed with an equal quantity of black molasses boiled to a sirup and spread upon bread is sure and present death to roaches. They eat it greedily and die.

In shaking blankets care must always be taken to catch them about a foot from the selvage; otherwise a risk is run of tearing them.

Those who love the scent of violets should place ground orris root made into sachets among their linen.

The Eyes and The Nerves

When feeling nervous or tired go to the window and look away into the far distance. Continue this for a few minutes and note the soothing calming influence that comes over you. Then turn again to something that requires a close range of vision, and at once the nervousness will return. Business men when tired often close their eyes for a moment, as they have learned by intuition that it rests the entire system. Closing the eyes has this calming effect because one-third of the brain is for the time being shut off from work, and using unnecessary energy. It proves "brain strain" undoubtedly present, though the vision may be seemingly excellent. This form of brain strain we relieve by the proper glasses.

A PILFERER GOT HIS DESERTS

ROBERT RICHARDSON, CONVICTED OF STEALING $70, SENTENCED BY JUDGE FRALECK.

At noon to-day, Judge Fraleck meted out justice to a young man named Robert Richardson, who, as readers of The Intelligencer will remember, was arrested in the latter part of July for stealing $70 from the clothing of Mr. Charles Nunn, a G.T.R. employee, the money being taken while Mr. Nunn was bathing in the river above Lazier's paper mills. The prisoner was tried yesterday and found guilty by the Judge, sentence being deferred till to-day. Young Richardson was first arrested for the alleged theft of a watch. In searching him for the watch the authorities found a $5 bill in his pocket. Astounded at his having so much money a further search was made, and $70 more found on his person. Then Mr. Nunn, hearing of this, began to think that must be his money, and the preliminary examination of Richardson followed. The prisoner claimed to have found the $70 in a field, wrapped in blue cloth. To the Judge he told a very conflicting story, which certainly did not bear the earmarks of probability, the result being that he was found guilty. The Judge ordered the $70 found on Richardson to be returned to Mr. Nunn, and sentenced the former to six months in the Central Prison.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

BRIGHT COMIC OPERA COMING.

When "Dolly Varden," one of the brightest and most tuneful comic operas the American stage has seen in the past quarter of a century, was first produced, the management stopped at nothing in the matter of expense to make the presentation as beautiful as the best scenic artists obtainable, and the most famous costumiers could make it. This entire lavish production is being utilized this season by Milton and Sargent Aborn, who are presenting Lillian Spencer and a splendid big singing organization in "Dolly Varden." As an opera, it is conceded to be one of the classics of American comic opera, and is the most meritorious, and yet the most popular, of the compositions of the famous musician, Julian Edwards. Carman Opera House, Sept. 11th.

SURVEY FROM BELLEVILLE TO POINT NEAR VAUDREUIL IS NOW BEING MADE.

Mr. A. G. Ardagh, who is on the engineering staff of the C. P. R., was in the city to-day. Mr. Ardagh, in the course of a conversation with The Intelligencer, said he had been instructed to make a survey from some point this side of Vaudreuil, P. Q., to this city, where he will connect with the party under Mr. H. Wellwood. The work near Vaudreuil, Mr. Ardagh said, had already begun, but it would be more preliminary in its character than that being conducted by the parties at present at work in this district.

INDUSTRIES.

Ald. McCrodan, chairman, presided. It was resolved that the chairman, Ald. Cooper and Marsh be a committee to ascertain how many power users in the city will undertake to use power to be provided by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and the amount, preparatory to an application being made to the Commission for power for the city of Belleville.

EXECUTIVE.

Ald. Marsh, chairman, presided. One account was passed, namely:

Walker Foundry Co.	$16.00

It was resolved that the lease of the Benson store on Bridge St., by the Standard Bank, be concurred in, the city being interested in the same through the Butterfield mortgage.

Peculiar Circumstances.

The circumstances attending the death of James C. Howell, formerly of Rossmore, an employee of the Standard Chemical Company of Toronto, whose works are at Longford Mills, which has already been noted in The Intelligencer, were very peculiar. Some cold water rushing into a vessel containing boiling water caused the hot water to splash, severely scalding him. His wounds were dressed with an oil preparation, and he was progressing nicely, when his bed caught fire from spontaneous combustion. His exertions in putting out the fire in his weakened condition resulted in shock, from which he died.

KINGSTON HOSPITAL BOARD GOES BACK TO OLD SYSTEM.

Kingston, Sept. 6. — The governors of the General Hospital have reverted to the former system of having the institution presided over by a medical superintendent, who will have sole control. The plan of a lady superintendent and a Medical Board did not work out with any degree of satisfaction, and the governors, with one exception, decided to rescind the system in use and adopt the former method. A strong committee will select a suitable head. The resignation of Miss Elizabeth Gordon, the lady superintendent, was accepted.

THE Y. M. C. A.

PROSPECTS FOR CONTINUANCE OF THE WORK IN THIS CITY.

The Intelligencer this morning had a chat with a gentleman deeply interested in Y. M. C. A. work in Belleville, and asked him what the prospects were for its continuance.

It was not possible to state definitely at present, the interviewer was told, but there would be a meeting of directors next Tuesday, when the question of continuance or discontinuance would probably be settled. There was, however, our informant said, a feeling among many directors that, unless they can secure a new building and make better arrangements, the work in Belleville will be suspended for a time, though it will by no means be given up permanently. The paraphernalia will not be disposed of, but preserved for use in the future, as the directors have an abiding faith that Belleville, some day, will furnish a brighter field for Y.M.C.A. work than it does at present. Many people believed, however, that the "Y's" had done good in this city, and the directors felt that their labors had not been in vain. The matter, however, would be decided next Tuesday.

Canadian Council Of the R. E. Church.

FINISHED ITS LABORS IN TORONTO YESTERDAY—WILL MEET NEXT YEAR IN THIS CITY.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—The first Canadian Synodical Council of the Reformed Episcopal Church was concluded yesterday afternoon. The day's sessions were marked by the adoption of a revised constitution and revised canons. Few changes were made, the most important being the substitution of "members" for "presbyters" in designating those who shall have the right to nominate a presiding officer of Synod in case of the absence of the Bishop, thus giving more recognition to the laity. Also a clause was adopted making the trustees responsible for seeing to it that the wardens shall have church property insured against fire.

Rev. Dr. W. Witten and Rev. A. B. Hubly were reappointed editors, and Rev. Geo. Orman business manager of the Canadian edition of The Episcopal Recorder.

Congratulations were extended to Right Rev. Bishop Fallows upon his attaining the thirtieth anniversary of his ordination. The Bishop in replying referred happily to his British birth, Canadian ordination and United States adoption.

A resolution was also voted to be sent congratulating Right Rev. Bishop Edward Cridge, D.D., of British Columbia, who was ordained at the same time as Bishop Fallows.

The next annual Synodical Council will convene at Belleville in May.

Farm Rich In Silver.

Peterboro, Sept. 6.— Excitement has been caused in Haliburton county, about six miles north of here, by the discovery of silver on the land of a farmer named McKniff. McKniff bought two hundred acres of land from the Government twenty years ago, and has been farming it ever since, without the knowledge that it covered rich silver deposits. A week ago an American prospector made the discovery that the property was rich with ore, a portion of which, when sent to Toronto, was found to contain a large percentage of silver. Since the news of the discovery has become known McKniff has refused several opportunities to sell his farm at a price far above its former value.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market since Tuesday last, as reported by the railways, amounted to 93 carloads, composed of 1191 cattle, 1013 hogs, 3553 sheep and lambs, with 245 calves.

Exporters.

The only report of sales of exporters made to-day was for two choice bulls, 1500 and 1900 lbs. each, at $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

The best loads offered sold from $4.25 to $4.50; medium at $3.80 to $4.15; common, $3.50 to $3.75; cows at $2.50 to $3.50 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. Murby reports a fair trade in stockers and feeders this week. As usual, the good ones alone are in demand, all others selling slowly. Mr. Murby bought about 200 head at following quotations: Best feeders, 900 to 1100 lbs. at $3.60 to $4, best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. at $3.40 to $3.65; best stockers, 600 to 800 lbs. at $3.25 to $3.50; medium stockers, 600 to 900 lbs. at $2.75 to $3.25; common stockers, 600 to 900 lbs. at $2.25 to $2.50.

Milch Cows.

Light deliveries of milch cows and springers, of which there were not enough of good quality, sold at $30 to $60 each. More good cows would have sold.

Veal Calves.

Liberal deliveries met a good market as usual, prices ranging from $3 to $6.50 per cwt, with prime veals at $7, but only a limited number of the latter are coming on the market.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run was large, but prices held fairly steady. Export ewes sold at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt; bucks, $3 to $3.50 per cwt; lambs sold at $5.50 to $6.15 for the bulk, with one or two lots of selected at $6.25. About 3000 lambs were on the market, 90 per cent. being bucks, as usual. When this fact is taken into consideration, the above lamb prices are high.

Hogs.

Deliveries of 1000 sold at unchanged quotations, selects $6.40 and lights and fats at $6.15 per cwt.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Cattle—Steady; prices unchanged.

LIBERALS FRIENDLY

Great Britain Speaks to Canada By Winston Churchill.

VIA HAMAR GREENWOOD, M.P

Who Was Tendered a Large Banquet by the Canadian National Exhibition—Splendid Compliment to a Young Canadian Who Is Winning His Way In Britain—Good Points of His Speech—Empire Boom.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—It was eminently fitting that "American Day" at Canadian National Exhibition should be chosen by the directors to banquet Hamar Greenwood, M. P. for York, England, but, as Sir William Mulock put it, "Canadian bred."

Though it was a great function, it was held in the evening and was over by 10 o'clock last night.

W. K. McNaught, M. P. P., made a perfect chairman, and in introducing the guest of the occasion said that Mr. Greenwood had been of very great assistance to the directors of the fair in many matters of importance in England during the year, and this in itself made it appropriate to entertain him at the fair. But they were proud to welcome him for what he was and what he had done for Canada and the Empire.

The toast of "The King," was duly honored and the National Anthem sung.

Growth of Empire.

Hon. J. W. St. John, in proposing the toast of "The Empire," stated that it had increased during last century at the rate of two acres a second. He was glad to say that in this mighty Empire the champion of liberty and civilization, the sons and daughters of Canada took foremost place. In statesmanship this was evident from the list of Canadians in the Imperial Parliament, of whom he mentioned Hon. Edward Blake, Sir Gilbert Parker, Bonar Law, Charles D. Evelyn, Dr. Macnamara, C. D. Rose, Allen Baker, Foster Boulton and last, but not least, Hamar Greenwood.

Sir William Mulock, in responding, complimented the gifted first commoner of Ontario, who proposed the toast. Were he to treat the subject in the light of the storied past he would venture the assertion that the Empire owed its position among the present day nations to the fact that British institutions stood for liberty and justice.

What were to be the future relations of Canada with the Empire, was a question often asked. He did not share the view that a new bond was needed. In his judgment the imperial sentiment was not a sordid one, and did not depend on tariffs, custom walls, preferences or free trade, but on a higher, holier foundation. Britain was the cradle of civil and religious liberty, and this was the great heritage Canada enjoyed, from the mother of nations. Sentiment was the true bond, and mercenary considerations would have no place in determining the union, which would continue from age to age between Britain and Canada.

He had to congratulate Britain on the importation of Hamar Greenwood, Canadian-bred. His success would stimulate many young Canadians to dedicate as he had done his great gifts to the mother country.

Mayor Coatsworth was pleased to note that those conditions which had brought about the disintegration of earlier empires were wanting in the British. He joined in congratulating Britain in acquiring some young Canadian blood such as had been supplied by Mr. Greenwood.

The Toast of the Evening.

A. H. N. Colquhoun proposed the toast of the evening. Mr. Greenwood was one of that republic of letters in which those who belonged to it were careful of their common interests. Mr. Greenwood had distinguished himself in many ways, but it was to his own talent and pluck that Mr. Greenwood owed his present position. He represented in the British Parliament a party which was peculiarly close to the democratic forces of the time. They recognized the British Empire as a power for good, and they saw in him one with whom they had common ground in the service of the Empire. His own idea of imperialism was of the quality of the King's subjects in every part of the Empire, and Mr. Greenwood's success had done much to establish that.

Mr. Greenwood's Reply.

After graceful personal references to those who honored him and thanks for that honor, Mr. Greenwood said he considered Canada to be the most progressive and most important colony of the Empire. The people had a sense of political and religious equality which was still wanting in Britain. The more Canadians there were in the House of Commons the more would imperial matters be considered and local matters relegated to the proper quarters for settlement. They had now nine thorough-bred Canadians and one or two New Zealanders and Australians in the House. This would prevent the Home Government landing in a morass, as they have done on some occasions, and would prevent the signing of an Ashburton or any subsequent treaty of that kind.

Keen For the Colonies.

He was sure the present English administration, with all of whom he had discussed Canada, were as keen champions of colonial development as any of those present. He would not for a moment attempt to interfere in Canadian affairs. He was in the small but considerable majority of those who never gave advice to his native country. But when a British Cabinet took office they were always actuated with respect, sympathy and loyalty towards the colonies. There was no such thing as partisanship in a British Cabinet. Whether a squatter in Australia or a 160-acre man in the Northwest, it was the sentiment of the great men in England that the Empire stood behind their distant brethren. Their great hearts beat in England as warmly for Canada as Canadians' own.

A Hard Country to Forget.

He hoped that from generation to generation they would find England an increasingly hard country to forget. He believed they were growing closer and closer on account of causes of the heart, over which no party politicians, he thanked God, had any control.

At this point he read a letter to himself from Winston Churchill, M. P., in which the Colonial Under Secretary said that the change of Government, "great and far-reaching though it has been, does not imply any weakening in the affection of the British people towards their kith and kin across the sea," and he commissioned Mr. Greenwood to convince the people of Canada of that fact.

Concluding Mr. Greenwood said: "During a life which I hope will be long, and which I know will be difficult, I hope that I will never do anything that will bring shame to any Canadian, or ever speak a word that would reflect other than credit to the land of my birth." If he sought a higher position it would be to make it possible for him more worthily to represent Canada and more usefully to serve the great Empire.

Chairman McNaught thought Winston Churchill's letter would give a great feeling of relief to many who feared the result of the accession to power of the Liberal party in England.

American Day.

Yesterday the Stars and Stripes floated over the Administration Building at the Fair. At the directors' luncheon toasts were drunk after the royal health had been honored, to the President of the United States and to W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., "the honorary but active president of the association," whose 62nd birthday it was.

Chairman W. K. George spoke of the good terms existing between the two great American nations.

Prof. Carlyle and A. R. Minard, secretary of the Boston Canadian Club, spoke up for the president and the United States.
ted States.

Hon. A. B. Morine of Newfoundland and G. C. Creelman also contributed to the speech making.

WE'RE ALL IMPERIALISTS.

Hon. Frank Oliver Interviewed In London—Comments.

London, Sept. 7.—(C. A. P.)—Hon. Frank Oliver, Canadian Minister of the Interior, interviewed by The Express, said:

"We are all imperialists in Canada. Canadians are very glad that the preference they have been enabled to show Britain is looked on satisfactorily, but if in her own interests Canada should find it necessary in the future to make other arrangements, then Mother England will not be displeased."

Commenting on the interview. The Express says there is no reason to fear because Canadians prefer not to emphasize the sentimental nature of the bond between the mother country and Canada, that they lack affection and reverence. What was wanted now was that the magic of empire shall be replaced by practical work.

CANCELS 90 SHARES

"I don't know."

"Were you any party to the discussion with Patteson when $80,000 was agreed as the price?"

"No."

Price of the Stock.

"What did he first ask?"

"In the neighborhood of $100,000."

"Was Firstbrook a partner in the deal?"

"I don't know."

"What was offered by you at first?"

"I don't know."

Every director of the Home Life had resigned and was reappointed or not reappointed. Witness did not know whether the directors received any part of the $80,000.

"Did the directors of the Home Life appreciate that the five per cent. of the annual premiums up to $11,000 were to provide security for the $80,000?"

"Yes."

Reverting to the responsibility for the $80,000 to the People's Life by Mr. McCutcheon, witness said that he had assigned these to Mr. Stratton. The document will be furnished.

Mr. McCutcheon stated that the Citizens' Life had also been taken over by the Home Life. The price paid by the Home Life for the business of the People's Life was the amount of one year's premium or 100 per cent. Mr. Tilley dissected the transfer carefully.

A Difference.

Mr. Tilley read a telegram from witness to the Insurance Department to the effect that on Dec. 31, 1905, the People's Life had 1,547 policies in force and a total business of $763,479. The transfer, however, was put in as $2,672,000. Mr. Tilley wanted to know where the $900,000 had disappeared to.

Mr. Kelley, the secretary, said that it was lapsed policies for 1905 that had not been written off.

Counsel used up considerable time in tracing certain cheques which were put through by the People's Life at the end of the year, one for $9,701 and the other $15,064, as an asset, but not paid until the middle of January. They were explained by the secretary, who said that they were treated as an asset in the annual statement, although not really paid for three weeks.

Commissioner Kent referred to this mode as a fiction of bookkeeping. The whole action was a mere matter of form.

J. P. AMES COMMITTED.

Physicians Say Wounds on Pupil Have Caused Illness.

St. Catharines, Sept. 7.—J. P. Ames, the Wellandport school teacher, was committed for trial on the charge of aggravated assault upon Dean Horton, one of his pupils.

The boy is still in bed as the result of the assault and the magistrate had to take his evidence at his home.

Two physicians, Dr. Oliver of Wellandport and Dr. Birdsay of Fenwick, gave evidence as to the wounds upon the boy and swore that as a consequence of the assault he was nervous and weak.

Ames was admitted to bail till the December sessions of the peace.

Two Farmers Are Burned Out.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—Near Black Rapids, Nepean Township, Wednesday afternoon, a steam thresher working at the farm of Thomas Boyce, councillor of Nepean, ignited the straw in a mow, and the fire destroyed barns, outbuildings and the season's crops, and a brick house and contents.

The flames leaped to an adjoining farm and did similar destruction on the farm of William Ready. Both lost all. Mr. Boyce's loss will exceed $5,000, while Mr. Ready's is over $4,000.

The threshing separator was also destroyed, and one of the horses.

Russian Bourse.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 7.—The firm note struck by Premier Stolypin in the official communication embodying the whole Government program, published Wednesday night, with warning to terrorists and revolutionists on one hand, that crime must and will be suppressed at any cost, and to the reactionists, on the other hand, that reforms can neither be abandoned nor deferred, met with a prompt response on the bourse yesterday, where prices were not merely firm, but were very strong, without any symptoms of artificial support.

Trades Union Congress Favors Pensions For Everybody.

Liverpool, Sept. 7.—Pensions for everybody at the age of 60 was among the proposals adopted at yesterday's session of the Trades Union Congress. The advocates of the resolution contended that the money necessary for the pensions could easily be raised from among the wealthy by taxing land values.

OTTAWA RIVER VERY LOW.

Lumbermen Are Heavy Sufferers—Mills Shut Down.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—Owing to the very low water in the Ottawa, the lumbering interests are suffering much.

The water is unprecedently low and at Hawkesbury the mills are completely shut down, 600 men being out of work.

Eddy's have had to shut down at night, and J. R. Booth has reduced his night shift. The steamers are also finding navigation more difficult.

Ernest Terry's Report On the Salvation Army Immigrants.

London, Sept. 8.—(C. A. P.)—Ernest Terry, a member of Leeds distress committee, who recently visited Canada to enquire into the condition and prospects of emigrants sent out by the distress committee through the agency of the Salvation Army, says in his report that the conditions under which third-class emigrants were carried on the boats were not satisfactory.

The steerage forecastle was greatly overcrowded, sleeping and dining accommodation wretched, lavatory accommodation primitive. The inadequate quarters smelt disagreeably, and could only be described as bad. The food was good in quality, plentiful, but badly cooked and always roughly served.

Describing conditions prevailing in Canada, Terry remarks that the glowing account given by various immigration agents, Government and private, must be largely discounted.

Room For Improvement.

The Canadian Associated Press in the course of a very brief interview yesterday with Hon. Frank Oliver, referred to the remarks of Ernest Terry regarding emigrants on steamers. Mr. Oliver remarked there was much to be said on that subject, as there is room for much improvement in the accommodation provided for emigrants.

Mr. Oliver left last night for Cardiff, then visits Belfast, Dublin, and sails for Canada on the fourteenth.

WARSHIP INVESTIGATING.

Fishery Question on French Shore of Newfoundland Up Again.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 8.—The French shore question has been revived under a new aspect.

A French vessel fishing within territorial waters on the northeast coast, having complained that people on the coast destroyed her nets, British and French warships investigated and the Imperial Government invited the colony also to investigate and punish its subjects if found to be in the wrong. The colonial cruiser Fiona, with officials, has been despatched to the scene to hold a full inquiry.

The incident is likely to lead to the adoption of Anglo-French regulations for conducting the fisheries on the French shore.

The shock was preceded by a loud rumbling noise.

Armistice Is Blocked.

Pino Guerra, Whose Forces Augment, Refuses to Negotiate.

For Answer to Overtures Blows Up Two Bridges of the Western Railway, Which May Cause International Complications, and Attacks San Juan de Martinez--Drives Back Repairing Forces.

Havana, Sept. 8.—All peace overtures are blocked by the refusal of Pino Guerra, the insurgent leader in Pinar del Rio Province, to enter into any arrangement for an armistice.

Guerra's answer to the Government's announcement of its readiness to grant a ten days' armistice, is the blowing up of two bridges on the Western Railway and an attack on San Juan de Martinez.

All regard the blowing up of an English company's railroad bridge as a serious matter, and likely to invite international action by Great Britain, or at least an interrogation of the Government at Washington by Great Britain, as to whether the former intends to intervene to end the war conditions in Cuba.

Think Palma Unable.

The attitude of the Liberals, the increasing strength of the insurgents and the questionable loyalty of many of the Government recruits have caused the managers of some of the large business interests to cable to the foreign heads of their companies their belief that the Government of President Palma will be unable to cope with the insurrection.

Advices from Cienfuegos say many Government troops are deserting to the insurgents.

Bridges Blown Up.

Two bridges on the Western Railway, between Pinar Del Rio and San Luis, south of that city, were blown up with dynamite yesterday morning.

A force of men sent to repair the bridges, which were built of concrete and steel, was stopped by a body of rebels, numbering at least 500 men.

Gen. Avales, commander of the Government forces in the Province of Pinar Del Rio, has asked the authorities to send three rapid-fire guns to the scene of the bridge destruction on the Western Railway, in order to enable him to protect the workmen sent to rebuild the bridges.

With proper protection the railroad company officials think they can repair the bridges in five days.

Guerra's Force Active.

Pino Guerra's force, however, is becoming increasingly numerous in that part of the country. The people there do not think that the Government can suppress the insurrection.

The insurgent forces commanded by Pino Guerra are moving nearer to the City of Pinar Del Rio. Gen. Menocal, it is stated, will probably visit Guerra personally and confer with him regarding peace terms.

Gen. Loynez Castallo has been seriously wounded on the forehead by an insurgent subaltern, who struck him with the flat of his sword.

Machine Guns to Rescue.

Lieut.-Col. Clews, with 18 men and two machine guns, started yesterday afternoon for the City of Pinar Del Rio by special train.

A despatch from Cienfuegos, Province of Santa Clara, yesterday says that in the engagement between Government troops and insurgents near Palmira Thursday the former lost two men killed and had 14 men wounded, while the insurgents had six men killed 20 wounded.

Marienbad, Bohemia, Sept. 8.—King Edward yesterday completed the cure and left Marienbad for London.

HIPPLE'S VILLAINY UNCOVERED.

Forgeries Amounting to Quarter of a Million Reported by Receiver.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—Forgeries for more than a quarter of a million dollars by Frank K Hipple, the suicide president of the wrecked Real Estate Trust Co., have been discovered by Receiver Earle. The latter made this statement late last night, adding that he had no idea where Hipple's villainy would end.

Hot Wave From the West.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—"Hottest day of the season" seemed to be the general opinion yesterday. As a matter of fact there have been only two days this summer with higher temperature. At the observatory 90 was recorded; on June 29 the mercury touched 91, and on July 22, 92. On Aug. 6, 89 was the score.

The hot wave came from the west. Winnipeg sweltered with 98 degrees registered. Minnedosa had 96, and Qu'Appelle, 90. The Western States also experienced the 90's.

W. F. Hunt. Committed.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 8.—William E. Hunt of Fort Erie was yesterday committed by Police Magistrate Cruikshank for trial at the Welland Assizes on the charge of selling or aiding in the sale of lottery tickets or assisting in the management or advertising of a lottery. The latter charge was added to the information yesterday, and new evidence was heard.

Serious Lack of Water.

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—The lack of water in the Ottawa River is daily becoming serious. The river was exactly two feet lower yesterday than it was a year ago, and the Gatineau is dry in places where the waters flowed deep in other seasons. The Rideau Canal is 9 inches lower than this time last year. The lumber interests are suffering.

Sir John's Monument In Danger.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—The park superintendent has reported to the civic authorities that the magnificent monument to Sir John A. Macdonald, on Dominion Square, near the Windsor Hotel, is in danger of collapsing owing to the deterioration of the foundation through dampness.

Immigration For July.

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—The returns of Immigration Department show that arrivals in Canada for July were 18,176, or 5,392 more than for July last year. The arrivals by ocean ports were 13,207, an increase of 45 per cent., and from the United States 4,969, an increase of 59 per cent.

Emmerson at Port Colborne.

Port Colborne, Sept. 8.—Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways and Canals, was here yesterday for an inspection of the harbor works. Mr. Emmerson and party proceeded to Welland in the afternoon to expect the turning basin, which is being built there.

Phonetic Spelling

Discussing phonetic spelling, a correspondent of the Mail and Empire writes a letter to that journal which seems so admirably pertinent and conclusive that we take pleasure in reproducing it. It shows the latest silly fad up in its true colors:

Sir, — In wishing to use your columns to comment on the alleged spelling reform, it is because the editorials which have so far been printed appear to miss certain essential circumstances of the case. And it is because Toronto is near the States, and because some great Englishmen are stated to have given their names to aid this new movement. The authority of Roosevelt or Carnegie is, of course, worth nothing. They are not English; they are not philologists; they are very American; and the States is the place where people buy a new patent kettle and take pride in it, whether it can boil water or not.

Now that ignorant people find the spelling of English annoying to them is a matter that no one cares about. Some kind of spelling has to be learned in any case. No language is easy to learn. But as to people who are not ignorant and who wish to spell "through" "thru" and "thorough" "thoro" we have to ask, do they know how to pronounce English? "Thoro" does not spell the spoken sound thorough. And a reason exists for every other spelling in our language. I was taught that the final authority on pronunciation was the practice of the House of Commons. Certainly no user of a patois like the Americans have any right to impose their patois on the educated nation instead of the mother tongue. And this is just what the new spelling means.

Again, why should there be two endings for the past tense and past participle? Better make a uniform ending of "ed." The preceding sharp mute will automatically sharpen the "d" into "t," and thus one general rule now exists to which Roosevelt and Carnegie would make new exceptions in their ignorance. Let anyone compare the spoken language of our people with even an educated American, and he will find that the Canadian is sounding all the letters but the American is slurring and clipping his like the foreigner that he is. Let those ignorant people who are too lazy to learn the English language shut up, and let those who are open-minded study the spelling and find out what the indicated pronunciation really is, and perhaps, they will discover that they are not so wise as they very erroneously imagine.

The average American school teacher cannot read this letter without very serious errors in speech, and yet such people are writing books on the pronunciation of English vowel sounds, and so forth, some very ludicrous specimens of which the writer has seen. But an American prefers such a thing to a standard English book. The English language has not undergone any notable evolution for 150 years. Why, then, should we need to make a new mechanism to express one?

Let the Americans who seem to wish to continue to speak English grade themselves up till they understand the language. Their newspaper columns prove that they do not now do so. As to derivation, anyone who knows English will fail very often to understand an American editorial by reason of the amazing misuse of words, caused by ignorance of their root meanings and distinctives uses in our language. And the writer believes that this faulty diction is at the bottom of a great deal of the quibbling in American law courts.

This brings me to the point that a great many of these stupid American blunders are creeping into the Canadian papers, such as "bid" for "tender" and 'prelate" instead of "preacher." Now, with such a pattern as the Times, such slipshod English is without excuse. Canadians should aim to keep their press free from corrupt English, and "grade up" the Americans who live in Canada in this respect, as well as in the many other ways in which it is done.

Yours, etc.,
GEO. CHAS. BUCHANAN.

Very Sudden Death

A despatch from Madoc this morning announces the very sudden death of Mrs. Benson O'Hara, of that place. The breaking of a blood vessel caused immediate death. Mrs. Benson was a daughter of Mr. John R. Ketcheson, and with her Mr. Ketcheson had made his home for several years. The deceased lady had numerous friends in this city, who will sympathize with the family in their sudden bereavement.

The Wear of Office-Life.

Sitting in an office all day, in bad air, shut off from the sunlight, stooping over desks, on back-breaking chairs, hour after hour—is it any wonder people break down with kidney troubles?

AN AUTUMN IDYLL.

The maple leaf takes on its autumn tint
Which gives us all a kind and gentle hint
That winter's near;
Soon the snow shovel and the festive skate
Will dawn upon our view as sure as fate
Excuse this tear;

But ne'er a cloud but has a silver lining
So we'll be gay and cease our dull repining
In halting rhyme,
The winter's fine; in fact we never could See much to please in what they call the good Old summer time.

Who can forget that 90 in the shade
Which brought the sweat from man and gentle maid
And made them sigh
For drinks which had been all mixed up with ice
Pulled through a straw (if one but had the price)
Oh me! Oh my!

So now, vacations o'er, we settle down to work;
All play, you know, makes Jack a lazy Turk,
Start up the ball;
The summer nearly o'er has been the best for years,
About the coming winter have no craven fears—
That's about all.

People who are sighing because Belleville has no street cars can find food for reflection in the following from the London Free Press: The crunch, groan and screech of a passing street car which nullifies the business telephone must also grate on the nerves of peaceful private dwellers along the route. These noises should be expurgated along with the ding-dong of the engine bell and the toot-toot of the engine steam whistle in the wee hours o'night.

Chief Inspector Hughes, of the Toronto schools, calmly announces that some of the children of that city will have to remain out of school until after Christmas because of deficient accommodation. If the street railway company was to announce that a portion of the people would have to walk until after Christmas, what a howl there would be. The failures of a municipal institution are, however, as an exchange points out, accepted as a matter of course.

THE COUNTRY IS SAFE.
(Montreal Star.)

Now that we have the assurance of Winston Churchill that his advent to office has created a new epoch in British history, but that the people At 'Ome' still love the "colonies," we can turn to our daily toil feeling that the country is safe. Mr. Churchill excels in the emphatic assertion of the obvious.

Deputy Chief of Police Stark, of Toronto, told a convention of constables in Toronto the other day that people had become so afraid of brutal examination in the witness box by legal bullies that it was exceedingly hard to secure witnesses regarding crimes committed. It is unfortunately true, remarks the Brockville Times, that some lawyers grossly insult respectable witnesses in the witness box, and it seems to us that it is the duty of the Bench to protect witnesses from this sort of indignity far more than is done at present. Occasionally some sturdy witness defends himself very effectively, but the average witness is so overwhelmed by his unusual surroundings that he loses his nerve and submits to the most unwarrantable brow-beating. Lawyers should remember that far better evidence may be obtained by easy and gentle cross examination than by ferocious bullying.

Apropos of the above, take the case of the Toronto Junction constable who was giving evidence in a liquor case. He was being cross-examined by Mr. James Haverson, whose first question was, "Have you stopped beating your wife yet?" The constable grew indignant. His wife was dead, he said. But the magistrate ruled that he must answer yes or no to the lawyer's question.

Hunt For Treasure.

London, Sept. 7.—Hopes are entertained that the treasure ship of the Spanish Armada, which has lain for centuries at the bottom of Tobermory Bay, will soon be located and its cargo of gold and silver recovered.

The latest scientific methods have been used in a search which has extended over centuries. Sand pumping and modern diving bells and other ingenious contrivances of which the earlier searchers knew nothing are being employed, and by their aid the fascinating Spanish doubloons will once more see the light of day.

The treasure ship Florencia was 961 tons and carried 52 guns. Aside from the traditions it has definitely been determined that she is actually at the bottom of the bay. The Argyll family began the first search for the treasure about a century after the visit of the Armada, but since that time various attempts have been made, and brass cannon, one of 11 feet in length, and of most elaborate workmanship, with engraving attributive to the great Benevenuto Cellini, money chests and stray doubloons have been found.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Corinthian Association football team won its final game in Philadelphia, defeating the All-Philadelphia eleven, 12 goals to 0.

No one has been able to overtake Stone, of St. Louis, in the race for the batting championship of the American League, with .346. Chase, of New York, who has had a reign of terror at the bat recently, is second to the Browns' star with .335.

The first hockey move of the season, says an exchange, is noted in the reported removal of Jack Marks from Brockville to New Glasgow, N. S., where he will play this coming season. Marks is well known in Ontario, having figured on the Belleville septette three seasons ago and later with the Brockville Federal League team.

Frank Bowerman, the Giants' catcher, was run over by an automobile in New York. After he had been thrown out of his rig, been run over by the automobile and had a horse knocked over on top of him, the big catcher got up, brushed the dust from his clothes and helped to untangle the horse and runabout. Bowerman's injuries consisted of only a few bruises.

The report that "Battling" Nelson was dangerously ill and was likely to die as a result of the beating he received at the hands of Joe Gans Monday night is untrue. Nelson has left Goldfield for Truckee for a fishing trip. Aside from some bruises and internal hemorrhages, he was not severely hurt in the fight.

The final game of baseball in the Trent Valley League was played at Hastings yesterday between Campbellford and Hastings. The visitors defeated the locals by a score of 10 to 4, and in so doing captured the championship of the league, and also the trophy kindly donated by Mrs. Fowler, jeweler, of Havelock, at the beginning of the season.

The Boy and the Melon.

While Police Sergeant Hayes was in the Police Court room this morning he happened to look out of the window, and beheld a boy in the act of taking a large, juicy watermelon from a wagon. The youngster and the melon disappeared together round the corner, and the officer went and captured them both. The lad's father was sent for, and told to bring his son to the court on Monday morning, when the case will be dealt with.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

I'm a comin' up from stables in me ragged pantaloons
An' me shirt-tail flyin' freely from behind;
An' me ridin' seat has patchin's grinnin' like a pair o' moons—
'Tis a job I did me ownself, d'ye mind.
An' I hears th' sergeant bawl, "Hi! Come to th' barrack hall,
All th' officers is lookin' you askance;
'Yer clothes they is a sight an' th' fittin' is a fright—
"Come on an' git some pants, pants, pants!"

Few clothes! New clothes!
Clothes to soldier in;
Clothes for dress, fatigue an' mess
An' clothes fer sleepin' in.
New clothes! Blue clothes!
Dinner or a dance—
Every man is goin' to plan his Pants! Pants! Pants!

I've drored 'em by th' numbers: when I'd want a pair o' pants
I tole th' sergeant, "Gimme number two!"
He'd look his lot all over an' he'd fit me from a glance—
If he was shy o' twos, why, threes 'd do.
But now he takes me measure an' he measures to me pleasure,
He doesn't leave a single inch to chance.
An' there's cuttin' an' there's snippin' an' there's clippin' an' there's rippin'
As they're reefin' in th' surplus o' me pants!

Few clothes! New clothes!
Clothes that have to fit;
Every stitch an' even hitch
Where you has to sit!
Grab clothes! Drab clothes!
Nothin' left to chance—
Every guinea's lovely in his
Pants! Pants! Pants!

Oh! They're goin' to fit 'em tightly fer to cover up th' waist—
(When th' grub is runnin' light th' wrinkles show;)
An' they'll leave no slack fer handholts when a feller's gettin' chased—
(But they haven't said allowances will grow!)
Oh, we'll be th' swell gazooks when it comes to fancy looks,
You can tell we're tailor cultured at a glance;
When we come to yer attention, oh, we wish you'd kindly mention
Th' architectural beauty o' our pants!

New clothes! Blue clothes!
Clothes o' proper hang;
Clothes o' style that cost a pile
To give th' girls a pang.
Few clothes! New clothes!
Soldiers to enhance—
Every guinea's lovely in his
Pants! Pants! Pants!

Old Chronic Sores

As a dressing for old chronic sores there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Salve. While it is not advisable to heal old sores entirely, they should be kept in a good condition for which this salve is especially valuable. For sore nipples Chamberlain's Salve has no superior. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store

Soaked the Bridge Man.

Hamilton Herald; William Hopkins, who has charge of the bridge at the canal over which the Radial passes, was the victim of an outrage last evening. He has the reputation of being a trifle slow about swinging the bridge to allow boats to pass through the canal, and it is claimed that small pleasure yachts have to pretty nearly blow their whistles off to get him to make a move.

Last evening a gang from Toronto, supposed to be boatmen who have a grudge against the bridgetender for his slowness, stood on the prow of the Turbinia as it passed the bridge, and plastered him with rotten eggs. What happened to the bridgeman is a shame. He was covered from head to foot, and those who were in the neighborhood say the smell was worse than the coal oil inlet odors. Another man who happened to be near Hopkins also got a liberal share of the eggs.

The victims of the outrage telegraphed to Toronto, and tried to have the perpetrators arrested on the arrival of the boat. They say that if they catch the offenders they will prosecute them.

Youths from Toronto have been guilty of such deeds many times this season.

CHANGING SENTIMENT.

Oliver Goldsmith's "Deserted Village."

Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village," spoke of a certain chapel where those who "went to scoff, remained to pray." So in life one often laughs at what he does not understand, and later, when he does understand, his laugh turns to praise. There were some who doubted the merits of Newbro's Herpicide, the scalp germicide and hair-dressing; but since they have tried it, they are now among its best friends and strongest endorsers. Herpicide kills the germ that eats the hair off at the root, and as a hair dressing it is incomparable. Try it. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

To-day's Market

There was a good attendance upon the market this morning. The farmers' wives must have thought Bellevillians all wanted chicken for dinner to-morrow, for there was a great showing of dressed poultry. The vegetable display was fine. Butter was not quite so strong as last week though some of it was strong enough. Eggs dropped to 18c.

Our quotations are as follows;—

Eggs—18c.
Hay—$8 to $10.
Fall Wheat—68c to 70c.
Spring wheat—75c.
Barley—45 to 48c.
Oats—36c.
Rye—50c.
Buckwheat—55c.

Honors Were Easy.

A few years ago two widely known dairymen got into a discussion at a Farmers' Institute about the merit of their cows, says an exchange. One was a breeder of Holsteins and the other kept Jerseys. The Jersey breeder said to the other farmer;—"If you wish to test the milk of a Holstein cow, just take a ten-quart pail, milk it full, and place a dollar in the bottom of the pail. If you can readily discern the dollar in the pail through the milk, there is some Holstein blood in the cow that gave the milk." The Holstein man said: "If you wish to ascertain if there is any Jersey blood in a cow, just place a dollar in a ten-quart pail, and if you can get enough milk from the cow to cover the dollar, there is some Jersey blood in the cow." Honors were about even.

Some Sensible Talk

(Toronto Star.)

With every desire to be courteous to our visitors from the United States we do not think that our own flag ought to be hauled down from the post of honor at the Fair and its place taken by the Stars and Stripes. To be frank it looked, not like courtesy but like toadyism. Citizens of the United States can see plenty of Stars and Stripes in their own country all the year round. They come to Canada to see a distinctive Canadian Fair. They see everywhere the evidences of Canadian enterprise and progress, and over it floats, not the flag of Canada, or the Empire, but the flag of the United States, as if to that country we owed the prosperity of which the Fair is an evidence. The fact is that our prosperity and progress during the last decade are largely due to the assertion of our independence of the aid of our neighbors. We are independent of their markets; we have found markets of our own, in Canada and in the United Kingdom. It is no longer necessary for young Canadians to go to the United States to find a field for their talents. On the contrary, American farmers are flocking into the Canadian West.

"Flag incidents" are deplored or ridiculed as evidences of jingoism, prejudice, and hatred. There is a great difference between jingoism and healthy self-assertion. The hauling down of the Union Jack and the putting up of the Stars and Stripes was the mark of an unhealthy self-effacement. It was an action that reminded one unpleasantly of Uriah Heep. It was probably not so intended, but courtesy needs to be restrained when it runs into undue humility. The British motto is that every man's house is his castle, and a man can be courteous to his guests without forgetting that in his own house he is master.

The Westminster Abbey Concert Party who visited Belleville three years ago, when they gave an entertainment in Bridge St. Church, are again on a round the world tour and will appear in the Opera House Monday, October First. As they are spending only about five weeks in all of Canada Belleville is fortunate in securing them for one evening. The company includes Mr. Edward Branscombe, Mr. Edward Dalzell, Madame Marie Hooton, four solo soprano boys, a musical entertainer, and others, thirteen in all. This is likely to be the best concert appearing in Belleville this winter. Kindly reserve the date.

Goethe's Last Moments.

The story of the deathbed of Goethe reveals a striking picture of fortitude, artistic calm and intellectual activity under the chilling dews of death. The information is gathered from a letter written on March 23, 1832, the day after Goethe's death, by Fraulein Louise Seidler, an art student and close friend of the poet's family. On the evening before his dissolution, with an icy coldness taking possession of him and the death rattle beginning to be audible, Goethe, with his charming daughter-in-law by his side, would talk of nothing but his pet theory of color, of the treaty of Basle, of his desire that the children should go to the theater, of his plans for the near future. As sleep did not come with the night, he called for a newly published volume of history, and covered his inability to read it with a joke. Even at 7 o'clock the next morning, just three and a half hours before he died, he sent for a portfolio to talk optics and was setting himself to classify some papers when the last agony seized him. He then lay motionless, notwithstanding its violence, till respiration ceased and the heart stood still.—London Globe.

How to Handle Your Horse.

Decision should never in handling horses be confounded with unwise determination to have things your way. In this application it means the faculty of doing the right thing at the right instant and may be cultivated by frequent practice with all sorts of horses, and of course no hands were ever developed by handling any one animal or any one kind of a horse. It is decision that gives the hand the moment the horse yields; that uses the roughest methods at a pinch, for hands are by no means always delicate of touch; that frustrates the most determined attempts of kicker, rearer or bolter; that picks the best road; that makes the animal carry himself to the best advantage for the purpose of the moment. Decision is very close to intuition in effect. Decision dominates the situation at many critical moments, and the horse is quick to discern and to presume upon its absence. There is no such thing as a safe partnership with a horse. You must be the master or he will be, to your certain future discomfiture.—F. M. Ware in Outing Magazine.

Big Benefits at London Theaters.

Betterton, in 1709, when his salary was £4 a week, had a benefit and received £76 as his share of the receipts and £450 in the shape of donations. The biggest benefit performances of modern times have taken place at Drury Lane. That for Ben Webster, held in March, 1874, realized £2,000; the profit on the Buckstone celebration, in June, 1876, was £1,200; for the Nellie Farren benefit performance, in March, 1898, there was obtained £7,260, though half of this amount was secured from private donations, which flowed in when it was known that the Messrs. Rothschild had volunteered to invest what sum was realized, give the popular comedienne an annuity and, on her death, grant the theatrical charities half of the capital.—London Chronicle.

To Insure Privacy of Mail.

All private and confidential correspondence, according to a postoffice inspector, should either be sealed with wax or else addressed and stamped on the back instead of the front. Sealing with wax is an excellent insurance of privacy, but it is a difficult and awkward operation, and wax and a match, candle and seal are not always at hand. The other method is much the better. After fastening down the flap of the envelope firmly, affix the stamp across the flap's junction and write the address across it as well. Then it is absolutely impossible to steam open the letter and close it again in such a way as to escape detection.

The Creole.

A pure creole is a person born in Louisiana of French or Spanish parents. It is a mistaken idea to suppose that a creole has negro blood in his veins. A creole negro is one whose forefathers were owned by the early French and Spanish settlers and who spoke a corruption of those languages known as "gumbo." Their descendants are the creole negroes and should never be conflicted with creoles in the true sense of the term.

Why, Indeed?

At an examination of Sunday school children the following was one of the questions put upon the blackboard: "Why did your godfathers and godmothers promise these things for you?" The answer of a bright girl, written neatly on the slate, was, "Why, indeed?" She got marks.

Not to Blame.

Father (sternly)—Now, Sophia, something must be done to reduce your expenses. You are actually spending more than your allowance.

Daughter—It isn't my fault, father, I've done my best to get you to increase it.

Doubtful.

Lady (in dry goods store)—And is this color also genuine? Salesman—As genuine as the roses on your cheeks, miss. Lady—H'm! Show me another one.—Kleines Witzblatt.

Just Badness.

Father—That kid ought to have a spanking! He's altogether too precocious; knows more than I do! Mother—But, dear, I wouldn't call that precocious.

Only the illiterate and the social elect can afford to treat the language recklessly.—Brainerd.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Make Healthy Women.

Upon being taken into the stomach, the various ingredients are absorbed by the blood, and then find their way to every organ and tissue.

Some reach the uterine system. These allay inflammation, stop all drains on the system and make women regular.

Some strengthen the stomach. They help digestion and increase the appetite.

Others act on the bowels. They cure constipation.

Other ingredients stimulate the liver and kidneys in carrying off impurities from the system.

Others reach the nerves. These tone up the nervous system and supply vital energy, thereby curing the nervousness, irritability, and melancholy, to which so many women are subject.

The full effect of all the medicaments in the tablets is to arouse the entire female system to renewed life and vigor.

Improvement is noticed the first week.

TIMELY TOPICS.

LIFE.

(By Judd Mortimer Lewis.)

Life's a game of go and hustle, life's a thing of rush and bustle,
Life's a play of brain and muscle, life's all jump and buzz and whirr;
Life's a game at whose beginning all the world is set a-spinning,
That the very thought of winning is itself a spur.

Life's a thing of rough and tumble, life's a thing of laugh and grumble,
Life's a thing of grab and fumble, life's a thing of jolt and jar;
Life's a stretch of daisied meadows, life's a place of glints and shadows,
Life's a thing of maids and widows, smiles and tears and there you are.

Life's a thing of self-styled winners, millionaires and saints and sinners,
Men who have and haven't dinners, thing of riff-raff steal and toil;
Men who go their ways a-laughing, men who go their ways a-chaffing,
Men who go their ways a-quaffing, men whose only thought is spoil.

Maidens wise and maidens witty, maidens beautiful and pretty,
Painted women—oh, the pity!—always changing yet the same;
Thing of low and high endeavour, thing of push and pull forever,
Game for dolts and players clever, thing of love and glee and shame.

But who plays the game a-loving, lifting, helping, never shoving,
Laughing, singing, turtle-doving through its jars and outs and ins,
With a wife and little laddie or wee lass to call him daddie,
Doesn't do so very badly, he's the chap who truly wins.

A remarkable epitaph is on a tombstone in Brighton churchyard in England. It reads "In memory of Phoebe Hessel, who was born at Stepney in the year 1713. She served for many years as a private soldier in the 5th regiment of foot in different parts of Europe, and in the year 1745 fought under the command of the Duke of Cumberland at the battle of Fontenoy, where she received a bayonet wound in her arm. Her long life, which commenced in the time of Queen Anne, extended to the reign of George IV., by whose munificence she received comfort and support in her later years. She died at Brighton, where she had long resided, December 12, 1821, aged 108 years."

Tea growing promises to become one of the important industries of the Southern States. For seven years a tea plantation has been carried on in South Carolina, and the tea grown there is said to possess a fine flavor. The soil and climate of the country are declared to be favorable to the enterprise, the great difficulty to be coped with being that of labor. A tea plantation requires a great deal of attention, and the growers in the east are able to obtain very cheap labor. In South Carolina negro children between the ages of ten and fourteen have been employed. Their work has been satisfactory, as they are said to accomplish much more than the same number of workers on an Oriental plantation would. The objections to child labor are overcome in some measure by the establishment of schools on the plantation where elementary instruction is given to the children. It is to be assumed that this instruction is more than a show, as might be feared, since the experiments have been carried on under the direct supervision of the United States department of agriculture.

"I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia for years. I have been treated by doctors and have taken many medicines with only temporary relief. Since using Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill I can eat anything the same as when a boy. I find they regulate both stomach and bowels. My old time vigor has returned, so that my spirits are buoyant and temper normal. I give all credit to this wonderful remedy—Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill."

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

THE GUNS FOR CUBA.

CHAPTER I.

"The shore part must lie entirely with you, sir," said Capt. Kettle. "It's mixed up with the foreign enlistment act and the Alabama case, and a dozen other things which may mean anything between jail and confiscation, and my head isn't big enough to hold it. If you'll be advised by me, sir, you'll see a real first-class solicitor and stand him a drink and pay him down what he asks right there on the bar counter and get to know exactly how the law of this business stands before you stir foot in it.

"The law here in England," said the little man with a reminiscent sigh, "is a beastly thing to fall foul of; it's just wickedly officious and interfering; it's never done kicking you, once it's got a fair start, and you never know where it will shove out its ugly hoof from next. No, Mr. Gedge, give me the States for nice, comfortable law, where a man can buy it by the yard for paper money down, and straight pistol shooting is always remembered in his favor."

The young man who owned the steamship Sultan of Borneo tapped his blotting paper impatiently. "Stick to the point, Kettle. We're in England now and have nothing whatever to do with legal matters in America. As for your advice, I am not a fool; you can lay your ticket on it I know to an inch how I stand. And I may tell you this: the shipment is arranged for."

"I'd like to see us cleared," said Capt. Kettle, doubtfully.

"No one will interfere with the clearance. The Sultan of Borneo will leave here in coal, consigned to Havana. A private yacht will meet her at sea, and tranship the arms out of sight of land."

"Tyne coal for Cuba? They'd get their coal there from Norfolk, Va. or else Welsh steam coal from Cardiff or Newport."

"It seems not. This contract was placed long before a ship was asked for to smuggle out the arms."

"Well, it looks fishy, anyway."

"I can't help that," said Gedge irritably. "I'm telling you the naked truth, and if truth, as usual, looks unlikely, it's not my fault. Now have you got any more objections to make?"

"No, sir," said Capt. Kettle, "none that I can see at present."

"Very well, then," said Gedge. "Do you care to sign on as master for this cruise, or are you going to cry off?"

"They'll hang me if I'm caught," said Kettle.

"Not they. They'll only talk big, and the British consul will get you clear. You bet they daren't hang an Englishman for mere smuggling in Cuba. And, besides, aren't I offering to raise your screw from £12 a month to £14 so as to cover the risk? However, you won't get caught. You'll find everything ready for you; you'll slip the rifles ashore; and then you'll steam on to Havana and discharge your coal in the ordinary humdrum way of business, and there's a 10-pound bonus if you pull the thing off successfully. Now, then, captain, quick—you go or you don't?"

"I go," said Kettle, gloomily. "I'm a poor man, with a wife and family, Mr. Gedge, and I can't offord to lose a berth. But it's that coal I can't swallow. I quite believe what you say about the contract; only it doesn't look natural. And it's my belief the coal will trip us up somewhere before we've done, and bring about trouble."

"Which of course you are quite a stranger to?" said Gedge slily.

"Don't taunt me with it, sir," said Capt. Kettle. "I quite well know the kind of a brute I am; trouble with a crew or any other set of living men at sea is just meat and drink to me, and I'm bitterly ashamed of the taste. Every time I sit underneath our minister in the chapel here in South Shields I grow more ashamed. And if you heard the beautiful poetical way that man talks of peace, and green fields, and golden harps, you'd understand."

"Yes, yes," said Gedge; "but I don't want any of your excellent minister's sermons at second hand just now, captain, or any of your own poetry, thanks. I'm very busy. Good morning. Help yourself to a cigar. You haul alongside the coal shoots to get your cargo at 2 o'clock, and I'll be on board to see you at 6. Good morning." And Mr. Gedge rang for the clerk and was busily dictating letters before Kettle was clear of the office.

CHAPTER 11.

The little sailor went down the grimy stairs and into the street, and made toward the smelling Tyne. The black cigar rested unlit in an angle of his mouth, and he gnawed savagely at the butt with his eyeteeth. He cursed the fates as he walked. Why did they use him so evilly that he was forced into berths like these? As a bachelor, he told himself with a sneer, he would have jumped at the excitement of it. As the partner of Mrs. Kettle, and the father of her children, he could have shuddered when he threw his eyes over the future.

For a week or so she could draw his half pay and live sumptuously at the rate of seven pounds a month. But afterwards, if he got caught by some angry Spanish war steamer with the smuggled rifles under his hatches, and shot, or hanged, or imprisoned, or otherwise debarred from earning an income at his craft, where would Mrs. Kettle be then? Would Gedge do anything for her? He drew the cigar from his lips, and spat contemptuously at the bare idea. With the morality of the affair he troubled not one jot. The Spanish government and the Cuban rebels were two rival firms who offered different rates of freight according to the risk, and he was employed as carrier by those who paid the higher price. If there was any right or wrong about the question, it was a purely private matter between Mr. Gedge and his God. He, Owen Kettle, was as impersonal in the business as the ancient Sultan of Borneo herself; he was a mere cog in some complex machinery; and if he was earning heaven, it was by piety inside the chapel ashore, and not by professional exertions (in the interests of an earthly employer) elsewhere.

He took ferry across the filthy Tyne and walked down alleys and squalid streets where coal dust formed the mud and the air was sour with foreign vapors. And as he walked he champed still at the unlit cigar and brooded over the angularity of his fate. But when he passed between the gates of the dock company's premises and exchanged words with the policeman on guard, a change came over him. He threw away the cigar stump, tightened his lips and left all thoughts of personal matters outside the door sill. He was Mr. Gedge's hired servant; his brain was devoted to furthering Gedge's interests, and all the acid of his tongue was ready to spur on those who did the manual work on Gedge's ship.

Within a minute of his arrival on her deck the Sultan of Borneo was being unmoored from the bollards on the quay; within 10, her winches were clattering and bucking as they warped her across to the black, straddling coal shoots at the other side of the dock, and within half an hour the cargo was roaring down her hatches as fast as the railway wagons on the grimy trestle overhead could disgorge.

The halo of coal dust made day into dusk; the grit of it filled every cranny and settled as an amorphous scum on the water of the dock, and laborers hired by the hour toiled at piecework pace through sheer terror at their employer.

If his other failings could have been eliminated, this little skipper, with the red peaked beard, would certainly have been, from an owner's point of view, the best commander sailing out of any English port. No man ever wrenched such a magnificent amount of work from his hands. But it was those other failing which kept him what he was, the pitiful knockabout shipmaster, living from hand to mouth, never certain of his berth from one month's end to another.

That afternoon Capt. Kettle signed on his crew, got them on board, and with the help of his two mates kicked the majority of them into sobriety. He received a visit and final instructions from Mr. Gedge at 6 o'clock, and by nightfall he had filled in his papers, warped out of dock, and stood anxiously on the bridge watching the pilot as he took the steamboat down through the crowded shipping of the river. His wife stood under the glow of an arc lamp on the dockhead and waved him goodby through the gloom.

CHAPTER III.

Capt. Kettle received his first fright as he dropped his pilot just outside the Tyne pierheads. A man-of-war's launch steamed up out of the night, and the boarding officer examined his papers and asked questions. The little captain, conscious of having no contraband of war on board just then, was brutally rude, but the naval officer remained stolid, and refused to see the insults which were pitched at him. He had an unpalatable duty to perform; he quite sympathized with Kettle's feelings over the matter, and he got back to his launch thanking many stars that the affair had ended so easily.

But Kettle rang on his engines again with very unpleasant feelings. It was clear to him that the secret was oozing out somewhere; that the Sultan of Borneo was suspected; that his course to Cuba would be beset with many well-armed obstacles, and he forthwith made his first ruse out of the long succession which were to follow.

He had been instructed by Gedge to steam off straight from the Tyne to a point deep in the North sea, where a yacht would meet him to hand over the consignment of smuggled arms. But he felt the night to be full of eyes, and for a Havana-bound ship to leave the usual steam lane which leads to the English channel was equivalent to a confession of her purpose from the outset. So he took the parallel rulers and pencilled off on his chart the stereotyped course, which just clears Whitby rock and Flamboro head; and the Sultan of Borneo was held steadily along

All Household Roads Lead to Kitchen Work

NINE-TENTHS of kitchen labor and worry is caused by ill-working cook stoves and ranges; by ranges that draw poorly; that have such complicated drafts that only a skilled mechanic can manage them; whose grates are so constructed that it is a strong man's work to shake them down; ranges which work well when the wind is in a certain direction, but act like a fiend at other times; ranges whose work is so unreliable that the housekeeper is in a constant nerve-racking worry lest the meals be late or the baking spoiled.

The Pandora range is built to make work easy, a child can shake it down; its drafts are so simple that one learns them in a minute; its heat is kept in the range so effectively that you can do a big baking and hardly know there is a fire in it two feet away; it keeps the kitchen cool; it saves you worry; it saves you time and money; it saves you backaches and headaches, because it is so easy to manage and so reliable.

The Pandora makes kitchen work easy.

Farmers Lose by Fire.

Brockville, Sept. 8.—A disastrous fire took place on the farm of G. W. Shepherd, near Lowville, when his barns were totally destroyed. Thirty-five cows were burned, also 200 tons of hay, sixty loads of grain, carriages, harness and farming implements.

An adjoining dwelling, the property of David Wetmore, was also burned.

Mr. Shepherd places his loss at $5,000, with $3,500 insurance. Wetmore carried an insurance of $950 on his dwelling and contents. His loss is $2,000.

Steamer Montreal Aground.

Kingston, Sept. 8.—At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the steamer City of Montreal, from Montreal to Toronto, avoiding the steamer Picton coming into Swift's wharf, backed out too far and run upon the harbor shoal. Part of her cargo will be taken off before she can be released by the Galvin Co. working at her. It is not thought she is damaged.

Fugitive Gives Up.

Kingston, Sept. 8.—Tired of fleeing from the officers of the law, Jacob Jebreiski, who was sentenced to the penitentiary from Chatham for stealing furs, and who jumped from a train to liberty, gave himself up Thursday night.

To Succeed McCorkill.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—Brome County Liberals have nominated F. W. Vilas for the vacancy in the Legislature caused by the elevation of Hon. J. C. McCorkill to the bench.

All The Heat You Want.
without any Smoke, Dust or Gas.

Most furnaces are put together like two joints of stove-pipe. That is, the steel and cast-iron are bolted together, and cement rubbed into the cracks.

In a month after starting the fire, the difference in expansion and contraction of iron and steel loosens the bolts—cement drops out—and gas and smoke come into the house.

It is a case of plugging up the cracks with cement—or living in a dusty, smoky house.

A man, who takes my advice and buys a "Hecla" Furnace, saves himself all that trouble and annoyance.

In the "Hecla", joints between steel and cast-iron are FUSED and are absolutely and permanently tight. That means that HECLA generates fresh, clean hot air—untainted by gas or smoke.

Let me send you the Hecla catalogue, which tells all about these ideal heaters. Give me the dimensions of your house, and I will tell you the cost of installing a "HECLA". Both services are free. Address "Clare's Furnace Builder", care of 34

JESUS ENTERS JERUSALEM IN TRIUMPH.

Matthew 21: 1-17.

Memory verses, 9-11.

Golden Text—"Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

HISTORICAL SETTING.

Time—Palm Sunday and Monday, April 2 and 3, A.D. 30.

The scene is on the west slope of the Mount of Olives, toward Jerusalem from Bethany: then in the streets of Jerusalem, and in the court of the temple.

Place in the Life of Christ.—The beginning of the last week of Jesus' life. The final effort to persuade the Jews to receive their Messiah.

1. Drew nigh unto Jerusalem, the objective point of their journey. Were come from Bethany to the outskirts of Beth-pha-ge, a neighboring village. Jesus and his company were moving the longer way around to the village, when Jesus sent two disciples by a short-cut foot-path across a deep gorge to the village.

2. Go into the village over against you, in sight across the ravine around which the regular road ran. Ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her. The other evangelists mention the colt only, as being the one on which the Lord rode, the mother probably accompanying it. Mark and Luke add "whereon never man sat," in accordance with the rule, "that animals used for sacred purposes must never have borne the yoke," or, more probably, as showing that Jesus "was not filling a place which others had filled before him."

3. If any man say ought, wishing to know by what right you take the animals, as according to Luke the owners did question them. Ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them. Probably the owner was a disciple or friend of Jesus, and glad to have him use anything he had, and perfectly willing to trust him. According to Mark in the R.V., the two disciples say that Jesus would send the colt back to the owner.

4. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled. Jesus did this, not for the purpose of fulfilling the prophecy, but for the same reason that the prophecy was uttered, because it was the right and wise thing for the Messiah to do; and the result was that he fulfilled the prophecies uttered centuries before. The words quoted here are a combination of two prophecies, Isa. 62: 11, and Zech. 9: 9. They were familiar to the Jews, who therefore expected that their Messiah would enter Jerusalem riding on an ass. Jesus by fulfilling this prophecy presented himself as the Messiah.

5. Thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass. Riding on an ass instead of a horse presented him as the Prince of Peace, not as a hero of war. The horse was used especially for war, for dignity, and for display; the ass for the common uses of peace. His kingdom will be one of peace through righteousness.

There was nothing degrading in riding an ass. Indeed, "the rich man's ass is a lordly beast. In size he is far ahead of anything of this kind we see here at home. His coat is as smooth and glossy as a horse's. His livery is shiny black, satiny white, or sleek mouse color." But "the ass is the common beast for everybody to ride, and has been so from the days of the patriarchs and prophets." "It marked the Prince as not above the people in his manner and ordering of earthly state." He had the true kingly spirit — pure, noble, holy: a spirit, not of pride, but of lowliness; not of exultation, but of daily service and helpfulness: sanctifying and exalting common things, not afar off in seclusion, but near the people, not receiving from the people, but giving to them, full of compassion, "the King of Love."

7. The ass, and the colt. The untrained colt could be led and ridden more easily when accompanied by the mother. Jesus left Bethphage and rode toward Jerusalem, the royal city, the city of the great King. Here his ancestor David reigned.

8. And a very great multitude. Rather, "the most part of the multitude," for there were some cold and scowling critics (Luke 19: 39 40.) There were crowds of pilgrims from all parts of the country coming up to the Passover festival. Spread their garments in the way. "This was a recognized act of homage to a king. So Jehu, when the officers of the army of Israel chose him as their ruler, walked upon the garments which they spread beneath his feet (2 Kings 9: 13.) So Agamemnon, tempted to an act of barbaric pomp, after the manner of eastern kings, entered his palace at Mycenae, walking upon costly carpets." So, in later history, the young Sir Walter Raleigh, when Queen Elizabeth came to a miry part of the road, took off his new and costly plush mantle and spread it on the ground for the Queen to walk over. "Herodotus records that when Xerxes was passing over the bridge of the Hellespont, the way before him was strewed with branches of myrtle, while burning perfumes filled the air. Quintius Curtius tells of the scattering of flowers in the way before Alexander the Great when he entered Babylon. Monier, in our own day, saw the way of a Persian ruler, strewn with roses for three miles while glass vessels filled with sugar were broken under his horse's feet—the sugar being symbolical of prosperity."

9. Cried, saying Hosanna. "Hosanna" is a rendering into Greek letters of the Hebrew words, "Save, we pray!" (Psa. 118: 25); not save us, but save the King. Had the event occurred in Rome, the shout would probably have been Io triumphe! Had it occurred in modern France, the people would have called out Vive! Vive le roi! and the Italians, Viva! The Son of David. The Messiah, David's heir, as promised.

10. All the city was moved. Greek, shaken as by an earthquake, agitated like the sea in a storm.

11. The multitude said. This is Jesus the Prophet of Nazareth, while the Pharisees coolly asked Jesus to interfere, but Jesus replied, "If these hold their peace the stones will cry out."

A Note of Sadness.—One touching incident is related by Luke only. As the procession began to descend from the summit of the Mount of Olives, the glories of Jerusalem in all its splendor burst upon Jesus' view, as it rose terrace upon terrace, a city of palaces, while the dazzling marble and gilding of the Temple dominated the city. He was standing on the very ground "on which, a generation later, the tenth Roman legion would be encamped, as part of the besieging force destined to lay all the splendors before him in ashes."

"The contrast was indeed terrible between the Jerusalem that rose before him in all its beauty, glory, and security, and the Jerusalem which he saw in vision dimly rising on the sky, with the camp of the enemy round about it on every side, hugging it closer and closer in deadly embrace; then another scene in the shifting panorama, and the city laid even with the ground and the gory bodies of her children among her ruins, and yet another scene, the silence and desolateness of death, not one stone left upon another."

12. Jesus went into the temple of God to worship, and to teach religion, for which the temple was built. It was his Father's house, and he was about his Father's business. Cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple. In the court of the Gentiles was the temple market, where animals, oil, wine, and other things necessary for sacrifices and temple worship were sold for the convenience of pilgrims who came from all parts of the world to offer sacrifices at the Passover season, and who could not bring their offerings with them. Tables of the moneychangers, who were necessary because the pilgrims came from all over the civilized world, and the temple tax must be paid in Jewish money (Ex. 38: 26.) "The pilgrims brought with them the coinage of their own country—Syrian, Egyptian, Greek, as the case might be—and their money was either not current in Palestine, or, as being stamped with the symbols of heathen worship, could not be received into the corban, or treasury of the temple." "There are scores of money-changers now in Jerusalem."

13. It is written. Isa. 56, 7: Jer. 7, 11. In their seeming worship they were destroying the very soul of worship, and robbing God's house of its usefulness. Hence they made it a den of thieves. They not only robbed God, but were dishonest in their business transactions.

14. The blind and the lame came to him, in the house of God, the place where all the troubled should come, and he healed them. A work of mercy more pleasing to him than the stern act of justice he had just performed. This, too, was a type of his kingly work among men, comforting, healing, blessing, redeeming his people from every outward and inward evil. These two kinds of work, purifying and saving from evil, are ever going on as the kingdom of Christ moves on to its final triumph.

16. Have ye never read. In Psa. 8, 2. How is it that you are not familiar with your own scriptures? Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise. The children and those who have childlike qualities give forth the most unalloyed praise.

17. And he left them. He had finished Monday's work. Into Bethany, two miles out of the city.

Perth, Sept. 7.—There were 1875 boxes of cheese boarded here to-day—1300 white and 575 colored. No prices were offered, but all sold subject to Brockville prices. There were four buyers present.

Napanee, Sept. 7.—At the cheese board here there were boarded 500 white and 1245 colored; 12⅝c bid; all colored sold; 12 5-16c bid for white; all sold.

Iroquois, Sept. 7.—At the cheese board to-day there were offered for sale 900 colored cheese. The price bid on the board was 12⅝c, but none sold there. Later, it all sold on the street at price bid on the board.

Listowel, Sept. 7.—At the cheese fair held here to-day, 13 factories boarded 1640 boxes of cheese; 12c was the best bid on the board; afterwards a few lots of September were sold at 12¼c, and one or two at a slightly higher figure; the last half of August had been sold in the country before this fair, mostly at 12½c.

REFRIGERATOR RULES.

Use clean, flat dishes to hold whatever is on the lower shelves.

Buy your ice in pieces as large as can be accommodated. This is much more economical than to buy small ones.

Be careful not to fill dishes too full so that they will spill over. If anything is spilled, don't fail to wipe it up immediately.

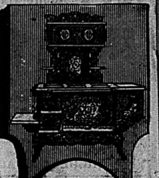
Pack the ice well together and do not wrap it in paper or cloths; instead, keep the door of the ice chamber shut as much as possible.

Do not put food of any sort directly on the ice. If it is absolutely necessary to place it near the ice, see that it is in glass or porcelain.

Empty the refrigerator at least once a week; scrub the interior thoroughly, then scald the ice chamber and drainpipe with boiling water in which a lump of soda has been dissolved; follow this with clear boiling water; wipe dry and let it air for twenty minutes.

Odd.

Hicks—What do you think of that university making Dumley a doctor of laws? Wicks—Oh, well, the universities do very crazy things sometimes. Hicks—Yes, and yet they are always supposed to be in possession of their faculties.



No range can bake so well as the Imperial Oxford, because no other range has the Diffusive Oven Flue that draws in pure air constantly, heats it just as hot as you want it heated, and sends it through every part of the whole oven every second. That flue, found only in this perfect range, keeps that heated pure air—DRY air—constantly moving DOWNWARD through the baking food, oven, over the baking food, and out up the chimney. When it enters the oven it's hot and dry; when it leaves it, it's wet air,—carries with it all the odors, but NONE of the juices of the food that's being baked.

Please visit any of our stores and see why this is the right range for your kitchen.

It certainly does do good baking

Free to You, My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book "WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young.

To mothers of daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and painful or irregular menstruation in young ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality, who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

MILLINERY OPENING!

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Takes pleasure in announcing to the public, that her Millinery Opening takes place on Monday, Sept. 10th, and following days, to which all are cordially welcome.

This will be one of the finest Millinery displays ever shown by Miss Campbell, and all should take this opportunity of seeing this grand display.

MISS M. CAMPBELL.

Doctor Prentice System

On and after Monday, the 10th Sept., we will be prepared to make appointments and examinations, as well as fitting the "Prentice Lens" by the "Prentice System," for any parties who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity to get the wonderful help this special system affords, not only in the relief of vision, but in the cure of many distressing nervous diseases produced by Brain Strain through the vital centres. We have had not only five weeks of personal instructions from Dr. Prentice, but have been his assistant in the examination and fitting of hundreds of the most difficult and complicated cases, with very gratifying results to the parties concerned, and as we are aware there are many people who were anxious to consult him, but have not been able to do so, we feel confident we can give them the same satisfactory results. Consultation free. Appointments made to suit the parties concerned.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"DOLLY VARDEN."

Scenery, costumes and appointments are lavish and show the expenditure of a large amount of money in the production of "Dolly Varden," which Milton and Sargent Aborn will present at the Carman next Tuesday, Sept. 11, with the same magnificent equipment that contributed materially to the success of this charming comic opera in New York. "Dolly Varden" is by Stanislaus Stange and Julian Edwards, and is quite the best work these two well-known collaborateurs have ever turned out. The cast is headed by the captivating little prima donna comedienne, Lillian Spencer, in the title role, and she is seconded by a carefully selected support and one of the largest musical organizations of the season.

Belleville Man May Get Shannon's Job.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—A report comes from Kingston that Captain Conger, of Belleville, a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and a Halifax veteran, is to be appointed paymaster of Eastern Ontario command. This is the position to which Major Shannon was to have been appointed to, but Kingston Liberals opposed it because of Shannon's politics. The difficulty is going to be bridged over by making Major Shannon assistant staff adjutant, and this, it is said, will be satisfactory to all parties.

Must Die In Spite Of Father's Money

New York, Sept. 7.—London cablegrams state that Prof. Lorenz, the famous Viennese "bloodless surgeon," who got $30,000 for an operation on Lolita Armour, has been appealed to in the case of little Margaret Carnegie. Dr. Lorenz says that owing to her weakness and her age he does not think she could endure an operation, and that he doubts whether one could be successfully performed.

Little Miss Carnegie is in such serious condition at present that her father, Andrew Carnegie, recently declined invitations to public functions, saying he could not leave his suffering child. It is not believed she can live many months. Her death might prove a fatal blow to her father.

Goes to Brandon.

The Christian Guardian thus refers to a gentleman who has many friends in this city and district, he having married a Massassaga lady, Miss E. Huff: "Mr. W. B. Beer, for the past three and a half years principal of the Model school in Kincardine, son of Rev. W. C. Beer, of London, has been appointed English Master in the Collegiate Institute, Brandon, Manitoba. Mr. Beer has been very popular with all classes of citizens in Kincardine, and he will be greatly missed in the town, and especially in the Methodist church, where he and Mrs. Beer have been faithful workers. At a farewell gathering held in the Methodist church on the evening of August 20, several addresses were delivered expressive of the esteem in which they are held in the community, regret at their departure, and hopes for their future prosperity. Mr. Beer was presented with an elegant Morris chair and Mrs. Beer with a handsome present from her Sabbath school class."

Married In Manitoba.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Addison, Green Ridge, formerly of Belleville, recently, when their neice, Miss Edith Amelia Post, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. John Pott, Stuartburn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. B. Chestnut, of Green Ridge. The bride was given away by her father and looked charming in a dress of white silk organdie, trimmed with white valenciennes lace, insertion and orange blossoms, and carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid was Miss Jane Pott, sister of the groom, who looked very pretty in a dress of sky blue nun's veiling, trimmed with lace, carrying a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Lenora Froom, cousin of the bride, did the duties of maid of honor and looked very pretty in a dainty dress of white, with bouquet of violets. The happy groom was ably supported by Mr. John Dingman, of Napanee, Ont. After the ceremony was performed and the congratulations given, the guests, upwards of fifty, sat down to a sumptuous dinner prepared by the hostess. The bride received many useful and beautiful presents, which showed the high esteem in which she was held. The bride and groom left for their new home in Planky Plain, Stuartburn, amid a shower of rice and good wishes.

Bears In Madoc

A few days ago Mr. Wm. King and his son Melvin, while picking berries about a mile from his house in the Allen Settlement, walked into the midst of four large bears who were also busily engaged in a berry feed. As Mr. King was unarmed he did not seek any closer acquaintance with Messrs. Bruin, but it is safe to say he will visit that locality again soon with a gun. —Madoc Review.

Popular Prince Edward Man Died Yesterday.

One of the most popular residents of Prince Edward county passed away yesterday afternoon in the person of Mr. William Jose, of Ameliasburg. The deceased had been ailing for some time, and death came as the result of a complication of diseases. The late Mr. Jose was 59 years of age, and was much liked and respected by all who knew him. He was a Methodist and Conservative, and leaves a family of three sons and two daughters. The sons are Dr. Jose, of Foxboro; Luther, in New York and Harry, at home. To the family will be extended the sincere sympathy of many friends.

Ontario Milk Is Not Above Suspicion.

Ottawa, Sept. 6. — The Inland Revenue Department has issued a bulletin containing results of the analysis of samples of milk collected throughout the country, which are more unfavorable than the proportions recorded in former bulletins. Out of 319 samples 189 were pronounced genuine, 85 doubtful, and 45 adulterated. Toronto is shown to have the worst record, there being 11 doubtful and 7 adulterated out of 31 samples. Montreal had 8 doubtful and 6 adulterated samples out of a total of 29.

Married In Napanee

A quiet wedding took place at the English Church, Napanee, on Wednesday, Aug. 29, when Miss Mabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Leary, Napanee, became the wife of Mr. David J. Deshane. The bridesmaid was Miss Bertha Gould, of Fredericksburgh, niece of the groom, and Mr. T. D. Oliver, Deseronto, did similar honors for the groom. The bride was dressed in a travelling suit of brown with white silk blouse and hat to match. The bridesmaid was dressed in white dotted muslin. The happy couple left on the 4.20 train, mid showers of rice and good wishes, for a week's visit with friends in Crookston and Belleville. On their return they will reside in Napanee.

NYLAND CASE AGAIN ENLARGED

The case of Mr. Nyland, who is charged with collecting moneys due the Belleville Gas office, and neglecting to turn it over, was again proceeded with this morning, and occupied the attention of the court till noon, when it was again enlarged for a week. The defendant himself was in the box most of the morning.

THE INDIAN CASE.

The case of Bardy vs. Maracle, in which the defendant was charged with housebreaking, has been practically settled. It was again, this morning, enlarged for a week, and the chances are good that the parties interested will before long arrive at a settlement.

Visitor From the "Soo"

Chas. H. Egan, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., is spending a portion of his vacation at the home of his parents, Rev. J. and Mrs. Egan, North Front St. Mr. Egan has been a resident of the Steel Rail City for some years, and has great faith in the future of his thriving town. He thinks the Districts of Rainy River, Thunder Bay, Algoma and Nipissing should be set apart as a new province, called New Ontario, and says that, if such was the case it would not be long before it would be looked upon as the banner province of the Dominion.

A Roslin Wedding.

On Wednesday, Sept. 5th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Rutherford, Roslin, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their second daughter, Bessie, was united in marriage to Mr. T. E. Elliott. At 10 o'clock a.m., the bridal party entered the drawing-room to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs. (Rev.) McConnell, and took their places amidst a profusion of flowers, Rev. J. McConnell performing the ceremony. The bride was dressed in white silk and carried white roses. Little Mary Way and "Tottie" Robinson made striking little flower girls also, gowned in white silk and carrying baskets of flowers; they being the only attendants. After the congratulations the guests, composed of immediate friends from Tweed, Belleville, Brighton and Roslin, adjourned to the dining-room, to partake of the dainty luncheon. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott took the 3 o'clock train from Tweed for Buffalo and Niagara Falls. The presents were both costly and numerous. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, and to the flower girls, gold lace pins. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will be "at home" to their friends after Sept. 12th, at their home, Roslin.

PERSONAL ....AND.... SOCIAL.

Mr. G. B. Foster and daughter, Laura, have gone west.

Mr. Jas. Elvins, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., is visiting his parents in the city.

Miss Georgina Forster has gone to spend her holidays with friends in Buffalo and Port Huron.

Mrs. Addison, Cedar St., has returned from Rochester, where she spent a pleasant week with relatives and friends.

Napanee Beaver: Mr. Walter Alford, Belleville, was in town on Saturday last, attending the funeral of Mr. John Walters.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Burrows and two little daughters, Belleville, spent Sunday last in town with his parents.—Mr. Charles Walters, Belleville, was in town on Saturday last, attending the funeral of his uncle, Mr. John Walters.

Had a Close Call

Mr. Bowers, of this city, while duck hunting down the bay last Saturday, had a close call. He was in his boat, in a marsh, and, in firing at a duck overhead, lost his balance and fell backward into the water. Besides losing his balance, he also lost his gun. The water was about up to his neck. In the fall his boat was upset, and the only thing he could do was to stay in the water and shout for assistance. Some people in small boats rowed out to where he was, but they would not try to take him aboard, as they were afraid he would upset any small boat he tried to get in. Finally they went and got a large boat, and, after being in the water three-quarters of an hour, Mr. Bowers was rescued.

St. Agnes' School.

School will re-open for day pupils on Wednesday, September 12th, at 9.30 a.m. Miss Carroll will be at liberty to make arrangements for new pupils on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. MacColl will arrange her Theory Classes on Monday afternoon at 4.30.

The Musical Kindergarten will be re-opened under the direction of Miss Ida Adams, who has recently taken up the "Meyers Method," the method taught at the Toronto Conservatory and adopted at the School.

A Rare Plant

A beautiful specimen of "Night Blooming Cereus" was last evening on exhibition at the residence of Col. Lazier, Victoria avenue, and was admired by crowds of people. The delightful perfume was very strong.

It's the only medicine known that penetrates into every organ of the body and stays there. It's the best tonic in the world—Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

When the Liver is out of Order calomel, cascara, salts, strong liver pills and purging mineral waters won't do any permanent good.

When a person is bilious, the liver is not giving up enough bile to move the bowels regularly—and some of the bile is being absorbed by the blood. In other words, the liver is in a weakened, unhealthy condition.

Now, purgatives don't act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels, and afford only temporary relief. But FRUIT-A-TIVES are the one true LIVER TONIC. They act directly on the liver—strengthen and invigorate this vital organ—and put it in a normal, healthy condition.

FRUIT-A-TIVES also stimulate the glands of the skin—and regulate the kidneys and sweeten the stomach. When skin, liver and kidneys are normally healthy, there can be no biliousness, no constipation, no kidney trouble, no impure blood, no headaches.

No other medicine known to science is so reliable and so effective in curing Biliousness as these fruit liver tablets.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are fruit juices with tonics added—and are free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. 50c. a box or 6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price, if your druggist does not handle them.

SURGEONS MOCK DEATH

Insert Part of a Dog's Spinal Cord in a Man's Back.

Only Chance for Recovery of Engineer Glover, Injured in North West Railway Wreck—Case Will Attract Continental Attention as Only Once Previously Has the Operation Been Successfully Performed.

Medicine Hat, Sept. 8.—Dr. C. F. Smith, assisted by Drs. Smyth and Woodlands, performed a most delicate operation here Thursday, when about an inch of a dog's spinal cord was used to take the place of a portion of the spinal cord of Engineer Glover, who was injured in the recent wreck here.

As the spinal cord was ruptured there was no chances of Glover recovering, and the only hope lay in such an operation being successfully performed. The case will attract attention throughout the continent, as in only one previous instance has the operation been successfully performed.

THREE KILLED BY FALL.

Cage Falls in Mine Shaft Near Brockville—Two Men Hurt.

Brockville, Sept. 8.—Reports from Lyon Mountain mines bring intelligence of a terrible accident.

Three Italian miners named Paul Chepot, F. Pedwesha and Paul Seconders, were thrown from a car while ascending from the pit, and, falling a distance of from 100 to 150 feet, were instantly killed, their bodies being crushed and mutilated in a frightful manner.

Two other miners in the car had a most miraculous escape.

Chepot's young wife left Italy on Monday to join him and will not know of his fate until she arrives in the village.

Freight Caught the "Jigger."

Guelph, Sept. 8.—Martin Sosnoskie, section boss, had his knee badly wrenched and sustained other injuries, and Vinlengo Natricardi, sectionman, had both legs broken as the result of an accident on the Grand Trunk.

They were in a "jigger," and were caught by a freight train in a cut.

Both men jumped, and attempted to pull the car from the track, but were struck by the freight.

Killed Making Escape.

Windsor, Sept. 8.—In an attempt to escape from the House of the Good Shepherd, Detroit, where she was temporarily confined, Mildred Daniel, the 16-year-old daughter of a Windsor family, fell from the third-storey window of the institution, and sustained injuries from which she died two hours later.

Killed by Explosion.

St. John, N. B., Sept. 8.—One of the boilers in Calhoun's sawmill, at Jacquet River, exploded yesterday morning, badly wrecking the mill, and killing Nowell McEachern, the night watchman. The cause of the accident is unknown.

Swept Over the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 8.—Antonio Guillespo, a laborer employed by the Canadian Niagara Power Co., while working on their cribwork Thursday afternoon, lost his balance and fell into the river, and was swept over the falls.

Fatal Fall Downstairs.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—Mrs. Mary Bird, who has been keeping house for her son, James Bird, at 5 Woodley place, fell downstairs shortly after midnight on Thursday, and broke her neck. Death was instantaneous.

Chokes on Piece of Meat.

Port Perry, Sept. 8.—Wm. Tremeer, a painter and paper-hanger, choked to death Thursday night while eating his supper. He took a very large piece of meat in his mouth and followed it immediately with a dry soda biscuit. He began to choke, and died before medical assistance could reach him.

Lodgeman's Mysterious Death.

Kingston, Sept. 8.—Thursday night Samuel Lowe, financial secretary of Court Frontenac No. 59, I. O. F., left his home to go to lodge. He did not reach there, and about noon his body was found in the lake at the breakwater on King street. Mr. Lowe was a clerk in Steacy & Steacy's, and aged 50. He leaves a wife and large family. It is suspected that he took his own life, but from what cause it is not known yet. Another theory is that he went to the wharf and accidentally fell into the water, as he was subject to fainting spells.

Leaves Family For Stenographer.

Kingston, Sept. 8.—W. N. Lemmon, painter, on William street, has eloped with his stenographer, Jennie Dunlop. The fugitive couple had been on intimate terms for some time. The girl boarded in Lemmon's house. The man leaves a wife and two children, who are greatly troubled over the scandalous affair. The wife with her children is in a penniless condition.

J. J. Hill Is Defiant.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 8.—James J. Hill has defied the authority of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission to subpoena him as a witness before that body. Mr. Hill read his summons and said, "I cannot attend that meeting. I have too much business on hand. I don't think I will be in the city at that time, anyway."

After All-Night Struggle.

London, Sept. 8.—(C. A. P.)—After an intense all-night struggle with Free Traders, the Australian Government has secured the passing of a bill placing a fixed duty of £12 on harvesters and 25 per cent. on other agricultural implements.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

NEED JUST THE RICH, RED BLOOD DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS ACTUALLY MAKE.

From girlhood to middle life the health and happiness of every woman depends upon her blood. If her blood is poor and watery she becomes weak, languid, pale and nervous. If her blood supply is irregular she suffers from headaches and backaches, and other unspeakable distress which only women know. At every stage of woman's life Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are her best friend, because they actually make the rich, red blood which gives help and strength and tone to every organ of the body. They help a woman just when nature makes the greatest demand upon her blood supply. Mrs. H. Gagnon, who for twenty years has been one of the best known residents of St. Rochs, Que., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me. I was weak, worn out and scarcely able to drag myself about. I suffered from headaches and dizziness, my appetite was poor and to attempt housework left me utterly worn out. I slept badly at night, and what sleep I got did not refresh me. For nearly three years I was in this condition, and was constantly taking medicine, but found no benefit from it. One of my neighbors, who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with much benefit, advised me to try them. I did so, and the whole story is told in the words 'I am well again.' There are times yet when I take the pills, for they seem to me a guarantee against the troubles from which so many women suffer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills don't act on the bowels. They contain just the elements that actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves. That's why they cure anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago, headaches, backaches and heart palpitation, and skin diseases like pimples and eczema. That is why they are the greatest help in the world for growing girls who need new blood and for women who are troubled with irregular health. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cts. a box or six boxes for $2.50.

THE FAIR IN REVIEW.

Greatest Attendance Ever Registered For a Last Friday—The Prize-Winning Animals Parade.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—Society and Review Day was marked by the greatest attendance ever registered for the last Friday. All day long the crowds, estimated at over 40,000, wandered about the grounds taking last looks, encoring the band in the determination to get the best possible. Before the grand stand the great procession of prize-winning animals made one of the finest spectacles ever seen.

The great cattle headed the line, shorthorns beyond belief in bulk and beefness, then followed grade cattle, fat cattle, Herefords with pendant briskets, Polled Angus and Galloways with the buffalo of Europe shagging their coats, Ayrshires sleek as silk, and Holsteins as shining and glossy, Durhams and Jerseys, a herd for a Rosa Bonheur. Followed then the huge horses from England, among them the four months' orphan concealing its stolid grief in coltish fashion; thoroughbreds, standardbreds, Hackneys, ponies and Clydesdales in striking contrast, heavy draughts, coach horses and riding mounts, racers and drivers, a comely array. And once again the variety show with its laughter and suspended breath.

Several presentations marked the imminence of the end yesterday. Dr. A. W. Bell, the new manager of the Western Canada Exposition, who has made himself a general favorite as live stock superintendent and assistant manager of the fair, was handed a bunch of money by Wm. McNeil, president of the Ontario Poultrymens' Association. H. B. Donovan of The Canadian Kennell Gazette watched the proceeding on behalf of the dog men. The gift amounted to $450.

A similar amount was presented to C. B. McNaught superintendent of industries.

A token of regard and esteem which will be joined in by thousands was the gold watch presented to Lieut. Hall conductor of the 2nd Life Guards Band. Under his leadership the music has been one of the very foremost features of the fair.

Hon. Colin Campbell, Winnipeg; Hamar Greenwood, M.P., York, and Col. Belcher, mayor of Southampton, were the speakers at the fair yesterday.

Blames For Wreck, Suicides.

Mattoon, Ill., Sept. 8.—J. O. Backus, assistant superintendent of the Central Illinois Traction Co., committed suicide by shooting yesterday, following the verdict of a coroner's jury fixing on him the blame for a wreck on the road two days ago, in which the motorman was killed and several passengers seriously injured.

Terrorists Start Blaze.

Powsin, Russian Poland, Sept. 8.—A fire, started here yesterday by terrorists, who were angered at the refusal of the inhabitants to grant their demands, resulted in the destruction of 177 houses. A boy perished in the flames.

Kills Fellow Lunatics.

Warsaw, Sept. 8.—An inmate of the Asylum for the Insane at Gorakalyaria, near here, secured an axe Thursday and killed several of his fellow lunatics before he was overpowered.

Still Quaking.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 8.—According to a despatch to The Naccion, seven earthquake shocks were felt Thursday evening at Talca, Chili, 140 miles south southwest of Santiago.

SOME IRREGULARITIES

In Home Life's Books Brought Out by Commission.

Stock Transaction Was Kept From Government Return—Directors Personally Made Up Loss—Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. Pattison Told About the Amalgamation of People's and Home Life Companies.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—J. K. McCutcheon was again in the box when the Insurance Commission commenced business. Dominion Counsel Tilley examined. Secretary Kirby assisted the witness.

The People's Life is now under the same obligation as any reinsuring company, its policies all being reinsured in the Home Life. After the amalgamation certain items appeared on the books of the Home Life at more than they were really worth. One of these was Grand Valley Railway bonds, worth about $5, but "valued" at 105. This error was corrected.

Mr. Stratton In the Box.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, the president of the Home Life and the president of the People's Life before the merger, told of the amalgamation. At the end of 1905 25 per cent. of the Home Life business lapsed, and fully one-third of the People's Life business dropped also.

Mr. Stratton swore that no part of the $10,000 paid to Pattison for his interest had been returned to any of the directors. Nor was the deal hushed up from the old directors of the Home Life, nor was it done to get Pattison and Firstbrook out of the way. Many of the directors knew all about it from start to finish. Dr. Briggs knew all about it. Mr. Stratton stated that the substantial asset carried by the People's Life was the Dominion Permanent debentures.

Mr. Stratton was again in the box at the afternoon session.

A deal with Mr. McMullen, whereby he got $5,000 of People's Life debentures in exchange for Colonial Life stock was dissected by Mr. Tilley.

In a Dormont Condition.

The People's Life was in a very dormant condition at the end of 1904. The evidence of Mr. Stratton, assisted by Mr Kirby, went to show that $250,000 worth of debentures were only worth between $25,000 and $30,000. In view of this state of affairs, Mr. Tilley wanted to know if, in Mr. Stratton's opinion, it was fair to ask the public to pay 100 cents on the dollar for these debentures when they were not worth more than 10 cents.

Mr. Stratton said that it would have looked better if the stock had not been sold.

Mr. McCutcheon disagreed, and explained that Mr. McMullen was a shrewd business man and knew what he was doing.

"Did he appreciate the real value of the debentures? Did you tell him?"

"No," said Mr. McCutcheon, "but he had confidence in my management."

"Did he know that the People's Life issued $250,000 of debentures with assets of $25,000?"

"I don't think so," answered Mr. McCutcheon.

"On what basis is Mr. McMullen's debentures 'being redeemed?'" asked counsel, and Mr. Stratton said he was getting his money back and his Colonial stock back by accepting shares in the Home Life.

Wrote Account Off.

Mr. Tilley then took up certain transactions that occurred after the amalgamation. Besides the bonds of the Grand Valley Railroad, the Home Life were carrying Ontario Electric Light & Power Co. of Cobourg at a loss. When Mr. Stratton became president he had the whole account written off, putting an item of $11,000 into the profit and loss accounts. Another irregularity was the fact that Pattison had received $110 in October, 1905, for services rendered in 1892-3. Mr. Stratton saw Mr. Pattison, who thought he was entitled to the money. He showed him that by the agreement he was not entitled to anything, and Pattison promised to return the money. Another amount of $1,325, received by Pattison from the company's funds, to recoup loss the directors had made in "Sloss" stock. This loss was restored to the company later by each of the directors going down into his own pocket and giving a cheque to make the amount up.

Mr. Tilley found that 100 shares of Sloss Steel had been brought for $9,125 by a note given by the directors. It was sold on Dec. 31, 1903, and re-bought on Jan. 2, 1904, with no profit or loss, just to keep the stock out of the return to the Government.

A. J. Pattison, former managing director of the Home Life, was examined. He told of the organization of the company, and his assistance in its promotion.

Witness' contracts with the Home Life were discussed at length by Mr. Tilley and the witness, but nothing of importance developed. The witness seemed to be watching everything closely, and the counsel was sparring for wind.

Telephone Commissioner.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—F. Dagger, who has been long associated with independent telephones in the City of Toronto and Province of Ontario, has been chosen telephone commissioner for the Province of Manitoba, and leaves to-day for his new work in the west. The Manitoba Government proposes next year to hold a plebiscite on the question of public ownership of telephones, and Mr. Dagger goes as an expert telephone authority to educate public opinion.

Four Years For David Hobbs.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—David Hobbs, the ex-Canadian Pacific Railway customs agent, was yesterday brought before Judge Choquet in private and was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. Hobbs fled from Montreal about a year ago, after stealing about $60,000 from the Canadian customs. He was finally run down in New York.

Toronto Milk Below Standard.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—The analysis at Ottawa of several samples of milk from dealers in Toronto by the Inland Revenue Department shows that out of 31 samples, 11 are classed as doubtful, and seven are adulterated.

TIRED OF THE REVOLT.

President Palma Issues a Call to Congress—Havana In a State of Modified Panic, and Badly Guarded.

Havana, Sept. 10.—President Palma has issued a call for a special session of congress to convene Sept. 14, in order to consider the disturbed condition of the country and measures for ending the intolerable situation.

The President is weary of the complicated and threatening conditions, and is anxious to divide the responsibilities with congress.

Havana is in a state of modified panic. Everybody is talking of the likelihood of the revolutionists marching in and taking possession of the city.

Insurgents Cut Wires.

The principal features in the revolt Saturday were attempts by the Western Railway to get trains as far towards Pinar del Rio as possible, and the advancement of an armored train with machine-guns and recruits to the country now occupied by the insurgents.

The latter part of these movements is shrouded in mystery, as also is the situation of Col. Avalo's force in Pinar del Rio City, which, for the past two days, has been surrounded by Pino Guerra's insurgents.

Wire communication repeatedly was cut further east Saturday night, and neither the railroad nor the Government is able to communicate beyond Paso Real, 29 miles east of Pinar del Rio City.

Seek Peace.

The veterans, who are searching for a peaceful means of settlement of the difficulties, profess that the Santa Clara and Havana insurrectionists are ready to quit and turn against Pino Guerra if he does not show a similar tendency; but Guerra's conduct, and especially the attitude of the Liberals in Havana, who, supposedly, are members and advisers of the revolutionary junta, totally precludes the probability that peace is at hand.

Train Held Up.

The Western Railway Saturday night received a telegram from Paso Real, saying that the band commanded by the Paise Brothers are still holding up the armored troop train between Herrarula and Consolacion del Sur, and firing was continuous. The despatch adds that Col. Avalos' troops in Pinar del Rio City undoubtedly are surrounded.

Woodstock's Power Wants.

Woodstock, Sept. 10.—The amount of power which it is estimated will be needed from the plant at Niagara for this city is 1,350 horse-power. This much will be needed at least, and in all probability more could be used. The estimate was obtained after consulting with local manufacturers, and has been forwarded to the secretary of the Power Commission.

Great Party's Watchwords.

R. L. Borden Enunciates Them Clearly At Truro, N. S.

Conservative Leader Says "The Principle of State Ownership is no More to Be Condemned For Defects or Errors of Administration Than Is the General Principle of Responsible Government."

Truro, N. S., Sept. 10.—Six thousand people, who came from all parts of the country, gave R. L. Borden, the Conservative leader, a most magnificent welcome here on Saturday. Every Conservative in Truro was present at Victoria Park, and crowds came from miles around. Westville sent 600 voters, headed by their own band; there was a trainload from Halifax; New Glasgow, Stellarton and other towns sent imposing delegations. The speakers included George W. Stuart of Truro, who presided; R. L. Borden, M. P., C. E. Gregory, J. J. Ritchie, K. C., and Charles E. Tanner, M. P. P., of Pictou, provincial leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Borden was in splendid form and delivered a splendid address, exposing the rascalities of the Laurier Government, pleading for purity in elections and defending the doctrine of provincial rights. In part he said:

The National Policy of To-Day.

"We do not depart from the best traditions of the past, but the national policy of to-day must take account of conditions which have arisen since 1878. In no part of the world is the question of transportation of more vital concern than in Canada, and nowhere are the opportunities more favorable on the whole for its solution. The problem begins at the farm or the factory, and ends with the market, whether at home or abroad. Our natural advantages include a remarkable series of wonderful inland waterways, undeveloped water powers of untold possibilities and great national ports on two oceans.

"The issues are provincial as well as federal, for the problem must take account, not only of great railway systems and inland navigations, but of the tramway and even of the ordinary public highway. The development of our unrivalled natural facilities for transportation and the equipment of our great national ports on both oceans must be vigorously advanced if our producers are to compete on fair terms in the countries where we find our best markets.

"The public domain must be regarded as including not only the natural resources and facilities with which Canada has been so abundantly endowed, but also the great national franchises and public utilities. These, of right, are the property of the state, and they must be administered and exploited for the public benefit. The Conservative party maintained this principle in 1904, when it declared that the new transcontinental railway should be a national work, owned and controlled by the state.

No Obstacle In the Way.

"Government ownership or operation is repeatedly challenged because of incompetent or corrupt administration. There is no other argument against it; but shall all private enterprise be condemned because of insurance frauds or business failure, or corporate graft? We shall not renounce the administration of our public lands because of Saskatchewan Valley land deals or grazing lease scandals, nor hand over the Intercolonial to a private corporation because its management has been so utterly discredited. The principle of state ownership is no more to be condemned for defects or errors of administration than is the general principle of responsible Government. The remedy is to mend the methods. Today the grossest maladministration is rife in some public departments of Canada. Outrageous election scandals are continuously disclosed. Shall we, therefore, abandon altogether the system of Parliamentary government, or repeal the British North America Act?

For People, Not Speculator.

"The Conservative party affirms that our public domain in its widest sense, our great national franchises and our public utilities, are for the people and not for the speculator. The policy of our opponents denies this. When Canada's credit was pledged for the building of a great transcontinental railway, why should not Canada have built and owned the road? Why, at least, should Canada not have some share in the profit as well as in the risk?

"The British Government saw its opportunity, purchased a controlling interest in the Suez Canal and found the investment profitable, financially as well as politically. Our Government, which had its opportunity when it financed the Grand Trunk Pacific, lacked the foresight and the courage to secure for the people any interest whatever in the overflowing millions which, within a few years, will pour into the treasury of that railway from the gift of a great national franchise. But if a national policy is demanded for the advancement of material interests there are other and higher considerations which are by no means to be forgotten or disregarded.

The Party Watchword.

"The watchword of the Conservative party should be clean elections and merciless punishment of the briber and ballot forger. It is not enough to cry 'clean elections.' There are two other essentials, viz., to run clean elections and to punish corruption or fraud by every means known to the law, and that law must be made simpler and easier of enforcement. Opportunities for delay and petty technicalities, which accompany and surround the present law, must be abolished.

"It is idle that there should be any question about the service of a petition upon any person, who has been returned as a member of Parliament. The filing of such a petition in the court and a short public advertisement as notice to the constituency should be sufficient. Another subject of considerable moment is gradually forcing itself upon the attention of the people. Under our constitution, large powers of self-government have been conferred upon the various provinces of Canada by those provisions of the constitution which define and limit the respective spheres of provincial and federal authority.

"The methods of the Liberal machine are such as to make each provincial Liberal Government entirely subservient and the creature of the federal authority. This circumstance has aroused the attention of the Conservatives of Quebec, who have recently adopted a strong resolution upon the subject.

"In this province and in the new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the same tendency is observable. The Liberal policy is dictated from Ottawa, and the Provincial Government is merely a sub-committee to carry out the terms of that dictation."

Murder Over Ball Game.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 10.—Robert S. Jardine, 28 years old, was murdered Saturday night by Francis Curtin, 20 years old, during a dispute over a ball game. Curtin almost severed Jardine's head from his body with one stroke of a razor. Curtin has escaped.

The Healey Falls Franchise.

The eagerness with which the Globe and other Liberal journals seize upon innocent transactions of the Whitney Government and try to distort them into some semblance of dishonesty is a striking tribute to the thoroughly clean and business-like administration that Ontario is now enjoying. We heard a few weeks ago a great outcry about the proposed sale of the right of way through Cobalt to an Ontario Syndicate. It is becoming more evident day by day, as the Guelph Herald points out, that the bargain made with that syndicate was the best available and that every effort was put forth to secure for the Province the best possible terms. The fact, however, that the conditions in the proposed agreement were not thoroughly in line with those advertised by the Commission, impelled the Government to refuse to ratify the contract. Thus was one great scandal which the Globe had exploited, relegated to the limbo of exploded sensations.

During the past few days we have heard a great deal about the Healey Falls Power Franchise. The leading Liberal organ has been trying to persuade the public that the contract made by the Government with the Northumberland - Durham Power Company was out of harmony with the declared policy of Mr. Whitney on the power question. The publication recently of Mr. Cochrane's explanation of the terms of the contract has shown how utterly unjustifiable was the Globe's criticism. Not only were more liberal terms exacted from this syndicate than were ever before obtained for a power concession, but the Government has reserved for all time absolute control over the rates to be charged the consumer.

The Port Hope Guide, a very pronounced Liberal journal, comments upon the alleged dissatisfaction of the people of Brighton over the Healey Falls Franchise. The Guide points out that there is no ground for the fear that Brighton will not be served by the new company. That town will receive power from Healey Falls, the same as the other frontier towns. In fact, the transmission line will run through Brighton. Our contemporary concludes an editorial on the subject with the following paragraph;

"Speaking of the lease which has been granted to the company by the Ontario Government, we might remind the public that it was granted at the request of twelve municipal Councils of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham notwithstanding the strong opposition of some Peterboro and Lakefield citizens, which district is already in possion of some dozen heavy water powers largely unused. Northumberland and Durham counties are not afraid of any outside influence aimed at depriving them of their power."

That the Toronto fair authorities made a bad mistake in giving the Stars and Stripes the place of honor one day during the exhibition is admitted by most Toronto people, but the strongest confirmation of it is contained in the following letter, which was written to exhibition officials by a U. S. visitor;

"Americans Day, Toronto.

"Sirs, — I enjoyed my visit to your fair. The flag incident, however, was regrettable and caused many things to be said about us which would otherwise not have been said.

"When we visit Canada we recognize British sovereignty, and should respect you more had you the courage of your faith.

"Were even your King to visit our own country, the Stars and Stripes would fly above the Union Jack, which is correct international courtesy. Any other would only breed his contempt for us."

Is it possible that, in "the fierce race for wealth," the people of our Canadian Northwest have been dulled to the amenities of life? The writer of a letter to the London Saturday Review says some hard things about the Nor'westers. Hear him;

"After the absence of five years, I have revisited the Northwest and noticed a change in the manners of the people — a distinct change for the worse. Formerly you met with a hearty welcome and a smiling face, but now no welcome. The smile has changed to a somewhat contemptuous scowl. In a word, the people of the Northwest have become pronounced Socialists.

"It would indeed be a pleasant duty to be able to praise the looks and fashions of the women and children of the Canadian Northwest but, alas! that is impossible. No one can enter a street car in Winnipeg and fail to be struck with the singular want of beauty and grace, both of women and children. It is the rarest thing to see a woman or child with any pretensions to good looks or good carriage."

In discussing a recent bargain counter incident in a southern city of the United States, when a number of women were badly hurt in a mad rush to get to a counter at which dishpans were being sold at a very low price, the Christian Guardian moralizes a little on bargains. It comes to the conclusion that the bargain is essentially immoral, from the standpoint of the dealer, as well as from that of the bargain hunter. Very wisely it does not undertake to prove its position not that it is impossible, but that it is unnecessary. It may be immoral, as the Woodstock Express points out, to seek to get something for nothing, but people will be more easily deterred by the consideration, if they can ever be made to realize the fact, that it is foolish. You pay for all you get, is a familiar expression that is none the less true whether it is dishpans or experience that you are buying.

METHODISTS HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

INTERESTING NOTES FOR FOLLOWERS OF JOHN WESLEY IN THIS DISTRICT.

The financial district meeting of the Belleville district of the Methodist church was held in Bridge St. Church, Belleville, on Tuesday, Sept. 4th. Besides routine business, some items of special interest may be noted.

The Rev. James Lawson, chairman of the Battleford district, Assiniboia conference, was a visitor at the meeting and gave an address on the work of the church in the great west. Though about fifty men were sent west last year it will require about 80 more this year to keep pace with the growing work.

In a debate on the state of the work in the district it was urged that, in view of the shortage in the number of ministers in this conference, there being sixteen too few this year to fill the appointments, and in view of the large number of churches at short distances from each other on some of the circuits, a strong committee was appointed of ministers and laymen to consider the whole question of a readjustment of congregations and circuits, so as to solidify and strengthen the cause on the district.

An exchange of pulpits for educational anniversary was arranged for Oct. 28th, as follows;

Bridge St.—a.m., Rev. J. J. Rae; 7 p.m., Rev. Jno. Potts, D.D.

A Timely Move

The Carman Opera House this season intends to strictly enforce the non-expectorating nuisance in the lobby and elsewhere as well as the loitering of young lads around the corridors and lobbies. Conspicuous notices have been posted as a warning, and a strict watch will be kept. The first offender will be brought into court no matter who he is, and will be severely dealt with if convicted. Those who cannot refrain from using tobacco for a couple of hours are not desirable under any circumstances.

Fall Fair Fakirs

A large number of requests are being received by the Department of Agriculture from parties who would like to operate games of chance of one kind and another, at the fall exhibitions. These people seem anxious to find what games are against the law and what lines are permissable. It is stated by Superintendent H. B. Cowan that, according to the new Act governing agricultural societies, no mention is made of knife or cane stands, but all forms of drawing numbers from envelopes, games which have been very popular at many exhibitions lately, are against the law. The Department intends to be very strict this year in prosecuting violations of the Act relating to games of chance at exhibitions. It is felt that sufficient warning has been given to these characters during the past two years to have taught them a lesson, and therefore any parties arrested this year will be prosecuted as severely as possible.

How Cambridge Won the Big Race.

London, Sept. 8.—Never has there been keener interest in a race rowed on the Thames. Never have such vast crowds thronged the banks and crowded the bridges of the famous Putney-Mortlake course as that which witnessed the race to-day. The conditions, too, were perfect and both crews and their partisans were satisfied and confident. All this being so, the one thing needed and the one thing which might justifiably have been expected to crown the day was a great race. But it must be said at once, and said regretfully, that this was the one thing missing.

It is well to be frank and at the outset it must be said that Cambridge won with ease.

The story of the race itself will not take long in telling. The Cambridge men began to turn in at their boathouse from 3.30 o'clock on. The Harvard crew came down at 4 o'clock in a light breeze with the water lively, but smooth.

There was little advantage in winning the toss, but fortune perched on the Cambridge bows at the start, Stuart winning the toss.

At 4.25 R. C. Lehmann, the referee, fired the pistol, and a mighty roar of "They're off" went up from both banks. In the first fifteen seconds Cambridge rowed eleven strokes and Harvard ten, the former getting under way the better. In the first thirty seconds Cambridge stroked twenty and Harvard nineteen, and in the minute Cambridge rowed 38 strokes and Harvard 39.

9 Cambridge came away at once, and in this first minute the story of the race was told, in brief, that Cambridge was the fastest crew. When they passed the boathouse Cambridge was already three-quarters of a length ahead, and was steadily increasing her lead. At the mile, Cambridge was from three to four lengths ahead and going well within themselves. The Harvard crew was then steadily plugging along at about 33 strokes to the minute, but was not showing any signs of getting on even terms.

By this time those following in the launches had acknowledged or rejoiced that it was all over Stuart, the Cambridge stroke, was struck with the same confident idea, for his face broke into a smile and apparently he threw a remark over his shoulder to the seven other men.

Cambridge, for a considerable time rowed at 32 to 33 strokes a minute, and Harvard struck about the same rate, with the gap between the boats remaining much the same. Hammersmith bridge was passed without any alteration in seven minutes and twenty-three seconds. This same distance was made in seven minutes and ten seconds in Cambridge's record row in 1900.

It was now plainer than ever that the race was too hot for Harvard. Their stroke got very short in the water, and the boat lost life, but the men stuck gamely to the hopeless task.

Passing Chiswick Church, entering the long stretch of Corney Reach, up to Barnes bridge, the crews found themselves on a very rough piece of water. Here, if the race had been closer, was the time for Harvard to make a big effort. Here her station favored her, and if she could have got ahead by Barnes bridge her position would have been a happy one, for seldom has the old saying, "The first under Barnes bridge wins the race," been found false.

Captain Filley, of Harvard, spurted, but somewhat late, hitting the stroke up to 36. But the boat did not seem to move any faster, although the gap between her and the leader was slightly decreased. This was chiefly due to the fact that the Cambridge men, feeling that they had the race well in hand, were steadying down through the rough water.

Cambridge shot by Barnes bridge, three lengths ahead, in sixteen minutes and six seconds, compared with fifteen minutes and thirty-four seconds made in the record row in 1900.

In the last 5-8th of a mile, from Barnes bridge to the winning post, Harvard made a very game effort to come up. The stroke was kept up to 36 and Cambridge's lead was decreased by a length but there was absolutely not the slightest hope of Harvard getting on even terms with the Cantabs, who finished in a powerful paddle, two lengths ahead. The official time for the race was nineteen minutes and eighteen seconds.

SPORTING NOTES.

A lot of interest was taken in this city in the Cambridge-Harvard boat race on Saturday, and when the news came that Cambridge had won it was received with satisfaction. The English stroke seems the best yet.

Rochester has just made a fine spurt in the Eastern League. They won eleven straight games, falling down to Buffalo on the twelfth. That's going along a few.

Chicago News: If all the batters in the National and American Leagues were combined in one batter, and if this batter, at one strike, hit the ball as far as all the batters in both leagues hit it during the season, he would drive the ball 2,836 miles, 921 yards, or far enough to drive the ball from the home plate at Selma, Ala., to Yuma, Ariz.

Latrosse results on Saturday: Tecumsehs 11, Cornwall 1; Montreal 9, Capitals 1.

There is now a three-cornered tie in the N.L.U., Tecumsehs, Capitals and Montreals each having won six games and lost four, each club having two more games to play. The knowing ones are picking Montreal for the silverware.

Thoney, Toronto's left-fielder, has been drafted by Cincinnati.

NO MORE DANDRUFF.

Newbro's Herpicide Destroys the Pestiferous Cause of Annoying Dandruff.

Does your head itch? Is your coat or dress full of white flakes after dressing your hair? That's the effect of dandruff. Is your hair thinning? Are you beginning to get bald in spots? Are you already, in fact, rapidly becoming bald? If so, that is the effect of a measly little parasite that burrows in at the root of the hair and throws up the scalp in dandruff and eats off the hair at the root. Science's latest discovery is a destroyer of that pestiferous germ. That destroyer is contained in no other hair preparation on earth but Newbro's Herpicide. Try it and be convinced. A delightful dressing.

Britain's Prophet Is Still a Pessimist.

Old Moore is a tried and cherished acquaintance of the British public, but if he had any true consideration for its feelings he would never issue his almanac on a day like yesterday, when the moist heat had reduced everyone's spirits to the lowest point.

Old Moore is a pessimist. His prognostications are never colored by a roseate view of life. He should be ready only in mid-winter after a good dinner and in front of a blazing fire, when the senses are lulled into indifference to his depressing forecasts.

Old Moore says we shall all have a very bad time next year. The only man there is any consolation for is Lord Roberts, who will doubtless note with satisfaction that "in January especially keen interest will be taken in rifle shooting, not only among our schools, but in nearly every village."

In 1907 there will be "wanton disorders," "wild rumors," "terrible disasters," "startling news," "ominous happenings," "terrible plague," and all the horrible things that make our flesh creep. Old Moore would have a more appalling effect on us than the antics of the Fat Boy on the widow in "Pickwick" were it not that he is loftily vague about these untoward events, as becomes a true prophet.

Old Moore has a helping word for the House of Lords. They need not fear the onslaughts that will ne made on them by sections of the Labor and Socialist party. They are under the smile of the stars, and Old Moore holds the stars in the hollow of his hand, so to speak.

If the prophet condescended to be specific about April he might have pleased us once, for he says in that month the British public will refuse to pay taxes. The results of this revolt are, however, known only to the stars.

In August "we shall become a germ-laden land, and Old Moore looks forward to a dust tax on all motor-cars.' But a very grave situation will arise in October. Then "the subject of women's clubs will call for attention. The woman's club has a most pernicious effect on home life, and many a husband and wife have been separated simply because the lady has not time for household affairs or family ties. Old Moore gives a friendly warning to newly married couples, to avoid club life, and advises them to spend their evenings as far as possible within the domestic circle."

The year, we are told, "will close cold and gloomy" — fairly "safe" prognostication.—English Ex.

A Wonderful Yankee

WHO MAKES COLD SHIVERS RUN UP AND DOWN THE SPINES OF CANADIAN CHEESE - BUYERS.

Ogdensburg Journal: A. B. Virkler, the well known cheese broker, of Carthage, on Saturday closed up a deal aggregating 14,000 boxes or about 1,200,000 pounds which will net him a small fortune. This cheese was bought in Canada, principally on the Brockville board during the last month, at prices ranging from 11 1-2 to 11 1-4c a pound and was sold in Liverpool at an average of 13 3-8c, which means practically 13 cents at Brockville and Montreal, deducting the freight which is 36.43 cents per hundred pounds to Liverpool.

The investment in this lot is about $170,000. Mr. Virkler bought at almost record prices for August in the face of predictions that he would lose heavily. As a matter of fact, he is the bogie man for the Canadian buyers and the joy of the Canadian factorymen. They call him "The Yankee' over there and his appearance on any of the cheese boards is the signal for a disturbance. Recently Mr. Virkler has confined his attention to Canada and St. Lawrence county and buys comparatively little cheese Jefferson and Lewis. He declares the factories around Carthage are making too much soft cheese.

Mr. Virkler will not give exact figures on his profits in this deal but admits he has made enough on his August transactions to 'buy a farm,' size not mentioned.

While not exactly a bull in the cheese market the Carthage broker is of the opinion that cheese is going higher this fall, and attributes it to the stock yards exposures.

Noxious Weeds.

The Act to prevent the spread of noxious weeds makes it incumbent on every owner or occupier of land to cut down and destroy, when growing on his land, the following weeds; Canada thistle, ox-eye daisy, wild oats, burdock, as often as is necessary to prevent the ripening of their seed, provided that the destruction of growing grain crops is not involved thereby.

The operations of the Act may be further extended by by-law to any weed or weeds and to any disease of grain or fruit trees (excepting yellows and black knot in fruit trees.)

In order that the provisions of the Act may be properly enforced, it is provided that the Council of any city, town, township or incorporated village may, and upon petition of fifty or more ratepayers shall, appoint at least one inspector for the purpose. The inspector is required to serve a notice in writing on the owner or occupant of any land within the municipality (or within his division of the municipality if there is more than one inspector appointed) where said noxious weeds are growing, requiring him to cause the same to be cut down or destroyed within ten days of the service of the notice. In the event of neglect to carry out these instructions, the inspector shall enter upon the land and cause such weeds to be cut down or destroyed (unless the land be sown with grain), the cost of doing this work to be charged against the land with the other taxes imposed by the municipality.

Where such noxious weeds are growing upon non-resident lands (by which is meant "lands which are unoccupied and the owner of which is not resident within the municipality") it is not necessary that the inspector should give any notice before proceeding to cut down or destroy such weeds.

In the event of the land being railway property, the notice shall be given to any stationmaster of the company resident in or nearest the municipality.

The owner or occupier of land is also required to destroy, at the proper time to prevent the ripening of their seed, all noxious weeds growing on any highway (not being a toll road) adjoining his land, from the boundary of such land to the centre line of the road. It is the duty of the overseer or inspector of highways in the municipality to see that the Act, as it relates to the keeping of highways clear of weeds, is properly enforced, and in case of neglect after notice has been given to the owner or occupier, the work may be performed by the municipality and the costs added to the taxes against the land. In the event of there being no overseer or inspector of highways the enforcement of the act in this regard falls upon the clerk of the municipality.

Every offence against the Act is punishable by fine on summary conviction before any Justice of the Peace, the fine to be paid to the Treasurer for the use of the municipality. Every inspector, overseer of highways or other officer who refuses or neglects to discharge the duties imposed upon him by this Act is liable, upon conviction, to a fine of not less than $10.00 or more than $20.00.

Old Chronic Sores

As a dressing for old chronic sores there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Salve. While it is not advisable to heal old sores entirely, they should be kept in a good condition for which this salve is especially valuable. For sore nipples Chamberlain's Salve has no superior. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store

SAFETY.

Never in all the history of transportation has travel been safer than it is to-day. Seated in perfect comfort in any of the mile-a-minute trains of the Lake Shore Railway you are in less danger by far than was your grandfather in the lumbering six-mile-an-hour stage of a half or three-quarters of a century ago. Trains over this line are protected and guarded in a way that is but little short of marvellous. Every device that skill or money can provide is used without regard to the expense and in spite of the high speed—the fastest in the world—you are as safe here as in your own home. Combined with safety and high speed are luxurious comfort and punctuality, all combined to make a service unequaled the world over. See that your ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway," and write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief Ass't G. P. A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

A Savage Poison.

The juice of the green pineapple is accredited in Java, the Philippines and throughout the far east generally with being a blood poison of a most deadly nature. It is said to be the substance with which the Malays poison their kreeses and daggers and to be also the "finger nail" poison formerly in use among the aborigine Javanese women almost universally. These women cultivate a nail on each hand to a long, sharp point, and the least scratch from one of these was certain death.

The Meanest Man.

The meanest man has been located in Philadelphia. He dropped a large roll of bills on the street, and a boy who found it returned the money to him. Counting the bundle carefully, the owner put it in his pocket. "My son," he said benignly to the boy, "I am rejoiced to see that you are guided by lofty principles, and as an earnest of my approbation shall refrain from charging you interest for the time you have had my money."

A Continuous Feast.

They were from the country, on their first visit to London, and a notice in their hotel puzzled them considerably. It ran: "Breakfasts, 8 to 11; luncheons, 12 to 2; teas, 3 to 5; dinners, 6 to 8; suppers, 8 to 11." "Say, Garge," said one to the other, "'cordin' to this yere, there bean't so vary much toime fer soightseein.'"

Advantage of Being a Brute.

"Do you think animals feel pain as deeply as we do?"

"I've never studied the subject, but it is safe to say that they don't worry as much as we do over pains that have not yet been felt."

In our relation with one another we are apt to neglect the little things which count so much in making our lives happier.

WAS IT FOR REVENGE.

Highwaymen Bind and Smear With Tar Farm Hand Richard Ford.

Bowmanville, Sept. 10.—Richard Ford, an Englishman, a farm hand, was terribly beaten by two men who sprang upon him as he was passing under an old bridge of the Grand Trunk Saturday night.

His assailants seized him from behind, tied his hands, blind-folded him and besmeared his head and face with tar. They then went through his pockets, taking all the money he had and then asked if he would leave the country by Monday if they would not kill him.

Ford gave no answer and they began hammering head on a stone, striking him in the face and kicking him most brutally.

Up to this time he had kept silent, but believing they intended to kill him he made a supreme effort and got one leg free, with which he kicked one of the men from him, and, getting on his feet, he struck with his tied hands at his assailants and they turned and ran away, northward.

Bleeding and feeling dazed, Ford ran across the fields to Samuel Allan's where his hands were freed and he was taken to town, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Tilley.

This is the first case of highway robbery known to have taken place in this part of the country for very many years. Opinion is divided as to the reason for the attack on Ford, but the general opinion is that it is a case of revenge. An arrets is expected to-morrow.

LURED GIRL AWAY.

Aged Man Held at Port Huron on a Serious Charge.

Port Huron, Sept. 10.—The police have in charge one John Brown, a man about 50 years of age, who is held for having sent to this city for immoral purposes an 18-year-old girl named Hollis, a ward of the Barnardo Home of Toronto.

The Hollis girl was employed as a domestic near Cheltenham. Brown is a hired man on a farm nearby. He is married and is the father of four children, but is separated from his wife.

It is claimed that he gave the girl $20 to go to Port Huron, there to meet a man who was to marry her, Brown promising to follow her in a few days.

THE MODERN HUSBAND.

You shall see him in the church-pew,
In a collar stiff and high;
With a mien of resignation that for heaven is surely ripe;
While his wife is gay displaying what his neighbors cannot buy
He's a fairly patient person of the Modern-Husband type!

You shall see him in the ante-room of some Blue Stocking club,
When he's waiting until madame, in her paper, vice shall swipe,
With a blow reverberating, like a hammer on a tub—
He's a fairly patient person of the Modern-Husband type!

You shall see him at a concert, like a sardine closely packed,
While to Mendelssohn he listens, with endurance tough as tripe,
And you know his toes are tingling, and his limbs with stiffness racked—
He's a fairly patient person of the Modern-Husband type!

You shall see him in department stores, a threatening many a skirt,
With involuntary damage from the feet he tried to wipe;
Oh, forgive him, gentlewoman, though he do your garments dirt—
He's a fairly patient person of the Modern-Husband type!

An expensive series of experiments is being carried on by the United States Government, the results of which will be of great interest in certain portions of Canada. These experiments are to find some efficient means of extracting values from the "black sands" which are found in extensive beds in many portions of the country, and more particularly along the Pacific coast. In British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, there are large, low grade deposits carrying values in gold, platinum and other minerals, which cannot be extracted by the means at the disposal of the ordinary miner. The work of the United States experimental stations will probably result in the finding of some means of handling these deposits on a paying basis.

MAKE CALLS AT NIGHT.

Peculiar Custom of the Arab Ladies of Zanzibar.

The Arab ladies of Zanzibar live in great seclusion in the large white houses, never going out in the daytime from one year's end to another, says the Manchester Guardian. A little cooking and sweetmeat making is their only recognized employment, though some few of them can do beautiful silk embroidery. To lie on their beds and be fanned by their slave girls is the usual occupation of the richer women.

If they want to visit their friends, or, as is more often the case, to perambulate the town, they wait until 8 o'clock in the evening, when a gun is fired warning all Mohammedans that it is the fifth and last hour of prayer; then they may go out. They are entirely enveloped in large mantles and their faces completely hidden by very ugly gilt masks, with oblong slits for the eyes, and many of them wear these even in the privacy of their own homes. Their other garments are trousers and a tunic reaching below the knee, which is often embroidered and trimmed with gold braid. They have a number of gold and silver ornaments, nose rings and earrings, bracelets, anklets, and so on.

They are very light in color, many of them cream colored. Their features are regular and good, and they have dark eyes and silky black hair. They paint under their eyes and stain their hands and nails a reddish color with senna. If they want to go any distance from home they ride through the narrow streets on large white asses stained a brick red, their slaves running by their sides, but you generally meet them stalking solemnly along, surrounded by their slaves, who carry enormous lanterns as big as a London street lamp.

Very often they do not return home till 4 in the morning, when another gun is fired proclaiming the first hour of prayer. It is very awkward at times when you meet in the streets some of these ladies whom you ought to know and are greeted by them. You cannot see their faces, it is not always easy to recognize a voice, and nothing would offend them more than to ask their names.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

A man should have sense and woman taste.

The smartest bass finally runs across a bait that fools him.

Every man thinks he could trot some pace if he wasn't hobbled.

People are compelled to smother resentments at least a dozen times a day.

A man who has a falling out with more than two of his neighbors ought to look himself over.

A clever mimic would be good company were it not for the feeling that he is also a clever mimic behind your back.

When a man catches a big string of fish, how he loves to carry it along the main street of the town in which he lives! All of us like to display our big catches in other lines.

Watch Records.

"That man's watch holds the record for his town," a jeweler said. "It has run for twenty-two years without stopping. Aside from a little regulating, oiling and cleaning, it has never needed a repair. I know lots of men who try to establish records for their watches. I know five men in this little town whose watches have run day and night for ten years. Give a good watch to a man and he takes a pride in it. He never forgets to wind it. Soon he is trying to make a record for it. The record for continuous running is held, I believe, by a Swiss watch in Geneva that has run for twenty-eight years."

Money and Marbles.

Once there was a man who thought Russell Sage ought to stop work. He spoke to him about it. "Why get together any more money, Mr. Sage? You can't eat it; you can't drink it. What good will it do you?"

"Ever play marbles?" Uncle Russell asked.

"Yes, when I was a boy."

"Couldn't eat 'em, could you? Couldn't drink 'em, could you? No use to you, were they? What did you play marbles for?"

WHAT THE HAIR TELLS.

Auburn hair means a kindly, sympathetic nature.

Straight hair indicates more power to govern than curly hair.

Curls denote a feeble sense of right and wrong, gayety, vivacity, self confidence.

Straight black hair, growing coarse and thick, indicates more order and industry than mental power.

Fine brown hair only accompanies excellent minds. Generally the owner has intellectual tendencies.

Red hair is strongly characteristic—no halfway business there. It usually indicates a quick temper, though there are exceptions.

Beautiful golden hair is rarely seen on persons of a gross nature. Its owner loves fine arts and possesses exquisite sensibilities.

Hair and eyebrows differing in color indicate race mixture and bespeak a wavering, unsteady nature.

As a rule, smooth, fine, softly waving hair betokens gentleness, quietness, neatness.

The Earth's Three Motions.

The motion of the earth at the equator is equal to nearly 1,500 feet per second, and the earth has three motions—viz, the rotation on its axis in one day of twenty-four hours, the revolution around the sun in one year of 365¼ days and a very slow gyratory motion at the poles. This last mentioned motion is a very peculiar one and has not long been known. The poles move around the outside of a line at right angles to the plane of the ecliptic, coinciding with the line of axle rotation once in 25,868 years.

A Charming View.

Dawley (to the house agent)—I thought you said there was a charming view from the front windows. Why, there are only houses to be seen. House Agent—So there is a charming view, sir. In the house opposite lives the most beautiful widow you ever clapped eyes on, and she's always at the window.—London Fun.

Habit.

Habit is our primal fundamental law. Habit and imitation—there is nothing more perennial in us than these two. They are the source of all working and all apprenticeship, of all practice and all learning, in the world.—Carlyle.

Cutting.

Mrs. Enpeck—I think Mr. Mahlstick paints such lovely pictures. I think that I shall have him paint portraits of Henry and me together. Mrs. Cutting—Oh, I didn't know that he painted battle pictures.

The Lesser Evil.

"I don't see how she could possibly be sillier—she giggles so constantly."

"Well, if she didn't giggle all the time she might talk, and perhaps that would be worse."

Her Wide Experience.

Dottie—I wonder if a blond is more attractive to men than a brunette? Lottie—Ask Tottie; she's been both.—Cleveland Leader.

Grant me, O Father, enough of wisdom to live well. Prosperity to live easily grant me not, as thou seest best.—Carlyle.

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

THE GUNS FOR CUBA.

CHAPTER I.

"The shore part must lie entirely with you, sir," said Capt. Kettle. "It's mixed up with the foreign enlistment act and the Alabama case, and a dozen other things which may mean anything between jail and confiscation, and my head isn't big enough to hold it. If you'll be advised by me, sir, you'll see a real first-class solicitor and stand him a drink and pay him down what he asks right there on the bar counter and get to know exactly how the law of this business stands before you stir foot in it."

"The law here in England," said the little man with a reminiscent sigh, "is a beastly thing to fall foul of; it's just wickedly officious and interfering; it's never done kicking you, once it's got a fair start, and you never know where it will shove out its ugly hoof from next. No, Mr. Gedge, give me the States for nice, comfortable law, where a man can buy it by the yard for paper money down, and straight pistol shooting is always remembered in his favor."

The young man who owned the steamship Sultan of Borneo tapped his blotting paper impatiently. "Stick to the point, Kettle. We're in England now and have nothing whatever to do with legal matters in America. As for your advice, I am not a fool; you can lay your ticket on it I know to an inch how I stand. And I may tell you this: the shipment is arranged for."

"I'd like to see us cleared," said Capt. Kettle, doubtfully.

"No one will interfere with the clearance. The Sultan of Borneo will leave here in coal, consigned to Havana. A private yacht will meet her at sea, and transship the arms out of sight of land."

"Tyne coal for Cuba? They'd get their coal there from Norfolk, Va. or else Welsh steam coal from Cardiff or Newport."

"It seems not. This contract was placed long before a ship was asked for to smuggle out the arms."

"Well, it looks fishy, anyway."

"I can't help that," said Gedge irritably. "I'm telling you the naked truth, and if truth, as usual, looks unlikely, it's not my fault. Now have you got any more objections to make?"

"No, sir," said Capt. Kettle, "none that I can see at present."

"Very well, then," said Gedge. "Do you care to sign on as master for this cruise, or are you going to cry off?"

"They'll hang me if I'm caught," said Kettle.

"Not they. They'll only talk big, and the British consul will get you clear. You bet they daren't hang an Englishman for mere smuggling in Cuba. And, besides, aren't I offering to raise your screw from £12 a month to £14 so as to cover the risk? However, you won't get caught. You'll find everything ready for you; you'll slip the rifles ashore; and then you'll steam on to Havana and discharge your coal in the ordinary humdrum way of business, and there's a 10-pound bonus if you pull the thing off successfully. Now, then, captain, quick—you go or you don't?"

"I go," said Kettle, gloomily. "I'm a poor man, with a wife and family, Mr. Gedge, and I can't afford to lose a berth. But it's that coal I can't swallow. I quite believe what you say about the contract; only it doesn't look natural. And it's my belief the coal will trip us up somewhere before we've done, and bring about trouble."

"Which of course you are quite a stranger to?" said Gedge silly.

"Don't taunt me with it, sir," said Capt. Kettle. "I quite well know the kind of a brute I am; trouble with a crew or any other set of living men at sea is just meat and drink to me, and I'm bitterly ashamed of the taste. Every time I sit underneath our minister in the chapel here in South Shields I grow more ashamed. And if you heard the beautiful poetical way that man talks of peace, and green fields, and golden harps, you'd understand."

"Yes, yes," said Gedge; "but I don't want any of your excellent minister's sermons at second hand just now, captain, or any of your own poetry, thanks. I'm very busy. Good morning. Help yourself to a cigar. You haul alongside the coal shoots to get your cargo at 2 o'clock, and I'll be on board to see you at 6. Good morning." And Mr. Gedge rang for the clerk and was busily dictating letters before Kettle was clear of the office.

CHAPTER 11.

The little sailor went down the grimy stairs and into the street, and made toward the smelling Tyne. The black cigar rested unlit in an angle of his mouth, and he gnawed savagely at the butt with his eyeteeth. He cursed the fates as he walked. Why did they use him so evilly that he was forced into berths like these? As a bachelor, he told himself with a sneer, he would have jumped at the excitement of it. As the partner of Mrs. Kettle, and the father of her children, he could have shuddered when he threw his eyes over the future.

For a week or so she could draw his half pay and live sumptuously at the rate of seven pounds a month. But afterwards, if he got caught by some angry Spanish war steamer with the smuggled rifles under his hatches, and shot, or hanged, or imprisoned, or otherwise debarred from earning an income at his craft, where would Mrs. Kettle be then? Would Gedge do anything for her? He drew the cigar from his lips, and spat contemptuously at the bare idea. With the morality of the affair he troubled not one jot. The Spanish government and the Cuban rebels were two rival firms who offered different rates of freight according to the risk, and he was employed as carrier by those who paid the higher price. If there was any right or wrong about the question, it was a purely private matter between Mr. Gedge and his God. He, Owen Kettle, was as impersonal in the business as the ancient Sultan of Borneo herself; he was a mere cog in some complex machinery; and if he was earning heaven, it was by piety inside the chapel ashore, and not by professional exertions (in the interests of an earthly employer) elsewhere.

He took ferry across the filthy Tyne and walked down alleys and squalid streets where coal dust formed the mud and the air was sour with foreign vapors. And as he walked he champed still at the unlit cigar and brooded over the angularity of his fate. But when he passed between the gates of the dock company's premises and exchanged words with the policeman on guard, a change came over him. He threw away the cigar stump, tightened his lips and left all thoughts of personal matters outside the door sill. He was Mr. Gedge's hired servant; his brain was devoted to furthering Gedge's interests, and all the acid of his tongue was ready to spur on those who did the manual work on Gedge's ship.

Within a minute of his arrival on her deck the Sultan of Borneo was being unmoored from the bollards on the quay; within 10, her winches were clattering and bucking as they warped her across to the black, straddling coal shoots at the other side of the dock, and within half an hour the cargo was roaring down her hatches as fast as the railway wagons on the grimy trestle overhead could disgorge.

The halo of coal dust made day into dusk; the grit of it filled every cranny and settled as an amorphous scum on the water of the dock, and laborers hired by the hour toiled at piecework pace through sheer terror at their employer.

If his other failings could have been eliminated, this little skipper, with the red peaked beard, would certainly have been, from an owner's point of view, the best commander sailing out of any English port. No man ever wrenched such a magnificent amount of work from his hands. But it was those other failing which kept him what he was, the pitiful knockabout shipmaster, living from hand to mouth, never certain of his berth from one month's end to another.

That afternoon Capt. Kettle signed on his crew, got them on board, and with the help of his two mates kicked the majority of them into sobriety. He received a visit and final instructions from Mr. Gedge at 6 o'clock, and by nightfall he had filled in his papers, warped out of dock, and stood anxiously on the bridge watching the pilot as he took the steamboat down through the crowded shipping of the river. His wife stood under the glow of an arc lamp on the dockhead and waved him goodby through the gloom.

CHAPTER III.

Capt. Kettle received his first fright as he dropped his pilot just outside the Tyne pierheads. A man-of-war's launch steamed up out of the night, and the boarding officer examined his papers and asked questions. The little captain, conscious of having no contraband of war on board just then, was brutally rude, but the naval officer remained stolid, and refused to see the insults which were pitched at him. He had an unpalatable duty to perform; he quite sympathized with Kettle's feelings over the matter, and he got back to his launch thanking many stars that the affair had ended so easily.

But Kettle rang on his engines again with very unpleasant feelings. It was clear to him that the secret was oozing out somewhere; that the Sultan of Borneo was suspected; that his course to Cuba would be beset with many well-armed obstacles, and he forthwith made his first ruse out of the long succession which were to follow.

He had been instructed by Gedge to steam off straight from the Tyne to a point deep in the North sea, where a yacht would meet him to hand over the consignment of smuggled arms. But he felt the night to be full of eyes, and for a Havana-bound ship to leave the usual steam lane which leads to the English channel was equivalent to a confession of her purpose from the outset. So he took the parallel rulers and pencilled off on his chart the stereotyped course, which just clears Whitby rock and Flamboro head; and the Sultan of Borneo was held steadily along this, steaming at her normal nine knots; and it was not till she was out of sight of land off Humber mouth, and the sea chanced to be desolate, that he star-boarded his helm and stood off for the ocean rendezvous.

A hand on the foretopsail yard picked up the yacht out of the gray mists of dawn, and by eight bells they were lying hove-to in the trough, with 100 yards of cold gray water tumbling between them. The transshipment was made in two lifeboats, and Kettle went across and enjoyed an extravagant breakfast in the yacht's cabin. The talk was all upon the Cuban revolution. Carnforth, the yacht's owner, brimmed with it.

"If you can run the blockade, captain," said he, "and land these rifles and the maxims and the cartridges they'll be grateful enough to put up a statue to you. The revolution will end in a snap. The Spanish troops are half of them fever-stricken, and all of them discouraged. With these guns you are carrying the patriots can shoot their enemies over the edges of the island into the Caribbean sea. And there is no reason why you should get stopped. There are filibustering expeditions fitted out every week from Key West and Tampa and the other Florida ports, and one or two have even started from New York itself."

"But they haven't got through?" suggested Capt. Kettle.

"Not all of them," Mr. Carnforth admitted. "But then, you see, they sailed in schooners, and you have got steam. Besides, they started from the States, where the newspapers knew all about them, and so their arrival was cabled on to Cuba ahead; and you have the advantage of sailing from an English port."

"I don't see where the pull comes in," said Kettle gloomily. "There isn't a blessed country on the face of the globe more interfering with her own people than England. A Yankee can do as he darn well pleases in the filibustering line; but if a Britisher makes a move that way the blessed law here stretches out 20 hands and plucks him back by the tail before he's half started. No, Mr. Carnforth, I'm not sweet on the chances. I'm a poor man, and this means a lot to me; that's why I'm anxious. You're rich; you only stand to lose the cost of the consignment; and if that gets confiscated it won't mean much to you."

Carnforth grinned. "You pay my business qualities a poor compliment, captain. You can bet your life I had money down in hard cash before I stirred foot in the matter. The weapons and the ammunition were paid for at 50 per cent. above list prices, so as to cover the trouble of secrecy, and I got a charter for the yacht to bring the stuff out here which would astonish you if you saw the figures. No, I'm clear on the matter from this moment, captain, but I'll not deny that I shall take an interest in your future adventures with the cargo. Help yourself to a cigarette."

"Then it seems to me," said Kettle acidly, "that you'll look at me just as a hare set on to run for your amusement?"

The yacht owner laughed. "You put it brutally," he said, "but that's about the size of it. And if you want further truths, here's one: I shouldn't particularly mind if you were caught."

"How's that?"

"Because, my dear skipper, if the Spanish captured this consignment, the patriots would want another, and I should get the order. Whereas, if you land the stuff safely, it will see them through to the end of the war, and my chance of making further profit will be at an end."

"You have a very clear way of putting it," said Capt. Kettle.

"Haven't I? Which will you take, green chartreuse or yellow?"

"And Mr. Gedge? Can you tell me, sir, how he stands over this business?"

"O, you bet, Gedge knows when to come in out of the wet. He's got the old Sultan underwritten by the insurance and by the Cuban agents up to double her value, and nothing would suit his books better than for a Spanish cruiser to drop upon you."

"Very well," he said, "that's your side of the question. Now hear mine. That cargo's going through, and those rebels or patriots, or whatever they are, shall have their guns if half the Spanish navy was there to try and stop me. You and Mr. Gedge have started about this business the wrong way. Treat me on the square and I'm a man a child might handle, but I'd not be driven by the queen of England no, not with the emperor of Germany to help her."

"O, look here, captain," said Carnforth, "don't get your back up."

"I'll not trade with you," replied Kettle.

"You're a fool to your own interests."

"I know it," said the sailor grimly. "I've known it all my life. If I'd not been that I'd not have found myself in such shady company as there is here now."

"Look here, you ruffian, if you insult me I'll kick you out of this cabin and over the side into your own boat."

"All right," said Kettle "start in."

Carnforth half rose from his seat and measured Capt. Kettle with his eye. Apparently the scrutiny impressed him, for he sank back to his seat again with an embarrassed laugh. "You are an ugly little devil," he said.

"I'm all that," said Kettle.

"And I'm not going to play at rough and tumble with you here. We've neither of us anything to gain by it, and I've a lot to lose. I believe you'll run that cargo through now that you're put on your mettle, but I guess there'll be trouble for somebody before it's dealt out to the patriot troops. Gad, I'd like to be somewhere on hand to watch you do it."

"I don't object to an audience," said Kettle.

"By Jove, I've half a mind to come with you."

"You'd better not," said the little sailor with glib contempt. "You're not the sort that cares to risk his skin and I can't be bothered with dead-head passengers."

"That settles it," said Carnforth. "I'm coming with you to run that blockade, and if the chance comes, my cantankerous friend, I'll show you I can be useful. Always supposing, that is, we don't murder one another before we get there."

CHAPTER IV.

A white mist shut the channel sea into a ring, and the air was noisy with the grunts and screams of steamers' syrens. Capt. Kettle was standing on the Sultan of Borneo's upper bridge, with his hand on the engine-room telegraph, which was pointed at "full speed astern"; Carnforth and the old second mate stood with their chins over the top of the starboard dodge; and all three of them peered into the opalescent banks of the fog.

They had reason for their anxiety. Not five minutes before, a long lean torpedo catcher had raced up out of the thickness, and slowed down alongside with the channel spindrift blowing over her low superstructure in white hailstorms. An officer on the upper bridge in glistening oilskins had sent across a sharp authoritative hail, and had been answered, "Sultan of Borneo; Kettle, master; from South Shields to the Havana."

"What cargo?" came the next question.

"Coal."

"What?"

"Coal."

"Then Mr. Tyne Coal for the Havana, just heave to whilst I send away a boat to look at you. I fancy you will be the steamboat I'm sent to find and fetch back."

The decks of the uncomfortable warship had hummed with men, a pair of boat davits had swung outboard, and the boat had been armed and manned with naval noise and quickness. But just then a billow of the fog had driven down upon them, blanketlike in its thickness, which closed all human vision beyond the range of a dozen yards, and Capt. Kettle jumped like a terrier on his opportunity. He sent his steamer hard astern with a slightly ported helm, and whilst the torpedo catcher's boat was searching for him toward the French shore, and sending vain hails into the white banks of the mist, he was circling slowly and silenty round toward the English coast.

So long as the mist held the Sultan of Borneo was as hard to find as a needle in a cargo of hay. Did the air clear for so much as a single instant she would be noticed and stand self-confessed by her attempt to escape; and as a result the suspense was vivid enough to make Carnforth feel physical nausea. He had not reckoned on this complication. He was quite prepared to risk capture in Cuban waters, where the glamor of distance and the dazzle of helping insurrectionists would cast a glow of romance over whatever occurred. But to be caught in the English channel as a vulgar smuggler for the sake of commercial profit, and to be hauled back for hard labor in an English gaol, was a different matter. He was a member of parliament, and he understood these details in all their niceties.

But Capt. Kettle took the situation differently. The sight of the torpedo catcher stiffened all the doubt and limpness out of his composition, his eye brightened and his lips grew stiff; the scheming to escape acted on him like a tonic; and when an hour later the Sultan of Borneo was steaming merrily down channel at top speed through the same impenetrable fog the little skipper whistled dance music on the upper bridge and caught the notion for a most pleasing sonnet. That evening the crew came aft in a state of mild mutiny, and Kettle attended to their needs with gusto.

He prefaced his remarks by a slight exhibition of marksmanship. He cut away the vang which showed dimly on the foretopmast truck with a single bullet, and then, after dextrously reloading his revolver, lounged over the white rail of the upper bridge with the weapon in his hand.

He told the malcontents he was glad of the opportunity to give them his views on matters generally. He informed them genially that for their personal wishes he cared not one decimal of a jot. He stated plainly that he had got them on board, and intended by their help to carry out his owner's instructions whether they hated them or not. And finally he gave them his candid assurance that if any cur amongst them presumed to disobey the least of his orders, he would shoot that man neatly through the head without further preamble.

This elegant harangue did not go home to all hands at once, because being a British ship, the Sultan of Borneo's crew naturally spoke in five different languages, and few of them had even a working knowledge of English. But the look of Kettle's savage little face as he talked, and the red torpedo beard which wagged beneath it, conveyed to them the tone of his speech, and for a time they did not require a more accurate translation. They had come off big with the intention of forcing him (if necessary with violence) to run the steamer there and then into an English port; they went forward again like a pack of sheep, merely because one man had let them hear the virulence of his bark, and had shown them with what accuracy he could bite if necessary. "And that's the beauty of a mongrel crew," said Kettle complacently. "If they'd been English, I'd have had to shoot at least two of the beasts to keep my end up like that."

"You're a marvel," Carnforth admitted. "I'm a bit of a speaker myself, but I never heard a man with a gift of tongue like you have got."

"I am poisonous when I spread myself," said Kettle.

"I wish I was clear of you," said Carnforth, with an awkward laugh. "Whatever possessed me to leave the yacht and come on this cruise I can't think."

"Some people never do know when they're well off," said Kettle. "Well, sir, you're in for it now, and you may see things which will be of service to you afterwards. You ought to make your mark in parliament if you do get back from this trip. You'll have something to talk about that men will like to listen to, instead of merely chattering wind, which is what most of them are put to, so far as I can see from the papers. And now, sir, here's the steward come to tell us tea's ready. You go below and tuck in. I'll take mine on the bridge here. It won't do for me to turn my back yet awhile, or else those beasts forrard will jump on us from behind and murder the whole lot whilst we aren't looking."

CHAPTER V.

The voyage from that time onward was for Capt. Kettle a period of constant watchfulness. It would not be true to say that he never took off his clothes or never slept; but whether he was in pajamas in the chart house, or whether he was sitting on an upturned ginger beer case under the shelter of one of the upper bridge canvas dodgers, with his tired eyes shut and the red pecked beard upon his chest, it was always the same, he was ever ready to spring instantly upon the alert.

One dark night an iron belaying pin flew out of the blackness of the forecastle and whizzed within an inch of his sleeping head, but he roused so quickly that he was able to shoot the thrower through the shoulder before he could dive back again through the forecastle door. And another time when a powdering gale had kept him on the bridge for 48 consecutive hours, and a deputation of the deck hands raided him in the chart house on the supposition that exhaustion would have laid him out in a dead sleep, he woke before their fingers touched him, broke the jaw of one with a camp stool, and so maltreated the others with the same weapon, that they were glad enough to run away even with the exasperating knowledge that they left their task-master undamaged behind them.

So, although this all-nation crew of the Sultan of Borneo dreaded the Spaniards much, they feared Capt. Kettle far more, and by the time the steamer had closed up with the island of Cuba, they had concluded to follow out their skipper's orders, as being the least of the two evils which lay before them.

Carnforth's way of looking at the matter was peculiar. He had all a healthy man's appetite for adventure, and all a prosperous man's distaste for being wrecked. He had taken a strong personal liking for the truculent little skipper, and, other things being equal, would have cheerfully helped him; but on the other hand, he could not avoid seeing that it was to his own interests that the crew should get their way, and keep the steamer out of dangerous waters. And so, when finally he decided to stand by noninterferent, he prided himself a good deal on his forbearance, and said so to Kettle in as many words.

That worthy mariner quite agreed with him. "It's the very best thing you could do, sir," he answered. "It would have annoyed me terribly to have had to shoot you out of mischief's way, because you've been kind enough to say you like my poetry, and because I've come to see, sir, you're a gentleman."

They came to this arrangement on the morning of the day they opened out the secluded bay in the southern Cuban shore where the contraband of war was to be run. Kettle calculated his whereabouts with niceness, and, after the midday observation, lay the steamer to for a couple of hours, and himself supervised his engineers whilst they gave a good overhaul to the machinery. Then he gave her steam again, and made his landfall four hours after the sunset.

CHAPTER VI.

They saw the coast first as a black line running across the dim gray of the night. It rose as they neared it, and showed a crest fringed with trees, and a foot steeped in white mist, from out of which came the faint bellow of surf. Capt. Kettle, after a cast or two, picked up his marks and steamed in confidently, with his sidelights dowsed, and three red lanterns in a triangle at his foremast head. He was feeling pleasantly surprised with the easiness of it all.

But when the steamer had got well into the bight of the bay, and all the glasses on the bridge were peering at the shore in search of answering lights, a blaze of radiance suddenly flickered on to her from astern, and was as suddenly eclipsed, leaving them for a moment blinded by its dazzle. It was a long truncheon of light which sprouted from a glowing centre away between the heads of the bay, and they watched it sweep past them over the surface of the water, and then swept back again. Finally, after a little more dalliance, it settled on the steamer and lit her, and the ring of water on which she swam, like a ship in a lantern picture.

Carnforth swore aloud, and Capt. Kettle lit a fresh cigar. Those of the mongrel crew who were on the deck went below to pack their bags.

"Well, sir," said Kettle cheerfully, "here we are. That's a Spanish gunboat with searchlight, all complete"—he screwed up his eyes and gazed astern meditatively. "She's got the heels of us too; by about five knots I should say. Just look at the flames coming out of her funnels. Aren't they just giving her ginger down in the stokehold? Shooting will begin directly, and the other blackguards ashore have apparently forgotten all about us. There isn't a light anywhere."

"What are you going to do?" asked Carnforth.

"Follow out Mr. Gedge's instructions sir, and put this cargo on the beach. Whether the old Sultan goes there too, remains to be seen."

"That gunboat will cut you off in a quarter of an hour if you keep on this course."

"With that extra five knots she can do as she likes with us, so I shan't shift my helm. It would only look suspicious."

"Good Lord!" said Carnforth, "as if our being here at all isn't suspicion itself."

But Kettle did not answer. He had, to use his own expression, "got his wits working under forced draft," and he could not afford time for idle speculation and chatter. It was the want of the answering signal ashore which upset him. Had that showed against the black background of hills he would have known what to do.

Meanwhile the Spanish warship was closing up with him hand over fist, and decision was necessary. Anyway the choice was a poor one. If he surrendered he would be searched, and with that damning cargo of rifles and machine guns and ammunition under his hatches, it was not at all improbable that his captors might string him up out of hand. They would have right on their side for doing so.

The insurrectionists were not "recognized belligerents"; he would stand as a filibuster confessed; and as such would be due to suffer under that rough and ready martial law which cannot spare time to feed and jail prisoners.

On the other hand, if he refused to heave to the result would be equally simple; the warship would sink him with her guns inside a dozen minutes; and, reckless daredevil though he might be, Kettle knew quite well there was no chance of avoiding this.

With another crew, he might have been tempted to lay his old steamer alongside the other and try to carry her by boarding and sheer hand-to-hand fighting; but, excepting for those on watch in the stokehold, his present set of men were all below packing their belongings into portable shape, and he knew quite well that nothing would please them better than to see him discomfited. Carnforth was neutral; he had only his three mates and the engineer officers to depend upon in all the available world; and he recognized, between deep drafts at his cigar, that he was in a very tight place.

Still the dark shore ahead remained unbeaconed, and the Spaniard was racing up astern, lit for battle, with her crew at quarters, and guns run out and loaded. She leapt nearer by fathoms to the second, till Kettle could hear the panting of her engines as she chased him down. His teeth chewed on the cigar butt, and dark rings grew under his eyes. He could have raged aloud at his impotence.

The war steamer ranged up alongside, slowed to some 40 revolutions so as to keep her place, and an officer on the top of her charthouse hailed in Spanish.

"Gunboat ahoy," Kettle bawled back; "you must speak English or I can't be civil to you."

"What ship is that?"

"Sultan of Borneo, Kettle, master, Out of Shields."

"Where for?"

"The Havana."

Promptly the query came back: "Then what are you doing in here?"

Carnforth whispered a suggestion. "Fresh water run out; condenser water given all hands dysentery; put in here to fill up tanks."

"I thank you, sir," said Kettle in the same undertone, "I'm no hand at lying myself, or I might have thought of that before." And he shouted the excuse across to the spokesman on the charthouse roof.

To his surprise they seemed to give weight to it. There was a short consultation, and the steamers slipped along the smooth black waters of the bay on parallel courses.

Have you got dysentery bad aboard?" came the next question.

Once more Carnforth prompted, and Kettle repeated his words: "Look at my decks," said he. "All my crew are below. I've hardly a man to stand by me."

There was more consultation among the gunboat's officers, and then came the fatal inquiry: "What's your cargo, captain?"

"O, coals," said Kettle resignedly.

"What? You're bringing Tyne coal to the Havana?"

"Just coals," said Capt. Kettle with a bitter laugh.

The tone of the Spaniard changed. "Heave to at once," he ordered, "whilst I send a boat to search you, Refuse, and I'll blow you out of water."

CHAPTER VII.

On the Sultan of Borneo's upper bridge Carnforth swore. "Eh-ho, skipper," he said, "the game's up, and there's no way out of it. You won't be a fool, will you, and sacrifice the ship and the whole lot of us? Come, I say, man, ring off your engines, or that fellow will shoot, and we shall all be murdered uselessly. I tell you, the game's up."

"By James!" said Kettle, "is it? Look there"—and he pointed with outstretched arm to the hills on the shore ahead. "Three fires!" he cried. "Two above one in a triangle, burning like Elswick furnaces among the trees. They're ready for us over yonder, Mr. Carnforth, and that's their welcome. Do you think I'm going to let my cargo be stopped after getting it this far?" He turned to the Danish quartermaster at the wheel, with his savage face close to the man's ear.

"Starboard," he said. "Hard over, you bung-eyed Dutchman. Starboard as far as she'll go."

The wheel engines clattered briskly in the house underneath, and the Sultan of Borneo's head swung off quickly to port. For eight seconds the officer commanding the gunboat did not see what was happening, and that eight seconds was fatal to his vessel. When the inspiration came he bubbled with orders, he starboarded his own helm, he rang "full speed ahead" to his engines, and ordered every rifle and machine gun on his ship to sweep the British steamer's bridge. But the space of time was too small. The gunboat could not turn with enough quickness; on so short a notice the engines could not get her into her stride again; and the shooting, though well intentioned and prodigious in quantity, was poor in aim. The bullets whisped through the air and pelted on the plating like a hailstorm, and one of them flicked out brains of the Danish quartermaster on the bridge; but Kettle took the wheel from his hands, and a moment later the Sultan of Borneo's stem crashed into the gunboat's unprotected side just abaft the sponson of her starboard quarter gun.

The steamers thrilled like kicked biscuit boxes and a noise went up into the hot night sky as of 10,000 boiler makers, all heading up their rivets at once.

On both ships the propellers stopped as if by instinct, and then in answer to the telegraph, the grimy collier backed astern. But the war steamer did not move. Her machinery was broken down. She had already got a heavy list towards her wounded side, and every second the list was increasing as the sea water poured in through the shattered plates. Her crew was buzzing with disorder. It was evident that the vessel had but a short time longer to swim, and their lives were sweet to them. They had no thought of vengeance. Their weapons lay deserted on the sloping decks. The grimy crews from the stokeholds poured up from below, and one and all they clustered about the boats with frenzied haste to see them floating in the water.

There was no more to be feared at their hands for the present.

Carnforth clapped Kettle on the shoulder in involuntary admiration. "By George," he cried, "what a daring little scoundrel you are! Look here, I'm on your side now if I can be of any help. Can you give me a job."

AN OMNIPRESENT POOR

"THE POOR SHALL NEVER CEASE OUT OF THE LAND."

NOVEL HELP SUGGESTIONS

How Communities and Individuals May Help to Improve the Lot of the Unfortunate—The Marriage of the Unfit Discussed in Strong Fashion—Would Have Law Passed to Prevent Marriage Menace to the State.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 9.—In this sermon the preacher makes novel suggestions showing how we as communities and as individuals may help to improve the lot of the unfortunate. The text is Deuteronomy xv, 11, "The poor shall never cease out of the land."

Turning to that valuable and suggestive edition of the Bible called the Red Letter Bible, I notice that this passage in Deuteronomy is printed in red, indicating that it was quoted by our Lord. It is astonishing how many of such passages there are, showing how close a student of the Scriptures Christ was. Guided by this reference in the Red Letter Bible, I find the circumstances under which Christ quoted the passage. It was at that feast when Mary broke the alabaster box of spikenard over Christ's feet. Judas said it was wasteful, as the ointment might have been sold and the money given to the poor, but Jesus said there were other opportunities of giving to the poor, for, said he, "The poor ye have always with you."

There were poor people during the Mosaic era. There were poor people during all the wealth and the splendor of the Solomonic reign. There were hovels and rags covered by the shadows of the magnificent Grecian temples. Poverty and guant want went begging for bread during the Roman triumphs, when Christ lived. There are poverty and rags and hunger now, and there will be poverty and want upon this old suffering world until the millennial dawn, when the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the seas. Poverty, haunting poverty, is everywhere.

We have to-day our poor in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America and in North America. We have them upon every island of the seas, in every town, village and city and farming country. We have an omnipresent poor. During all the centuries from the beginning this burden of poverty has been upon the shoulders of a large proportion of the race, calling for our sympathy and our help. How long will it be before the wisdom of our social philosophers and the commiseration of Christ's church take up the problem and searching for the causes of the affliction, find out how to remove them and remedy the misery. I know of no duty more urgent, and if we find out in studying the problem that in some cases poverty is the result of social evils let us go forward in God's name to eradicate them. May the Holy Spirit help up to preach an appropriate sermon on this Sabbath, following our annual Labor Day.

First among these evils I place the prenatal influences which help crowd our cities with the omnipresent poor. In this matter let us be brave and truthful. Let us not seal our lips and be silent on account of a mock modesty. It is better to have an inflammation opened and the wound drained, no matter how repulsive the odor, than to allow the disease to go on festering and eating its way into the vitals. There is many a danger more horrible than the surgeon's knife.

I was mightily impressed with this fact some time ago. I had always a horror of the surgeon's knife. I felt that a man had better resort to everything and anything rather than lie down upon an operating table. But some time ago the wife of one of my dearest church members telephoned me to come down to the hospital at once, as her husband was about to be operated on. I jumped on the car and went down and arrived just three minutes after the work had been begun. They had carried the patient into the operating room and were then giving him the anaesthetic. I paced up and down the hall, wondering what I should do. I felt that it was a critical and might be a fatal operation. Should I go in or should I not? I had always shunned the sight of the operating table because I feared the spectacle of the flowing blood. But as I walked up and down that hall I said to myself: "In all probability this operaton will be fatal. My friend will die within a few hours after he comes out of the anaesthetic. Will it not comfort him to know that I stood by his side during his time of trial?" So I said to one of the nurses, "Tell the doctor I should like to come in." He sent out word, "Come in." I have thanked God since that I went in. When that ulcer was opened, I saw then as I never realized before that a man should not fear a surgeon's knife which opened up a dangerous abscess nearly as much as he should fear the abscess which is not opened. Our friend's life was saved by the narrowest of margins because he flatly refused to be operated upon until death was literally clutching him by the throat.

Now, as there was a deadly disease eating into the vitals of my friend's body, so there is a deadly disease eating into the very heart of our social life. Thousands upon thousands of our cradles are infected by prenatal weaknesses and the evil results of ancestral sins. We must remember that the present generation is not responsible for all its poor. For, as most of us have inherited the physical looks of a father and a mother, a grandfather or a grandmother, so there are hosts of unfortunate children born into the world who from the cradle are doomed to a life of physical incompetency because mentally and physically tainted from birth. But though the law of heredity is inexorable, and though our poorhouses and hospitals are crowded with a lot of miserable creatures who are dragging out a suffering, an appalling existence because they were not the offspring of healthy parents, and though thousands of men and women who are not inmates of public institutions of charity are social parasite or dependents upon others for support through the same dire causes, yet the strange fact remains that respectable and refined society forbids its teachers to discuss these vital questions in public lest such a discussion should offend delicate and sensitive ears.

Is the offending of delicate ears to stand in the way of untold agonies that are cursing childhood because men and women are allowed to marry who have no business to marry? Are the wards of our public institutions to be boycotted by all intelligent men and women because they do not wish to see suffering in its most repulsive forms? Shall we refuse to look at little children, born with curvature of the spine and with diseased blood and with crooked limbs, who, with swollen lips and distorted and malformed features, are looking at us from hundreds of cots—shall we refuse merely because these little sufferers have inherited the physical weaknesses of their parents? What right had the parents of these suffering children to marry? Some time ago I attended a church wedding where the bride hobbled up the aisle on a cane. She had an abscess on one limb and was afflicted with tuberculosis besides. She had been an invalid from birth. Her mother had died of consumption only a few months after the girl was born. And yet the minister of that church ended his service with the solemn words, "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." Are we to suppose that God meant such a woman as that to marry and perpetuate misery and suffering in the world?

"Well," some one says, "how can you stop men and women who are physical incompetents from marrying." By doing what every intelligent physician in the world is advocating—by making it obligatory upon every man and woman to pass a proper physical examination before they can get from the county a license to marry. In old Sparta it used to be the custom for the attendants to kill at birth children that were born cripples or weaklings. We cannot do that. Such a custom would be abhorrent to our feelings. But we can do better. We can prevent feeble children from being born of physically incompetent parents by refusing to let physically unsound men and women marry at all. Water cannot rise higher than its source. A strong branch cannot grow from a withered trunk. Neither can a physically and mentally healthy child descend from unhealthy parents.

The first reformation of our social evils should be pathological. It should be a sweeping diagnosis and should start with a sound physical marriage altar. It should extend our immigration laws—namely, the laws which allow little children to come into the world among ourselves, rather than the immigration laws which prevent leprous children and their parents to come from other lands into ours. Prenatal causes may be just as far reaching in their social results as postnatal. A child must be born well in order to live physically well.

Now comes the practical question. Are we as intelligent Americans going to care for our neighbors' children, born in filth and dirt? Are we going to give them public parks and public playgrounds and free bathing places and free docks, where the poor can get a breath of the sea air in the hot summer months? Are we going to furnish them model tenement houses, properly ventilated and lighted and with healthy sanitary plumbing? These are vital questions which the American people must solve. These are not luxuries which the poor are demanding, but necessities. And if the poor do not have these physical necessities, then they will pay us back in our own coin. For filth and darkness and vitiated air always breed crime and drunkenness and licentiousness and brutality and sins of all sorts. As the black plagues of Europe always started from the vile stenchful quarters of the congested cities of the east, so the plagues of debauchery and ignorance and crime thrive best in the filthy quarters of the poor of our large cities, where the sunlight cannot get into the homes and where the little children have no parks or playgrounds in which they may develop healthfully, as all children should develop.

Furthermore, I was struck with another fact when reading about the physical necessities of the poor. The poor are not paupers, as we conceive paupers. The poor are willing and able to pay a just return for their necessities. But the trouble is when a man becomes poor then he becomes helpless. Then the capitalist robs him of the little he has, however small that all may be. That is the way the capitalists treats the poor of our large cities. When he sells the poor man his coal, he sells it by the shovelful, and he sells it at a ruinous price. He charges the poor man three times the price at which he sells it by the ton to the rich man. When he builds the poor man his miserable hovel the capitalist usually gets 30, 40, 60 and even 100 per cent. on his money invested. A dog or a wild beast would not live in some of the filthy dens in which the poor of New York used to be housed. And yet for every one of those dark cellars and back rooms in which the sunlight never comes the capitalist would charge the most astounding rent and, like a modern Shylock, demand his pound of flesh nearest to his victim's heart because the poor man could not help himself. As Solomon said long ago, "The destruction of the poor is their poverty." They are kept poor by being poor.

But we must give our poor more than clean cradles and decent homes and sunlight. We must give the children of our poor neighbors an education whereby they shall be able to work intelligently with their hands, or else Satan will come in and teach them how to work in another way. In other words, the poor must be taught how to earn their own living, or else they will learn how to live upon the moneys some one else has earned.

But we must not stop here in our work among the poor. We must give them sunlight. We must open their eyes to see and teach their hands to do. We must also surround them with moral and spiritual influences for good. If possible we must continue to do as Dr. Barnardo and Gen. Booth have done and as their disciples are doing to-day—that is, as far as possible we must colonize the poor of our large cities and send them away into the pure, sweet, wholesome life of the country.

Why a poor man wants to live in a city is inconceivable to me. Where there is work for one man in a large city there are five applicants for the position. In 1888 there were 79,000 deaths in the city of London; 10,170 took place in the public workhouses, 7,113 in public hospitals and 380 in public asylums. This made in all 17,662 paupers who died that year in London. In other words, at least one-fifth of all the people dying in London in one year were dependent upon public charity. The records of other cities are only a little better. There were over 600,000 paupers in 1888 in England alone. But to-day one out of every ten persons who die in New York city is buried in potter's field. That means when they die they leave not an estate large enough even to pay for the pine box which covers them and the hire of the hearse which drags them to their grave nor the fee of the gravedigger who digs the hole in which the coffin is lowered. One-tenth of all the population which die in New York city are buried in potter's field. Now, Dr. Barnardo and Gen. William Booth intelligently recognized these social conditions, and they sent forth their colonists by the thousands and the tens of thousands.

Thank God, I say, for a Dr. Barnardo. In the winter nights he roamed about the London streets gathering the raggedest and most forlorn of boys and girls into his public orphanage. But no sooner had he collected them there than he sent them out by almost every steamer to the farthermost colonies. There they were adopted. There, amid the pure, sweet influence of the country, the boys and the girls of the London slums became the noble Christian men and women of the farm and country village. Dr. Barnardo saved the man by colonizing the boy, while Gen. Booth sent his Salvation Army soldiers into the city slums and gathered the men and the women together and took them out of their surroundings and placed them upon the farms and saved them also. Thus, my brother, you and I should embrace every means we can find to take a boy or a girl or a man or a woman out of the overcrowded city and send them out to the soil, out into the farming regions. Then we are doing God's work as Dr. Barnardo did it and William Booth is doing it to-day.

But we must do more than simply colonize our boys and girls in country places. We must carry the institutional church into our poor districts and fight sin on its own ground. The simple fact is that many of our churches are going to pieces simply because the people do not have enough to do. The congregations listen to sermons, but do not work for Christ.

When Jacob Riis started in his long ten years' war to give playgrounds to the children of the congested east and west sides of New York he could not find enough room for the poor, even though millions of dollars' worth of buildings were condemned and turned into public playgrounds. Then a happy idea struck him. "Why can we not turn the roofs of our public schools into playgrounds for children?" "Absurd," said the politicians. "Absurd," said the teachers. "Absurd," said almost every one. But Jacob Riis kept on, and now the roofs of many of those public school buildings have been turned into playgrounds for the scholars. At last the common people have come to learn that a magnificent school building is not to be kept idle all the time with the exception of the few hours when school is in session. The public school buildings are now used for public libraries and public lectures and public concerts and public playgrounds. Why cannot our church learn the same lesson?

The churches are gradually deserting the poorer sections of our cities not because they are not needed there, but because they do not do their duty as they ought to do it. The poor of our large cities need a church building for something more than a place where they shall attend a divine service once or twice on the Sabbath day. They need a church building where men and women can come and find Christian fellowship and help in social intercourse. They need a church building where poor mothers can come and leave their babies while they themselves go out for a day's work. They need a church building for an intelligence office and a dispensary. They need a church building where a man or a woman can go in all times of trouble and always find it a "temple of refuge." Oh, why do we not as Christian people grasp the gospel opportunity and go back into the poorer sections of the city and teach women how to sew and how to keep the babies clean and teach ignorant, tired men how to work as well as how to pray and to sing and to listen to God's word?

I want you to realize that Christ was preaching a practical gospel sermon when he told the Pharisee the parable of the good Samaritan. I want you to remember that Christ meant just what he said when he took a little child in his lap and said, "It is better for you that a millstone were hanged about your neck and that you were drowned in the midst of the sea rather than that you offend one of these little ones." I have tried to show you that even among the lowest and the vilest of outcasts you can find some whom you can lead to Christ if you will only go after them. And thus, my friend, on this beautiful Christian Sabbath day I invite you to help bridge over the ever widening chasm that is separating the rich man from the poor man and the so-called respectable man from the social outcast by throwing across it the strong, broad, central beam of the cross of Christ's sacrifice. Will you become a brother to the poor in a practical way, as Christ did during his earthly ministry?

The Sleeves of Winter

No sooner does one mention winter than one begins to think of the new winter sleeves. Shall they be long or shall they be short? These are questions more harrowing than a study of the international peace conference. The matter has been solved in various ways.

One writer says that there will be short sleeves and that these sleeves will be much trimmed above the elbow. Another insists that the new sleeves are to be long. Judging from French standards they will be short, though not above the elbow.

A famous French man dressmaker, one of those wonderful personages who decides the styles for the coming season, has this to say about the winter sleeves:

"Young women, and all beautiful women, will wear the short sleeves. The long sleeve will be left to those women whose physical peculiarities are such that it is not becoming, or to elderly women who cannot stand the weather. But all young women who aim at smartness will wear the elbow sleeve, which will be much puffed at the shoulder.

"Women like the short sleeve because it is so very becoming to the hand and arm. It displays the fashionable bracelet and the jeweled bangle. And they like it because it is dressy. The long sleeve, unless of very handsome material, is not a dressy sleeve.

"We are making our very new sleeves puffed at the shoulder in exceedingly large puffs which extend almost to the elbow. They are trimmed at the elbow with lace in the form of two or three ruffles.

"There is a style that is very pretty. The sleeve is cut off at the elbow and the lace ruffles do not overhang it. But they are placed upon the sleeve so as to trim it. One is set three inches above the other, coming up almost as high as the shoulder.

"There are long sleeves, but these are of very thin material and are crumpled from the elbow to the wrist. They are very full and they are finished at the wrist with a very little jeweled trimming. There is, upon these long sleeves, a point which which comes down between the knuckles. This style of sleeve is becoming to the exceedingly thin arm.

Great Storm Off Bermuda.

Buncoed the Widow.

Paris, Sept. 7.—There are pleasanter ways of getting wealth than by means of a "jimmy" and a chunk of dynamite. So thought Raoul Bachillie, a well known Parisian burglar, nicknamed the "Red Prince" by the police because of his auburn hair and his dashing ways with women.

Madam Rosa Cotillon is a romantic widow of uncertain age. Her husband, a university professor, left her a little fortune of some $20,000 in gold securities. Madam advertised for a position as governess in an aristocratic family. In answer there came to her flat a handsome and well-dressed young man who proceeded to make many inquiries. He said he represented others and would give favorable reports of her. The young man came again, but this time made love to the widow. She asked him anxiously about the post of governess and then he said he would confess. He did not seek a governess, but a wife. He was a wealthy Roumanian, with a princely estate and a castle for which he desired a bride. His father and mother were old and desired to leave all affairs to him as soon as he married. They had come with him to Paris to choose a bride for him, and had answered madam's advertisement to see if she perchance would suit him. And she did, for he fell in love with her at first sight.

The widow made many protests, but the young man seemed loving, and always had an argument for all her protestations. Finally when he asked her to call on the morrow on his father and mother she agreed to do so and decide whether she would accept him afterwards. Next day she called at the address in the Rue de Bellefond and entered a most luxurious room, where she was introduced to an old and seemingly worthy couple, who were very fashionably dressed. They embraced her and said she would make an ideal mistress of the castle. So it was settled. The romantic widow accepted the ardent lover. The marriage was to take place in Roumania, and the bride-to-be started to get her trousseau.

The lover would allow no delay. Within the week they must start. And so the widow packed her trunks. The day before the date of departure the lover suggested that the widow change her securities into Roumanian money in Paris, for he said she would get much more for them here than in Roumania. The widow agreed, and as she was fearfully busy with dressmakers, suggested that her lover attend to the matter for her. He agreed and there was a fond embrace and the lover then started off with the securities. He is not back yet.

Charity begins at home but it is apt to be out when anybody calls.

It takes longer to find out some men than it does others, but in the end they are all found out.

MISS MARY T. MEYER.

Executive Clerk of the Democratic City Committee of Boston.

As executive clerk of the Democratic city committee of Boston Miss Mary T. Meyer holds a position that means far more than the rather high sounding title. It means that through the possession of that splendid trait—discretion—she has risen from a simple clerical position to be the confidant of men prominent in politics and to make herself sufficiently useful to command a large salary.

Miss Meyer was born in Malden and educated in the public schools of West Roxbury. While still a schoolgirl she entered the consolidated office of the Democratic state and city committees to do the simplest clerical work during campaign times. Her pleasant manner and quick understanding of the requirements made her a favorite in the office, and when her school days were over she was offered a permanent position.

MISS MARY T. MEYER.

In 1896, when the two committees separated, she went with the city politicians to their new quarters. Year by year Miss Meyer had grown in usefulness and is now a seasoned politician, whose opinion upon affairs carries much weight. During her association with this office she has enjoyed the friendship of such men as Henry C. Thatcher, William E. Russell, Colonel J. W. Coveney, Henry R. Reed, Robert M. Burnett and the Hon. John H. Sullivan.

Miss Meyer, although deeply interested in politics, is by no means desirous of suffrage and rather expresses herself against granting the ballot to women, for although her duties have brought her in daily contact with many men and broadened her ideas she still believes that home is the sphere of the average woman.—Boston Traveler.

The Wife's Income.

It does not seem to me consistent for a man to say at the marriage altar, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," and four months later make it necessary for his wife to use diplomacy to get 60 cents from him to pay the milkman. The husband who dolorously doles out dollars under protest on the installment plan to meet family expenses is viewing home in a wrong perspective. Many men who pride themselves on the care they take of their families feel that in permitting their wives to "run bills" at certain stores they have done all that is necessary. But a store account is not cash; it is not negotiable; you cannot buy tickets for a concert and have them charged on the coal bill or put an extra trolley ride with the children on dry goods store accounts. Some women rather than submit to the humiliation of "asking for money" from their husbands do without little things that would add greatly to their happiness, says the Delineator. Others, after studying their husbands' moods as a mariner watches the weather, by policy, flattery, wheedling or other artifice secure as a concession what should be given them as a right. Others stint on the housekeeping money, save at the expense of their own energy, health or strength in order to get a little money of their own.

One's Serene Little World.

A woman I know is counted poor among her friends. She has little or no money, no health, much love, one sunshiny window and a plant or two. Each one with whom she began life has grown rich, occupying great and important places, outstripping her like a gay procession that sweeps by one who has fallen discomfited by the wayside. Sometimes the woman has compared her lot and rebelled, as she herself has told me. She, too, has cried out for the meaning of it all, the secret of her own failure and their success. "Why, why, why?" she has moaned in despair. "What ought I to do, how ought I to have done?" The other day she came to see me. I saw a new light in her eyes and saw that she had found strength.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Only this," she answered. "I've studied into it all and thought. Their world is not my world nor my world theirs, and I can do nothing to change it. One thing, though, I can do. Small as it is, I can make my little world serene."—Lillie Hamilton French in Harper's Bazar.

Poor Equipment Never Economical.

That which we would emphasize for the benefit of niggardly husbands or conservative wives is the bad economy of inferior equipment on the railroad, in the mill or in the home. Inadequate apparatus is oftentimes highly extravagant. It costs not merely in time and comfort, but in health and doctors' bills. The housewife's nerves and happiness are of more value than the little margin of saving in delayed purchase of the right utensils. The servant problem will be robbed of many of its terrors when our maids are lodged and equipped as they should be. It is wonderful what $40 or $20 or $10 will achieve now in transforming the household laboratory and putting the housework on a new and easier plane. Men, give your wives and their assistants as good machinery at least as you put in the hands of the toilers in your mills and offices. "Any old thing" will not serve your best interests in the hands of the latter. Even less should it be imposed upon the more highly prized workers at home.—Good Housekeeping.

Diet For the Complexion.

A beauty specialist the other day well versed in the laws of hygiene said: "No wine or spirits, no beer, no tea, plenty of fruit, eating an apple first thing in the morning and a tumbler of water the last thing at night." Plenty of vegetables of the more common sort were recommended as wholesome, such as carrots, cabbage, beet root, watercress and similar simple fare. White meats, and not too much of them, and plenty of fish are enjoined and no highly spiced or cooked up dishes. Above all, we are to pay attention to the bath; a tepid one must be taken daily. A little common vinegar is not bad in it, with sage leaves soaked therein. Some salt is another good thing, and a few drops of tincture of myrrh.—Boston Transcript.

Rag Carpet Rugs.

Rag carpets have been made and used in farmhouses for many years, but never before have they become so popular in city as well as country homes. The rag rugs of today are not only serviceable, but pretty. They are a good covering for the bedroom, living room and porch. If the rags are sewed at home they should be new and carefully selected as to color. They can be woven in any length, with a border and fringe at each end. Another useful rug is the crochet one, which can be made entirely at home. Any of these rugs may be washed.

Corned Beef.

After cooking corned beef let it stand in the liquor it was cooked in until it is thoroughly cold or ready to serve. It will then be found much richer and more tender than if it was taken immediately from the liquor and set away on a platter. If the corned beef is to be eaten hot put it in the cold liquor after removing it from the dining table. It is, however, always a coarse dish when served hot, but is at its best when it is allowed to stand in its own liquor—the water it was cooked in—for twenty-four hours before serving.

Clogged Drain Pipes.

To clean out a clogged sink drain pipe take a piece of garden hose, fasten one end to the faucet (hot water one if you have it), the other end put down the drain pipe three or four inches, packing cloth around it to make it airtight; then open the faucet and let the water run full force for two or three minutes. Sometimes it is necessary to put potash dissolved in water into the pipe before putting in the hose.

The Turned In Collar.

A turned in collar, whether of a shirt waist or the waist to a dress, is not becoming, no matter how comfortable it may be, and the woman who is particular about her appearance when she is working about the house in the morning will wear the neat little turnover collars that are neat and at the same time comfortable. Or better still are the little homemade collars made out of handkerchiefs.

Bodice or Blouse Collars.

Not a few home dressmakers overlook the fact that when putting on a collar the neck of the bodice or blouse should be slightly smaller than the base of the collar band and the bodice notched here and there while putting the collar on. By doing this wrinkles are avoided.

Olives.

Where a large bottle of olives is opened and only a part of them used the remainder, though left in the brine, become comparatively tasteless. To avoid this pour half an inch of olive oil on the top and cork well. The olives will then retain their flavor indefinitely.

Candles.

Candles treated as follows will not melt and run down while burning: Make a thick lather of soap and water. Take one candle at a time and cover with the thick foam. Wipe off what you can with the moist hand and lay away to dry.

A pretty novelty for a country house hall is a miniature belfry, with a thatched roof and a brass or copper cowbell. A heavy strip of leather sways the bell, which may be used for dinner calls or the rising summons.

After blankets have been washed and hung on the line and are thoroughly dry beat with a carpet beater. They will become soft and light and the wool like new.

Old felt hats will make good lampwicks and give a bright light. Care must be taken to cut them the exact width of the wick.

The finest polish given the most costly piano can be entirely ruined by the direct rays of the sun.

SHE WINS FRIENDS.

The Woman Who Takes an Interest In Other People's Lives.

The secret of getting along with everybody and having a good time wherever you go is to like people and to take an interest in their lives. It does not matter whether it is a princess or a serving maid, a statesman or a farmer whom you are thrown with for a few minutes or a few hours; find out the main interest of the life you have met, and talk about that, and you will interest yourself and your hearer too.

This human nature lover is a separate and distinct individual from the man who calls himself a student of human nature. This student looks at his neighbors usually through a quizzing glass, and continually takes inventory of their vices, defects and weaknesses. The other person comes to his or her fellows with love in the heart, and in her mind the one thought: "We are brothers and sisters. What can I do for you?" She cares only and looks only for the grand human sentiments in the heart of each man or woman she meets, says Woman's Life.

And somehow she finds them. Be the quantity great or infinitesimally small, she calls it out. She has friends everywhere. People love her, believe and confide in her. Why? Because she loves, believes in and takes an interest in everybody.

PASTEURIZED MILK.

Simple Home Method of Securing Safe Food For Babies.

Pasteurized milk is that which has been heated to a temperature of between 155 and 170 degrees and kept at that temperature from ten to thirty minutes before being rapidly cooled and put on ice.

It may seem strange that a lower temperature than the boiling point should be the one selected, but bacteria which cause milk to sour are killed at 155 degrees, and the disease germs which are likely to be present are destroyed at 170 degrees.

For the mother who wishes to pasteurize at home, the simplest and (with care) a safe method is to place the milk in glass jars, fill a pail with boiling water and place the jars in this. The water should come nearly to the top of the jars and above the milk.

Set the pail in a warm place and stir the milk occasionally. The milk is heated to the desired degree before the water is lowered to the pasteurizing temperature. Lastly and most important, cool the milk by running cold water into the pail, then stopper quickly and set on ice.

Remember that pasteurized milk may easily become contaminated again, and only proper care can insure its remaining sterile.—Good Housekeeping.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Colored goods should be ironed on the wrong side.

A little borax in the last rinsing water will make handkerchiefs easier to iron and look better when done.

Never pin delicate materials on to the clothes line without placing a piece of clean paper between the fabric and the clothes pin.

When coarse lawns or other cottons fade white a dainty pink color can be given them by using the petals of an old artificial rose in the starch water when laundered.

By putting an ounce of sal ammoniac in the last water in which muslins or cottons are rinsed or a similar quantity in the starch in which they are stiffened they will be rendered uninflammable.

When the water is too muddy to whiten the clothes it can be cleared very quickly by stirring in a little corn meal. The meal will go to the bottom as soon as it is thoroughly wet and will carry the solid particles with it.

Home Cosmetics.

Home cosmetics are all very well, but there are some preparations that the amateur cosmetic muddler should not attempt. Such things as hair dyes, depilatories and face bleaches are beyond her ken. You can purchase depilatories that will remove the growth of hair from the arms, but, of course, the removal is only for the time being. The chances are that the fuzzers will return very soon, and instead of soft, downy hair they will be ugly little bristles. This is because the preparation merely burns the wretched things down to the surface of the skin. Unless the growth is most unsightly it is best not to meddle with it. Others won't notice it as you do yourself.

Care of Baby's Ears.

Few mothers and fewer nurses notice when they lay a baby down whether the soft little ear is crumpled under or lying close back to the head. They rarely take the trouble when they hold a baby to see that its ears are in a natural position, but will hold it for the longest time with the head pressed against their bosom and the ear turned forward instead of back. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined" applies with as much force to the physical as to the moral growth of a child.

For Dry Hair.

For dry hair try this recipe: Forty-eight grains of resorcin, one-fourth ounce of glycerin, diluted alcohol to fill a two ounce bottle. Apply to scalp every night, rubbing in well. This is excellent for dandruff. When there are pimples on the scalp apply a solution of boric acid. Scalp massage and electricity are advisable for hair that is falling. They stimulate blood vessels and glands, thus giving fresh vigor to a fagged "glory crown."

MILLINERY OPENING!

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Takes pleasure in announcing to the public that her Millinery Opening takes place on Monday, Sept. 10th, and following days, to which all are cordially welcome.

This will be one of the finest Millinery displays ever shown by Miss Campbell, and all should take this opportunity of seeing this grand display.

MISS M. CAMPBELL.

Doctor Prentice System

On and after Monday, the 10th Sept., we will be prepared to make appointments and examinations, as well as fitting the "Prentice Lens" by the "Prentice System," for any parties who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity to get the wonderful help this special system affords, not only in the relief of vision, but in the cure of many distressing nervous diseases produced by Brain Strain through the visual centres. We have had not only five weeks of personal instructions from Dr. Prentice, but have been his assistant in the examination and fitting of hundreds of the most difficult and complicated cases, with very gratifying results to the parties concerned, and as we are aware there are many people who were anxious to consult him, but have not been able to do so, we feel confident we can give them the same satisfactory results. Consultation free. Appointments made to suit the parties concerned.

Disastrous Fire at The Carrying Place

A disastrous fire occurred yesterday afternoon at the Carrying Place, which is situated at the head of the bay and near the Murray Canal. The blaze started in an old blacksmith's shop, which had recently been used as a storehouse, and before it was extinguished the Methodist church, a roughcast structure, two brick houses and some sheds were consumed. Messrs. Hy. Hayes and Sidney Bowen were the owners and occupants of the houses burned.

The losses and insurances, if any, we were unable to learn.

Died Following Slight Operation.

BRUCE BRISTOL, SON OF WELL-KNOWN MADOC STORE-KEEPER.

Toronto, Sept. 10.— Undergoing a slight operation for throat trouble, Bruce Bristol, son of a well-known merchant of Madoc, Hastings county, died in the surgery of his physician on Saturday morning. The youth came to Toronto on Saturday morning, and, accompanied by his sister and aunt, went to prepare for the operation. He was under the influence of the anaesthetic when he suddenly collapsed and died, despite the efforts of four well-known doctors. No blame is laid on the operating surgeon, who exercised the greatest care. Undertaker Alex. Millard shipped the remains to Madoc for interment. Deceased was seventeen years old.

Kingston's New Rector.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 9. — Rev. Canon Farthing, rector of new St. Paul's Church, this city, has received and accepted a call to the rectorship of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston. Rev. Mr. Farthing is one of the best known Anglican clergymen, and has before been mentioned in connection with several high positions in the church.

At this morning's service Canon Farthing announced that he had accepted the call, and will take up his duties in Kingston shortly. His removal from Woodstock will mean a loss to the city. He was mainly instrumental in establishing Woodstock hospital, was a prominent Free Mason, and was intensely public-spirited.

Sad Drowning Accident On Sunday Afternoon.

WILLIAM F. BAKER, OF MARLBANK, IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE TAKEN CRAMPS WHILE BATHING.

A sad drowning accident occurred on Sunday afternoon near the village of Plainfield, which is about 10 miles from this city.

The victim was William F. Baker, aged 12 years, whose father, Mr. John Baker, resides at Marlbank, in the township of Hungerford.

It appears that young Baker went in bathing, and it is thought that he was seized with cramps and sank in some eight feet of water.

The body was recovered a short time after the unfortunate affair, but there was no signs of life.

It was taken to the residence of Mr D. Poucher, near by, where it was prepared for burial. Later in the evening it was taken to the parents' home

Whether young Baker was visiting or working at Plainfield we were unable to ascertain. All agree that he was a fine young man, respected by all who knew him.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFFRENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

John Street.

The pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, officiated at both services. In the evening his text was from Proverbs, 1st chapter, 7th verse;

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge, but fools despise wisdom and instruction."

During the service Mr. Piche sang a solo entitled, "Jesus Meek and Mild."

St. Andrew's.

Reopening services were held in this place of worship yesterday, after it had been closed up for a month. The pastor, Rev. R. S. Laidlaw, officiated and his discourses were much appreciated by the congregations. In the morning his subject was 'Joy in Worship," and the text was from the 122nd Psalm, 1st verse;

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Bridge Street.

"The Limit of Power" was the subject discussed last evening by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson. His text was from St. Mark, 14th chapter and 8th verse:

"She hath done what she could; she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying."

During the service Miss Gertie Price sang, with much sweetness, a solo entitled 'There is a Green Hill far Away."

Christ Church.

The rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, preached at both services. In the evening his subject was "Mutual Relations of Parents to Children and Children to Parents." His text was from 1st Samuel, 1st chapter, 27th and 28th verses.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

COMIC OPERA TO-MORROW NIGHT.

"Dolly Varden," that dainty musical success by the eminent composer, Julian Edwards," which has gained the most enduring fame of any comic opera presented in the last ten years, is perpetuated this season with Lillian Spencer in the title role, supported by an excellent organization, including a number of the original cast, and a chorus said to be one of the most powerful in vocal strength, and attractive in feminine beauty, assembled this year. There should be a record audience at the Carman to-morrow night, when dainty "Dolly Varden" makes her bow.

Trent Valley Canal.

Toronto, Sept. 10.— Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways and Canals, who spent Sunday in the city, left last night for Peterboro, where he will resume his tour of inspection of the Trent Valley Canal system. After threading the chain of lakes and waterways in the neighborhood of Peterboro, he intends proceeding through Lakes Simcoe and Couchiching. In accordance with the request of the Board of Trade, he will be at Orillia on Wednesday. The report of the surveys will be ready shortly, and at the conclusion of his tour Mr. Emmerson intends, with all the information before him, to take up the important matter of determining where the outlet of the canal shall be and will make an announcement upon the subject at the next session of Parliament.

On Friday last Mr. Emmerson, who is accompanied on his tour by Mr. M. J. Butler, Deputy Minister of Railways; Mr. Chris. B. Robinson, and Mr. F. McCourt, private secretaries, visited Port Colborne, and on Saturday he was at Campbellford, where he was entertained at a banquet.

Don't Be Backward

Do not hesitate to ask for a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. We are glad to give them to anyone who is troubled with billiousness, constipation or any disorder of the stomach. Many have been permanently cured by their use. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store.

Fire on St. Charles Street This Morning

At a few minutes before 2 o'clock this morning, a frame dwelling, situated on St. Charles street, was destroyed by fire. Miss Beatrice Ryan was the owner and occupant of the premises. When the fire was discovered the flames had gained considerable headway and some difficulty was experienced by the brigade in getting water. A piano and a few articles were saved. How the fire originated is not known. The loss will be considerable. There was an insurance of $600 upon the dwelling and contents, but this will by no means cover the loss.

Died at the Hospital.

On Saturday morning, Bessie Patrick, a young woman between 15 and 16 years of age, died at the hospital from an attack of typhoid fever. The home of the deceased was naer Trenton. The remains were taken to the undertaking rooms of Messrs. Sills and Consaul, whence the funeral took place yesterday afternoon, services being conducted by the Rev. C. H. Emerson. The interment took place at White's cemetery, Sidney township. The mother of the deceased is ill at the hospital from fever.

A Stray Horse.

A horse attached to a buggy was found wandering about the streets at a late hour on Saturday night. After being placed in a hotel stable the property was claimed by a Mr. Gray, who resides in the county.

Home Wedding.

On Saturday a quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James McCurdy, Moira street, The bride was their youngest daughter, Miss Ida, and the groom Mr. Herbert Daymon, of Toronto, Rev. G. H. Copeland, a former city minister, performed the ceremonny. The young couple were unattended. After a wedding breakfast had been partaken of, Mr. and Mrs. Daymon left for their future home in Toronto.

MASSACRE IN POLAND

Enraged Soldiers Retaliate on Jews and Kill Hundreds.

Drunken Reservists Started the Massacre—Riga, a Terrorist Hotbed, Ruled by the Reign of the Bomb, Which Spreads Through Russia—Exiles In Fearful Plight—M. P. Beaten by Soldiers.

Siedlie, Russian Poland, Sept. 10.—A massacre of police and soldiers began at 8 o'clock Saturday night. Immediately afterward the troops attacked the Jews.

All yesterday the soldiers have attacked civilians, Christians or Jews, robbing and murdering them without discrimination. Hundreds of persons were killed or wounded. Three streets were devastated.

It is reported that drunken reservists started the massacre.

Troops have surrounded the city and refuse access to it.

Reign of Bomb In Riga.

Riga, Sept. 10.—Three policemen were wounded, one fatally, by a bomb Saturday, thrown at a street railroad car. A patrol of troops was called, and fired a volley into the crowd, which collected, wounding one man mortally and three slightly.

A bomb was left Saturday by an unknown man in the office of The Conservative, a Lettish newspaper. One of the editors caught sight of the burning fuse and at once threw the bomb in a pail of water, thus saving the situation.

The band of revolutionary bank robbers, led by the well-known Lettis writer, Plekshan, who combined the functions of poet, sociologist and the bandit, have succeeded in escaping from the country.

Exiles In Pitiful Plight.

Saratov, Sept. 10.—The police Saturday arrested M. Kutamanoff, a member of the late Parliament, and ordered him forwarded by the Steape system, that is, afoot with a military escort as exiles to Siberia were formerly compelled to travel to jail at Belgorod. At the intercession of the cadet committee, however, he was permitted to travel by railroad.

Letters have been received here describing the privations of a party of 2,000 teachers, railroad men and technological scholars, exiled to Irkptsk. They say they are allowed less than a dollar a month for living expenses, which the most stringent economy amount to $5, and assert clothing of the exiles is in rags, their shoes destroyed and that they are famishing.

M. P. Beaten by Soldiers.

Warsaw, Sept. 10.—M. Ostroffsky, a member of the late Parliament, was arrested Saturday at the Village of Smardvevo, and severely beaten by soldiers.

In front of the Bristol, the principal hotel in Warsaw, troops Saturday killed two peddlers, who were suspected of being terrorists. Previous to this and after an exchange of shots the troops killed two revolutionists in the suburbs of Cracow. A policeman was mortally wounded.

Killed by Revolutionists.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 10.—Engineer Feodoroff, a director of a department of the Great Baltic Works, was attacked Saturday night by workmen and so badly wounded that he died a few hours later. The Baltic Works are a nest of revolutionists, and Feodoroff was hated on account of his refusal to countenance their propaganda.

Synagogue a Bomb Factory.

Kertsch, Sept. 10.—A bomb was exploded Saturday in the garret of the principal synagogue here, killing two sons of the watchman of the edifice. Investigation revealed two other bombs and tools for making bombs, and many revolvers and cartridges in the building. The synagogue now is surrounded by troops.

400 MILES IN A BALLOON.

Aeronaut Drifts Across Lake Michigan—Exhausted When Landed.

Wolverine, Mich., Sept. 10.—Capt. William Matteray, a Chicago aeronaut, who drifted away from Occonto, Wis., in a helpless airship on Thursday, landed in a swamp six miles south east of here Saturday. He was suffering from exposure and fatigue.

In his flight Matteray traveled a distance of nearly 400 miles, passing over Green Bay, Wis., crossing Lake Michigan, Grand Traverse Bay, and about 15 miles into the State of Michigan before alighting.

Rev. Father Geoghegan Dead.

Hamilton, Sept. 10.—Father Geoghegan, rector of St. Peter's Church, died last evening at 6 o'clock, after a somewhat prolonged illness, from Bright's disease. He was one of the most picturesque characters in the city. Though rather unconventional in his style, he was a man of broad sympathies, and was very popular among all classes. He was noted for his charitable work. For about 18 years he has been rector of St. Peter's Church. He was 58 years of age, and was born in the County of Doran, Ireland. A widow and one child survive.

GAS WORKS' ACCIDENT

Sends 14 Men to Hospital Suffering From Bad Burns.

Were Engaged In Lifting Massive Cover From Vat of Chemicals When Rush of Flame Overpowered Them—Faces, Arms and Bodies of Victims Are Badly Scorched—Pitiable Appearance of the Burned Men.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—While in the act of raising the massive lid of a purifier box at the Consumers' Gas Co.'s plant on Saturday morning about 11 o'clock, a sudden rush of flame caused injuries, more or less serious, to fourteen of the company's employes.

Machinist James Pargeter, who was examining the box to see that it was sound, at the time when the outbreak occurred, escaped without other ill-results than inhaling the fumes. He describes the fire as rushing out in fountain-like volume.

Dr. Chambers, who has the injured men under his charge, says that all will recover. It was fortunate that the flames did not ignite the clothing of the men, otherwise, the burns would probably, in more than one instance, have speedily proved fatal.

As it was, the victims were all burned either about the face, neck, or lower arms, which were exposed to the blast of fire. The men were suffering acutely when brought to the hospital and presented a pitiful appearance. There were great weals of raw flesh showing on faces drawn with suffering. Eyebrows were scorched away by the fierce blast.

The entire hospital staff busied themselves relieving the sufferings of the victims.

Horse's Kick Fatal.

Bright, Sept. 10.—Robert [illegible], a farmer residing about a mile from Bright, was kicked by a horse and died of his injuries Friday night.

Tot Killed In Street.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—While playing in the street Saturday in front of her home, little two-year-old Alice Chapleau, niece of the late Hon. J. A. Chapleau, met a terrible death, being run over by an express wagon. The little tot was making mud pies in the street, when the horse and wagon dashed over her at a furious rate.

Dog Saves Master.

Merlin, Sept. 10.—W. H. Howe was gored by an infuriated bull the other day, and would probably have been killed but for his faithful dog, which, after repeated attacks, drove the animal away.

Boy Killed on Track.

Uxbridge, Sept. 10.—William Oxtoby, 13 years of age, was run over and killed on the railway track near here yesterday morning. The boy's parents are deaf and dumb.

Body Found on Lake Shore.

Pickering, Sept. 10.—The badly decomposed body of a young man was found on the lake shore yesterday morning. His clothing consisted of an under shirt and drawers only. Three weeks ago a floating boat was picked up in the same locality. It contained a man's outer clothes, gold watch, etc.

CANNED THIMBLEBERRIES.

Fatal—Death of Mrs. Nash of Exeter Gives Rise to Peculiar Story.

London, Sept. 10.—The sudden death of Mrs. John H. Nash, two weeks ago, in this city, has given rise to a peculiar story.

It seems that nothing was said of the affair at the time, the body being sent to Exeter, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Fansen, reside. At the hospital, where she died, it was said her decease was due to asthmatic or bronchial trouble.

The late Mrs. Nash, however, was only taken to Victoria Hospital two hours before she died.

It appears now that some of the family say that death was due to poisoning, caused by eating canned thimbleberries. Certain other members of the family were taken ill at the same time, thereby giving rise to the idea that Mrs. Nash was also poisoned.

She was not quite 25 years of age, and, according to a letter sent the day before her death to her parents in Exeter, she mentioned that she had never been in better health.

DEATH BEFORE DISGRACE.

Receiving Teller Suicides When His Theft Became Known.

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Arthur R. Keefe, receiving teller for the Security Trust Co., committed suicide at his home here Saturday evening by drinking cyanide of potassium. He lived but a few minutes after taking the poison. Mr. Keefe was short in his accounts at the banking house, and it is believed that fear of arrest and the disgrace attending such action prompted him to commit the deed.

The officials of the bank state that Keefe was under bonds in the sum of $10,000, and that his irregularities will be within these figures. The institution will lose nothing.

Worried Over Money Loss, Suicides.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Worried over the loss of some money until completely deranged, Christopher Little, aged 57, of 217 Dalhousie street, shot himself at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Little ended his life in the presence of his wife and of William Thompson, son-in-law, the latter of whom had been called to try and quiet the aged man. Little was a carpenter by trade and a member of the L. O. L. and I. O. F., carrying $3,000 insurance. He leaves a widow and two daughters. An inquest will be held.

Dr. McLeod Pulls Revolver.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 10.—A man from the northwest was fined $15 and costs for pulling a revolver in the face of a colored porter on Grand Trunk No. 6 Saturday. He gave his name as Dr. McLeod.

Kaid Seizes Town.

Tangier, Sept. 10.—Despatches received from Mogador says that Anfloos Kaid has seized the town and batteries and won over the Government troops. The Jews fled to Mellah.

Club Man Suicides.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 10.—Clarence K. Wooster, vice-president of the People's Gaslight & Coke Co., and prominent in club and social circles, committed suicide yesterday at his home, 3,500 Ellis avenue, by cutting his throat with a razor.

Durnan In Row Towns.

London, Sept. 10.—(C. A. P.)—Towns has accepted Durnan's challenge to row for the championship, and the latter will leave Vancouver for Australia Oct. 1, having stipulated that he be allowed £100 expenses.

A Sport Wager.

There are men whose pride is in the stoic endurance of acute discomfort. They insist upon doing unpleasant things in order to convince themselves that they can do them. At Oxford some years ago there was an eminent Rugby football player whose passion was to discover the most uncomfortable things and then to do them. One evening a humorist suggested that—as it was January—it would be rather beastly to sit in a cold tub all night long. The footballer at once offered to wager that he could sit till morning chapel time in his cold tub. And he did it.—London Chronicle.

PREMIER WHITNEY HOME.

Says Government Will Stick to Their Declared Power Policy Or Deserve to Meet Fate In Store.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Hon. J. P. Whitney, Premier of Ontario, and Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, arrived home from England yesterday. The Premier said he never felt better, and that he had the time of his life, but was glad to be home. He said he would probably go to the buildings last evening."

"My visit," he said, "was not at all connected with public affairs, although there seemed to be an impression to that effect."

In reply to a question as to the attitude of the Government on the granting of leases to private power companies, he said he had nothing to say at this time.

"You may be sure," he said, "the Government have not gone back on their declared policy, and the public will doubtless be able to obtain all the water-power they wish. If the Government should go back on their declared policy they will deserve to meet the fate that would be in store for them."

The trip, said the Premier, was a pleasant one, and he had seen a good deal, ot only of London, but had also visited Edinboro, Glasgow, Belfast, Dublin and Liverpool. He had made a short run to Paris, had seen Versailles and went twenty miles down the Seine.

He thought more interest was taken in the colonies and Canada than he believed was the case when he went over.

WAMPOLE A WRECK.

Millionaire Worries Over Brick the Alleged Absconder With $40,000.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—Henry K. Wampole, the millionaire chemical manufacturer, while being taken from here to a sanitarium in New York Sunday, escaped from his nurse at Jersey City. While it is believed he has made his way to his home in Merion, near here, his family and physicians refuse to give out any information.

Mr. Wampole's condition is said to have been brought about through worry over the disappearance of the manager of the Perth, Ont., branch of the chemical works, who is alleged to have absconded with $40,000 of the firm's money. The mental worriment of Mr. Wampole became so great that it made a nervous wreck of him.

It is reported that W. H. Brick the defaulter, is in Japan.

RELIEF FOR CHILE.

Buried Alive In the Mud.

Over Two Hundred and Fifty Persons Lose Their Lives.

Russian Township Engulfed by Side of a Mountain in the Township of Kwarell Breaking Away—Countless Cattle Perish and Crops are Destroyed in the Caucasus—Similar Occurrences Are Common There.

Tiflis, Sept. 11.—Practically without warning, the side of a mountain rising above the township of Kwarell broke away, and in a sea of semi-liquid mud, sand and stone, swept down on the township and overwhelmed and obliterated it.

Some 255 persons have been buried alive. Fifty-five bodies already have been recovered from the mire, which is about six feet deep.

In addition to the lives lost, countless head of cattle perished and the crops were destroyed.

Kwarell township occupies an area of five kilometres in the district of Telaw, in the Caucasus.

Similar disasters are of common occurrence in Caucasian valleys.

LONDON LADY POISONED.

Sudden Death of Mrs. John Labatt From Strychnine.

London, Ont., Sept. 11.—Mrs. Labatt, wife of Mr. John Labatt, brewer, died last evening from strychnine poisoning. The poison was contained in medicine placed there in mistake by a clerk in a local drug store.

Mrs. Labatt was a daughter of the late Henry Sackville Browne, a retired officer of the East India Co., and was born at Kingsley, Que.

A Railway Man's Death.

Kingston, Sept. 11.—On Saturday evening, at Marlbank, on the Bay of Quinte Railway, a fireman named Conrita Henass was beneath the locomotive doing some work when the engineer pulled the throttle. As the engine begon to move Henass attempted to escape and had both legs cut off at the thigh. He lived till 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

His Skull Fractured.

Guelph, Sept. 11.—John McCarthy, who lives about 1 1-2 miles above Erin, was found lying on the road unconscious Sunday night. On Saturday about 1 o'clock he had a colt shod in the village. Sunday night the colt was seen running with the wreck of the buggy, and McCarthy was found lying on the road bleeding profusely from an ugly cut on the head. He was taken home. Two physicians found the skull was cracked, and they removed a piece of bone pressing on the brain about the size of a silver dollar.

Found Drowned.

Kingston, Sept. 11.—About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, tugs at work in the M. T. Co's slip washed to the surface the body of Joseph Savagos of Lachine, formerly mate on the barge Valencia. He was missing since Thursday.

Death Follows Swim.

Detroit, Sept. 11.—John Bradley, 28 years of age, an employe of the London (Ont.) Street Railway Co., came to Detroit on Saturday. After eating a hearty breakfast he went to Belle Isle and went in bathing. He remained in the water nearly an hour. On coming out to dress he staggered, fell to the floor unconscious and died.

27 Hurt In Train Wreck.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Sept. 11.—The second section of a southbound train on the Southern Pacific coast line from San Francisco was wrecked yesterday at Seacliff, a sidetrack twenty miles south of Santa Barbara, and twenty-seven persons were injured, two of whom may die.

PANIC ON STEAMER IROQUOIS.

Ran on Shoal and 500 Passengers Were Badly Frightened.

Brockville, Sept. 11.—The large propeller Iroquois, carrying an excursion of 500 people from Brockville and Ogdensburg, among the islands, ran on a shoal Sunday night, a short distance above Brockville, and for a few minutes panic reigned among the passengers, several women fainting.

The captain got slightly out of his course in the pitch darkness and observed his mistake before the dangerous shoals were reached. The boat backed off undamaged.

It Was Carbolic Acid.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—"Let me see, is it carbolic acid?" and so saying Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick, 211 Oak street, put a bottle of the fluid to her mouth, swallowed some of it before a quick-witted drug clerk dashed the bottle from her hand. This happened in G. Marshall's drug store, at Queen and Berkeley streets, last evening about 7 o'clock. Mrs. Kirkpatrick is an elderly woman. Mr. Marshall called Dr. Sweeny and antidotes were applied, after which Mrs. Kirkpatrick was removed to the General Hospital.

Henry Carscallen, M.P.P., Worse.

Hamilton, Sept. 11.—Henry Carscallen, K.C., M.P.P., has taken a decided change for the worse. During the past 24 hours his condition has been extremely critical No very great improvement was noticed by his physician last night, although Mr. Carscallen appeared to be a little brighter.

Negro Meets Awful Fate.

Minola, Texas, Sept. 11.—In an effort to burn his way out of jail, Silas Johnson, a negro, lit his own funeral pyre. He was burned to death while a crowd around the jail watched his last agonies through the iron window bars, but unable to save him. He was in for drunkenness.

Mgr. Sbarretti Going to Rome.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 11.—Monsignor Sbarretti left for Ottawa yesterday. On Sept. 15 he will leave for Rome via New York.

PIQUANT PITTSBURG.

Member of Legislature and Justice of Peace In Stabbing Affray.

Pittsburg, Sept. 11.—Lawrence B. Cook, member of the Pennsylvania Legislature from the fourth district, who was renominated by the Republican party Saturday, was Sunday perhaps fatally stabbed by Andrew McMillan, a justice of the peace, and one of the wealthy residents of Carnegie.

Cook, who became famous during the last Legislature for being the author of the "Greater Pittsburg" bill, is alleged to have been celebrating his renomination. He met Mrs. McMillan, and the two went to a house in Lawn street. While they were in the room McMillan burst open the door.

When the fight started Cook was cut several times before he succeeded in escaping in scant attire to an alley. He got into a house a few doors below, and the barring of the door by the woman who let him in probably saved him from being cut to pieces.

In Dresden 300 years ago "epicures" used to eat Venetian oysters that had been on the way three weeks.

The Bryan Revival

The consensus of opinion in the United States appears to be that Wm. J. Bryan will represent the Democratic forces in the contest for the Presidency two years hence. The one time advocate of free silver has certainly shown himself to be a remarkable man. He is the only citizen of the United States, who having twice been defeated for the chief executive, finds himself enjoying to a still greater extent the confidence of his party as the third struggle approaches. The truth is that Bryan has grown since he made his dramatic entrance into world politics at the Chicago convention. Then he was an enthusiastic faddist. One idea had taken complete possession of him and filled with enthusiasm he had the eloquence and magnetism to carry the Democratic party with him. The Bryan of to-day is a different man. He has abandoned the sixteen to one plank on which he formerly sought to float into the White House, and he has brought his ripened judgment to bear upon other issues that directly affect the happiness and prosperity of the people of the United States.

On almost all public questoins the Democractic leader is sane and practical. With his deliverance on trusts, immigration and labor there will be general and hearty agreement. Not so, however, with his pronouncement for a tariff for revenue only. That there is need for tariff reform in the United States, no one can seriously question. The removal of imposts unnecessary for the maintenance of legitimate industry, cannot be proceeded with too soon. Under this abnormal protection the trusts have grown arrogant. But to ignore the principle of protection; to eliminate it entirely from the fiscal policy of the country, as Mr. Bryan proposes, would mean disaster to many industries.

It is the old question over again. Protectionists and free traders agree that a revenue must be raised. The protectionist contends that revenue should be raised by placing imposts on articles that can be grown or manufactured at home. The free trader wants the duties imposed without regard to the protection of home industries. Indeed a tariff for revenue only means the lowest possible rate of duty and the largest possible importations.

It will be interesting to watch the progress of the campaign. Possibly Mr. Bryan may modify his views on the tariff question. He may in time see that a tariff for revenue only will not be acceptable to the United States artizan. Should he substitute tariff reform for the total abolition of protection, his prospects are good for election, even, if as now appears probable, his opponent should be the present occupant of the White House.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It looks like fair weather for the fair.

• • •

The Toronto fair may have been a little bit bigger than ours, but we beg to point out that they did not have any such exhibit in their Crystal Palace as Ald. Knox's auto.

• • •

The appearance of the Mayor before the grand stand, clad in the famous diving suit, will be sure to bring a storm of applause.

• • •

Ald. Marsh's statement about back taxes last night shows two things quite plainly; First, that The Intelligencer's recent remarks about tax rolls not being returned were pertinent and timely, and secondly, that the civic authorities are now alive to their duties. The fact that a large amount of this year's taxes has been collected does not prove much. The fact that considerable back taxes have not yet been collected is what interests most people, the great majority of whom paid their taxes when they were due, and they cannot understand why other taxpayers should not be expected to do the same. That is where the shoe pinches. However, let us hope that; now the City Fathers have given the matter their serious attention, they will "keep pegging away" till Belleville will be able to show as clean a sheet as other cities, which demand (and enforce the rule) that the Tax Collector must return the roll of one year before the roll of another is placed in his hands.

The fact that $15,000 has been added to the sinking fund this year is also a matter for congratulation. It shows that, taking the Auditors' Report for 1905 as a guide, only $31,000 now remains to be paid, and then all legal requirements will have been met. So let us cheer up. Things are growing better.

• • •

The congratulatory resolution passed by the Council to the Board of Trade delegates who represented this city at the great Congress in London, was, we believe, timely and very much to the point. It may safely be assumed that no city in Canada, of Belleville's size, could furnish four such able, eloquent and forcible representatives as those who carried the credentials of the Board of Trade of this city. The Intelligencer begs to add its congratulations to those passed by the Council last night.

Here's a tip for Belleville brides-to-be; At a marriage at Blackpool, England, recently, the Rev. S. Balmer, who performed the ceremony, omitted the word "obey" in addressing the bride at the altar. Subsequently at the wedding breakfast he defended his reason for not formally binding the bride in this promise. The omission, he said, was not illegal, and if the bride made the other promises with sincerity there was no question of disobedience.

The new Australian tariff bill provides for a duty of £12 each on harvesters, and of 25 per cent. on other machinery. There should be a falling off in imports of farming implements into the Commonwealth in face of such protection, remarks the Montreal Gazette. Twelve pounds means practically $60, and if the Australians have any manufacturing enterprise they will hold their own market for binders with such a handicap on the outside vendor. What would Lockie Wilson and his followers say if they lived in Australia?

The Cuban insurgents are blowing up railway bridges. Those who now constitute the Cuban Government used to find this an effective way of annoying the Spaniards. They may not, however, as an exchange points out, appreciate their own trick being turned against them. An extremist rarely does.

Bridge St. Church Was Filled For the Wedding

NUPTIALS OF LIEUT. ALLEN AND MISS MABEL VERMILYEA, THIS MORNING, A VERY BRIGHT AND FASHIONABLE AFFAIR.

"Happy the bride the sun shines on," says the old saw. Taking it for granted that this is true, it must be admitted that the sweet-faced girl-bride, who this morning plighted her troth in Bridge St. Church has many happy years before her, for Old Sol shone brightly o'er the scene and warmed up the crowds of people who were hastening on their way to fill the spacious auditorium. The handsome church looked extremely pretty in all its floral adornment. It was a China aster wedding, and that rather modest flower was the piece de resistance of the decoration scheme. Dear! dear! as a mere man might be allowed to say, but don't the ladies love a wedding? They probably inherit the taste from their old grandmother, Eve. The ladies, of course, were out in large numbers. But it was not idle curiosity alone that took them to Bridge St. The bride, Miss Mabel Aileen Vermilyea, eldest daughter of Mr. C. H. Vermilyea, has become so well known through her musical abilities, that many ladies, who had never been introduced to her, felt really a personal interest in the soprano soloist of Belleville's big Methodist church, whose dulcet voice has charmed her hearers for years, and who has never been called on in vain when there was anything to be done "for sweet charity's sake." The groom, Lieut. Arthur Percival Allen, son of Capt. Allen; is a valued member of the Fifteenth Regiment, and exceedingly popular with not only his comrades of the shoulder straps, but also with the "Tommies." In fact, if you travelled from one end of Belleville to the other, and took a search warrant with you, you'd hardly find a more popular couple than the good-looking young lady and gentleman who, at 11 o'clock this morning, stood before Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., and listened to the solemn words which made them man and wife.

It was a striking and charming scene. The grand organ, under the master hand of Prof. Hunt, pealed out joyfully when the winsome bride entered on the arm of her father. The choir was there in force to see their soloist get married, and sang, "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden" in splendid style.

And now, ladies, we'll tell you about the costumes. The bride looked as pretty as a picture in a gown of white Duchesse satin, veiled with chiffon and silk Brussels net, with trimmings of chiffon, baby Irish lace and lovers' knots of white satin ribbon. She wore a veil of embroidered tulle, caught with small wreath of asters, and carried a bouquet of asters and white roses.

Miss Ruby Robb was maid of honor. She wore a gown of white lace over green taffeta, a black velvet Gainsborough hat, and carried a bouquet of white asters.

The bridesmaids were Miss Alberta Luke and Miss Marjorie Vermilyea, sister of the bride. Miss Luke wore white chiffon taffeta, with trimmings of green chiffon and Limerick lace, with large Gainsborough hat of black and white. She carried a bouquet of asters. Little Miss Vermilyea was resplendent in white point d'esprit, over white silk, with wreath and bouquet of asters.

The best man was Mr. "Laurie" Rous, now of Toronto, a former popular Belleville boy, and the page Master D. Curry, of Trenton.

The ushers were Messrs. W. J. Cook, A. G. Vermilyea and J. V. Doyle.

During the ceremony Miss Elsie Price, in excellent voice, sang, "O, Perfect Love." She was gowned in pale blue silk net over blue taffeta, with blue picture hat, and carried pink asters.

The costumes worn by other ladies of the party were notable for their extreme good taste. Among them we noticed the following;

Mrs. Vermilyea (mother of the bride)—White chiffon voile over white taffeta, crowned by a pale blue hat. She carried pink asters.

Mrs. N. Allen, the groom's mother, wore pearl grey silk eolienne, trimmed with pink Dresden and cream lace. She wore a pale pink hat and carried pink asters.

Mrs. T. C. Wilson, of Kingston, wore black lace.

Mrs. E. Earle, of St. Louis, Mo., was gowned in heliotrope silk.

Mrs. A. G. Vermilyea—White silk net.

Miss Min. Dodds, Toronto— Pink Dresden silk.

Miss Allen—White silk net.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a brief reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Vermilyea, Bridge St., and the wedding dejeuner, tasteful and toothsome, was served. The happy couple left on the 1.40 p.m. train for a honeymoon tour in the west. On their return to the city they will reside on Victoria avenue.

The wedding presents were nothing short of magnificent, among them being a sterling silver tea set, from the choir and congregation of Bridge St. Church, and a banquet lamp from the officers of the Fifteenth Regiment.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"DOLLY VARDEN" TO-NIGHT.

The now-famous comic opera, "Dolly Varden," with Lillian Spencer in the title role, will be the attraction at the Carman opera house to-night. In all of her roles, Miss Spencer has always shown a keen sense of humor, and a sort of effervescent instinct for comedy. It was this quality in her personality, together with her winsome vivacity that prompted Milton and Sargent Aborn to star her in "Dolly Varden," for much of the comedy of this opera emanates from the ingenuous title role. In other cities where it has played, "Dolly Varden" has made a big hit, and the Carman should hold a record audience tonight to see Manager Carman's initial offering of the season.

Dog Got Excited.

The rather strange antics of a canine yesterday afternoon had the effect of frightening some people. It seems that a large dog was in an upstairs window over Harker & Pearson's store, on Front street, when the alarm of fire was given. As the hose reel came up the street at a fast gait the dog bounded out of the window and alighted upon the awning, through which he fell to the walk below. The awning was badly wrecked and some pedestrians who were beneath it were somewhat startled.

The beauty bee is a money-maker. It "honeys" up one's thoughts; it sweetens one's life; it's nectar on one's words, and drops, sip by sip, into one's heart when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is used. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

At Sign of the Scales.

DRUNKS.

Albert Clapper and Joshua C. Palmer, both of whom were charged with drunkenness, were the only offenders before the Magistrate this morning. A fine of $5 or two months in jail was imposed in each case. As the parties had not the spare change they were taken to the County jail.

Don't Be Backward

Do not hesitate to ask for a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. We are glad to give them to anyone who is troubled with billiousness, constipation or any disorder of the stomach. Many have been permanently cured by their use. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Old Chronic Sores

As a dressing for old chronic sores there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Salve. While it is not advisable to heal old sores entirely, they should be kept in a good condition for which this salve is especially valuable. For sore nipples Chamberlain's Salve has no superior. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store

Eye Strain
(Brain Strain)

By far the commonest cause of NERVOUSNESS.

The actual underlying cause of many ills, which the thousands of sufferers are vainly trying to relieve by drugs. Really the most dangerous evil that now exists, because it gives rise to brain irritation of so many different degrees. The most unsuspected, and therefore, neglected menace to the general health, because the very brain-strain enables the person to "see alright."

Very often completely changes the person's disposition, by the intense irritation of nerve-centers in the brain.

Some very remarkable CURES have followed the correction of hidden eye defects by our expert Optician.

He Kept His Word.

"Such a change," said Senator Sullivan, apropos of a certain bill, "would be about as satisfactory as the change that a landlord once made.

"A woman came to see this landlord. She wanted to look at a house that was to let. The man sent a clerk to show her over the house, and on her return she said:

"'I like the house very well. There is only one thing that I object to.'

"'Well, madam, any reasonable alteration,' the landlord murmured suavely, 'would, provided you took a three years' lease—'

"'I'd take a three years' lease,' said the woman, 'if only the house had more closets.'

"'The number of closets shall be doubled,' said the landlord.

"'Very well,' said the woman, in a pleased voice, and she signed the lease then and there.

"After she was gone the landlord called in his clerk again.

"'John,' he said, 'take a carpenter over to No. 37, and have him divide each of the closets in two.'"—Ottawa correspondence.

Doukhobors' Good Work.

Malcolm McMillan of Macdonald, McMillan & Co., G. T. P. contractors, has returned to Winnipeg from an inspection of the work along the line as far as Birdtail River. In this vicinity the Doukhobors have several grading contracts, and Mr. McMillan speaks in the highest terms of their work. The Doukhobors, he maintains, have put some of the finest pieces of grading that have been done on the whole line. They are great hustlers and are not at all affected by "pilgrimage propensities." Mr. McMillan states that the work is going along very satisfactorily, and that when the snow flies the company expect to have not only 275 miles from Portage to Touchwood Hills graded, but also the 55-mile span, Portage to Winnipeg.

IT IS FOR LADIES, TOO.

They Can Stop Their Hair Falling Out With Herpicide.

Ladies who have thin hair and whose hair is falling out, can prevent the hair falling out, and thicken the growth, with Newbro's "Herpicide." Besides, Herpicide is one of the most agreeable hair dressings there is. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ that eats the hair off at the root. After the germ is destroyed the root will shoot up, and the hair grow long as ever. Even a sample will convince any lady that Newbro's Herpicide is an indispensable toilet requisite. It contains no oil or grease, it will not stain or dye.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

The business that stays is the business that pays, both the assured and the Company. What Makes the Trout Shy?

The shyness of the summer trout of the still springhole is due not entirely to his keen eye trained by the quietude of transparent waters. It is to be credited more to his gregariousness. The cool places and deeper pools of the trout stream are apt to be few and hive the fish in schools. If the school number, say, fifty fish it means a hundred watchful eyes and a collective shyness adjusted to that of the most timid fish of the fifty, whose sudden dash to safety gives the warning signal to all. A single nervous trout—and there are usually several—is thus enough to scatter a big school in a flash and baffle the hopes of the angler.—Clarence Deming in Outing Magazine.

Tobacco Leaves.

A scientist writes: "The essential quality for which tobacco is smoked or chewed lies not really in the leaves themselves, but is contained in thousands of hollow knobbed hairs which cover their surface. The vital nicotine is garnered in these pear-like balls, but as it is impossible to shave off these hairs and would be a scarcely commendable achievement if it could be undertaken it becomes necessary to preserve the whole foliage for commercial purposes."

Where the Money Came From.

Batchellor—That's a good cigar you're smoking. Popley—Yes, that's a fine ten-center you gave me. Batchellor—I gave you? I guess not. Popley—Oh, yes, I'm sure it was your money paid for it. The only money I found in our baby's bank this morning was the dime you put in yesterday.

The One Rule.

At a club where card playing was prohibited four members smuggled in a pack and, calling the waiter aside, asked him if he had ever known the rule broken. His reply was, "All the years I have been here I have known every rule broken except one—that of giving of tips." The game proceeded.

Thoughtful.

"Are you sure the sick man wanted me?" asked the physician, reaching for his hat.

"He didn't mention your name, but he's screamin' for some one that'll put him out of his misery, and I thought of you right away."

Didn't Wait.

"Were you frightened when you arose to make your first speech?" "What should frighten me?" "The audience." "The audience left as soon as my name was announced."

A Hopeless Case.

"I am in favor of spelling reform."

"Glad to hear it. Come around and give my stenographer a few points won't you?"

THE VEIL LIP.

An Easily Acquired Habit That Is Bad For the Face.

Quite unconsciously we fall into habits that render us less pleasing to behold. The wearers of veils, therefore, may be acquiring a habit which they would take every trouble to avoid if their attention were called to it.

When you have an opportunity of watching a woman who is wearing a veil, notice how she tries to keep the material from getting between her lips. The veil has this propensity, especially when its wearer is talking. You will find that some ladies lift a hand to the edge of the stuff and gently pull it straight, but you will also perceive that many of them endeavor to keep it out of the mouth by various movements of the lip. The second method gives a disagreeable appearance to the countenance, and it is certain that they would avoid it if they were aware of the fact.

The worst of it is that the ugly action of the lip is likely to become a habit, so that the movement is made unknowingly when there is no veil to operate on. It would assuredly spoil the expression of the face and would convey the notion that the lady was afflicted with some nervous ailment similar to but more pronounced than the twitching of the eyelid, which is so annoying to those who suffer from it.

There may be an inclination on the part of some readers to smile at this friendly warning. Yet it is an undoubted fact, verified by constant observation, that some wearers of veils fall into a face distorting habit, so it will do no harm to guard ourselves from following a bad example.—Home Notes.

THE BOX COUCH.

Make It Dust Proof and Save Trouble With Your Gowns.

The box couch has long ago proved its convenience. Either as an emergency bed or clothespress it has no equal—indeed, it is a piece of furniture that few housekeepers can dispense with.

As absolute perfection is not yet come to earth, the box couch is not exempt from flaws. About the only serious one, however, is the persistency with which dust will sift inside, no matter how closely shut is the lid.

One clever woman has overcome this so much to her own satisfaction that her remedy is worth trying.

Over the lining she tacked white kitchen tablecloth, with the shining side turned in. A strip about two inches wide was also fastened all around the edge, so that when the lid was down it acted as a close flap over the opening.

The bottom of the box was then lined with a heavy yellow paper, which may be easily removed and freshened.

These simple precautions are marvelous dust defiers and make it possible to use the couch to hold gowns or even white waists without their being wrapped, as was formerly necessary.

SERVING AT DINNER.

Everything at table is passed at the left hand of the person seated and not at the right hand.

A servant should not ask a guest to have a second portion of any dish, but should bring it at once if asked.

A tablespoon and a large fork should be placed by a servant in the entree dishes previous to handling them.

Vegetables should be handed by a servant a second time at a family dinner, but only once at a dinner party unless specially requested.

When a large dinner party is given the guests should be helped in the order in which they are seated, commencing with the lady seated at the host's right hand.

In the family circle the mistress of the house is served first, then the daughters according to their ages, the master of the house and the sons according to their ages.

When a fork or spoon is asked for it should not be handed on a waiter, but placed on the right or left hand, as required. When a tumbler or other dish is asked for it is handed on a small waiter.

How to Stain Floors.

Here is a good recipe for staining floors and also for staining around the carpet in a bedroom: First get the floor perfectly clean. If there are cracks between boards fill them, then mix linseed oil and burnt umber together, a tablespoonful to a pint of linseed oil. Stir it thoroughly. If you wish it darker, put in more umber; if lighter, use more oil. Put it on the floor with a clean paint brush. Rub it evenly. After a few days, when dry, put on a second coat. Try a little of the stain on a piece of wood first to get the color you wish. When it gets soiled or dusty mop it off with a little warm borax water, which will clean it nicely and not hurt the stain. You can retouch it now and then if it needs it. This finish resembles a hardwood floor.

To Wash Rag Carpets.

Take the carpet from the floor and beat it thoroughly to remove the dust, then take the widths apart and wash one at a time. A good washing machine and wringer are great aids in this. Heat a boilerful of soft water and add enough good washing powder to it to make a strong suds. Put one width of the carpet in the washing machine, pour the suds over it and wash until the water is dirty. Pass the carpet through the wringer, wash in the second suds prepared in the same way as the first, then rinse through two clear waters. Each strip of carpet should be treated in the same way. Ingrain carpet can be washed in the same way.

The Siren of La Prensa.

La Prensa is the greatest and most influential paper in South America. Its offices are in Buenos Ayres, Argentina, situated in a magnificent building in the Avenida. This building is said to be one of the most imposing in the world. It has a tower crowned by a great golden statue of a young woman representing the Spirit of the Press. The proudest possession of La Prensa is a 5,000 horsepower steam operated siren. Whenever there is an appalling disaster—the death of a crowned head or other event of worldwide interest—whoop goes La Prensa's siren and is heard for a while throughout the city. The local government exacts a fine for this performance, $100 per minute, with a minimum of $200, and if the fine is not paid on the nail the charge is double, so when one man is sent to operate the screecher another is sent running with a two hundred dollar bill to the courts. The next operation is to drape the above referred to young woman's torch with red velvet in case of a catastrophe; with crape in the event of a death. All this causes the most extraordinary sensation.

A Real Celebrity.

The local pride of the natives of Cape Elizabeth, Me., is so intense that it takes the attitude of pity for all who have the misfortune to dwell elsewhere. This, says a writer in the Lewiston Journal, is known to regular summer visitors, and by most of them is respected. One rainy day a newcomer, who had joined the gathering in the store, composed of fishermen and summer visitors, ventured to enumerate some of the distinguished men who had come from Maine.

"There's Longfellow," he said, "and Hannibal Hamlin, and James G. Blaine, William Pitt Fessenden, Thomas B. Reed and"—

Here an old fisherman looked up from his work of splicing grass blades, and broke in. "Smart? Those fellows smart?" he questioned. "You just come down an' see Josh Pillsbury skin fish!"

Shooting From an Elephant.

The elephant's howdah is that bed of Procrustes, in which one can neither sit nor stand with any approach to reasonable ease, and in which a recumbent attitude is impossible, says Blackwood's Magazine. Its advantages are, first, that standing in it a man can shoot on every side of him; second, that it is convenient for the carriage of the occupant's paraphernalia—his guns on racks on either side, his ammunition in a trough in front, his other requisites in leather pockets here and there on the sides of the machine and his bed blanket on the seat—and, third, that in a binder compartment an attendant can stand to hold that monstrous umbrella over his head, or when quick loading is required take from his hand the gun just fired and recharge it. These are the advantages. Otherwise the howdah is an abomination.

Most Famous Saying.

"What is the most famous saying ever made by man?" an editor asked.

Some thought that Caesar, some thought that Socrates, some that Lincoln, some that Nelson, had said the most memorable thing; but finally the palm was awarded to Euclid, the mathematician.

Euclid went to Alexandria to teach Ptolemy Soter, the king of Egypt, mathematics. Ptolemy plodded at his problems a week or two, and then asked Euclid impatiently if there was not some special, shorter way by which he could be taught.

"Sire," Euclid answered, "there is no royal road to learning."

A. M. and P. M.

Here is an excellent catch: Ingenuously ask any friend or acquaintance the meaning of a. m. and p. m. You will receive some such answer as "Why, morning and afternoon," or "Before dinner and after dinner," or "Up to 12 o'clock high noon and after 12 high noon," or "From midnight to noon and from noon to midnight," or "Ante meridian and post meridian; before and after noon." It is a conservative wager that every one to whom the question is put will stake his happiness on the word meridian, while the correct word is meridiem. Ante meridiem and post meridiem are abbreviated to a. m. and p. m.

Paying Him Back.

"Will you please pull the bell?" said an elderly woman in a car to a young college looking fellow hanging to a strap in front of her.

"No, madam, but I shall be glad to pull the cord which rings the bell," he answered.

"Oh, never mind," she said. "The cord is connected with two bells—front and back—and you might stop the wrong end of the car."

Her Valuable Tip.

"Here's a letter from a woman," said the answers to correspondents editor, "who wants to know how to make a lemon tart."

"That's just like a woman," rejoined the snake editor. "Tell her if the lemon isn't tart to begin with she'd better consign it to the dump and let it go at that."

At the Wrong Counter.

The lady who went to the book department of a big modern store and inquired for "Crabbe's Tales" was told that fish and provisions were on the ground floor.

Conceptions of Hell

(Universalist Leader.)

At the Rocky Mountain missionary convention of the Methodist church at Denver, Col., Bishop W. F. Oldham, a famous organizer of missions in India, said; "Just prove to me that there is a sane man who honestly believes he will be burned alive forever in a place filled with brimstone and fire. It is possible that some men believe that others will be punished in that way, but it is not human to believe it will happen to one's self. If we threaten the natives whose souls we are sent to save with the terrors of eternal torture in a pit presided over by satan and a horde of assistant devils, we place the Christian religion on almost as low a plane as the devil-worshipping systems of the heathen. People are punished for their sins in their own souls. The beginning of punishment lies in inheriting ourselves when we die. Sins are registered in personality, and if the personality is strong enough to survive what you call the 'here,' the punishment is not entirely in this life but in the hereafter as well, but I do not believe that any man will be punished forever."

Dr. A. B. Leonard of New York, said, "To be sure there is no hell. It is inconceivable that God should create human beings for the purpose of torturing them eternally."

Rev. Dr. Thompson, of Grace church, Chicago, said; "No man I know believes in a hell of literal fire and brimstone. It is a mediaeval conception of things. Man will have to be responsible for the fruit of his doing in this life or hereafter. The better hell to warn men of is the hell of their own wrong-doing — the hell that is the consequence of their own voluntary acts. Man knows the effect of violation of the laws of health Warn him of the effect of the breach of moral laws."

AS SMOOTH AS A BILLIARD TABLE.

Your comfort on a railway journey very largely depends upon the roadbed of the route you select. No matter how luxurious the coaches, or how much personal attention you receive from the employees, you cannot be comfortable if jolted and jarred by a poor and irregular roadbed. On the Lake Shore Railway no expense has been spared to make a roadbed as nearly perfect as the most skilful engineering could build, and as a result, throughout the entire length and breadth of the system the right of way is as smooth as a billiard table. No jolts or jars, nor dust nor dirt. This perfection of service extends throughout the entire system. Lake Shore trains are the most luxurious, they are equipped with every comfort and convenience and are run at highest speed and in safety. They run on time. For your own sake you should see that your ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway." Write for full information about rates and routes to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O., or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

SO THE OLD FOLKS SAY.

(Pall Mall Gazette.)

The old folks say. The times are changing,
The bygone years were surely best;
O'er land and sea, for ever ranging,
Men wander now in vague unrest;
And faded are the green romances,
The morning light has died away,
The world has lost its golden chances
So the old folks say.

The old folks say. The days are duller,
The sweetest songs are left unsung,
The spring was full of scent and color,
Long. long ago, when we were young.
Above our heads the sky was clearer,
And warmer was the sunlight ray;
Yet Heaven is now a little nearer,
So the old folks say.

The old folks say, 'Tis Maytime weather,
Play, children, to your heart's desire,
But leave us hand in hand together,
Beside the swiftly falling fire.
For earthly claims are near their breaking,
And eyes are dim, and locks are gray,
But Love's a dream that knows no waking,
So the old folks say.

Astronomically speaking, it is rather previous to bid farewell to summer and to hail autumn, but popularly speaking the sentiment is in order. According to the calendar the summer solstice will not be over until the 22nd of this month, but for all practical purposes summer in this part of the world begins with June and ends with August.

Potato blight has made its ravages evident all over the West of Ireland The 'Farmer's Advocate' appears to think that spraying, whilst it may go a long way to prevent, cannot effectually remedy the disease in "muggy" weather such as has been experienced this season. New seed must be sown wherever the crop is badly affected. Even then the soil itself may have become contaminated. In a poor and heavily taxed country like Ireland the failure of a crop from such conditions entails heavy distress and the outlook especially in the west is now quite disheartening.

HOW IT SPREADS

The first package of Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put out went to a small town in Nebraska.

It cured a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread, and the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles.

An Ingenious Accusation.

"The favorite horse of the Chinese Emperor Tsi," said a Chinese statesman, "died through negligence on the part of the royal master of the horse. The emperor was so enraged at this that he drew his sword and would have run the careless functionary through the body.

"But the learned mandarin, Yentse, struck up the emperor's sword, saying:

"'Sire, this man has not yet been formally accused of any crime. He deserves to die, but his accusation should come first. It is the law.'

"'Well,' said the emperor, 'tell me what he has done.'

"'Listen, you rogue,' said the mandarin, turning to the trembling master of the horse—'listen to a catalogue of your heinous offenses. In the first place, you have allowed a horse to perish that his majesty had intrusted to your care. In the second place, it is on your account that the emperor became so exasperated that he was actually on the point of disgracing himself in all his people's eyes by killing a man for the sake of a horse.'

"'Enough,' said the emperor, appreciating the rebuke. 'Let him go. He is pardoned.'"

Breaking It Gently.

"Laura," said Mr. Ferguson as he buttered a biscuit and passed his coffee cup for a second filling, "I don't miss anything, but after I had come in last night, about 11:30, I found the house had been broken into. Somebody had smashed a pane of glass in a basement window, crawled inside and made his way up the stairs to the first floor. There hasn't been anything disturbed in the pantry, the china closet or the sideboard, has there?"

"No," answered Mrs. Ferguson. "But, mercy, who could it have been and what do you suppose he wanted?"

"I suspect," he rejoined, clearing his throat, "that I—er—did it myself and that I wanted to get inside without disturbing anybody. You had all gone to bed, and I had left my latchkey in my other trousers. It will cost about 25 cents to repair the basement window. The weather man, I see, predicts possible showers for today."

Three Kinds of Lightning.

The Etruscans of old believed that there were three kinds of lightning—one incapable of doing any injury, another more mischievous in its character and consequently only to be issued with the consent of a quorum of twelve gods, and a third carrying mischief in its train and for which a regular decree was required from the highest divinities in the Etruscan skies. Curiously enough, modern scientific men agree with the view that there are three kinds of lightning, but their varieties differ from the Etruscans. The first is known as forked lightning and runs in zigzag lines, the second as sheet lightning, because it is seen in a body, and the third as globe lightning, as it sometimes runs in the shape of a ball. The latter variety is rather slow in moving.

The Word "Nice."

"Nice" is one of the exceptional words which have risen on the scale and improved with age. It is from the Latin "nescius" and originally signified ignorant. To Chaucer it regularly meant foolish—"wise and nothing nice." In Spenser's time it still meant effeminate. From general foolishness there was probably first a specialization to foolish fussiness about trifles. Then the idea of ignorance dropped out, and the word meant particular about details, accurate. It was creditable to be a "nice" observer or to show "nice" judgment. And so in the end the positively agreeable meaning of today was evolved.

Old Whist [illegible].

The following passage is from the Adventurer, No. 35, March 6, 1753:

"On Sunday last a terrible fire broke out at Lady Brag's, occasioned by the following accident: Mrs. Overall, the housekeeper, having lost three rubbers at whist running without holding a swabber (notwithstanding she had changed chairs, furzed the cards and ordered Jemmy, the footboy, to sit cross legged for good luck), grew out of all patience and, taking up the devil's books, as she called them, flung them into the fire, and the flames spread to the steward's room."

Swabbers are the ace of hearts, the knave of clubs and the ace and the deuce of trumps at whist. To furz or fuzz is to shuffle the cards very carefully or to change the pack.—London Notes and Queries.

Something better always makes its appearance when the old and wornout things fall.—Andersen.

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

CHAPTER VIII.

"I'm afraid, sir," said Capt. Kettle, "that the old Sultan's work is about done. She's settling down by the head already. Didn't you see those rats of men scuttling up from forrard directly after we'd rammed the Don? I guess that was a bit of a surprise packet for them, anyway. They thought they'd get down there to be clear of the shooting, and they found themselves in the most ticklish part of the ship."

"There's humor in the situation," said Carnforth. "But that will keep. For the present, it strikes me that this old steamboat is swamping fast."

"She's doing that," Kettle admitted. "She'll have a lot of plates started forrard, I guess. But I think she's come out of it very creditably, sir. I didn't spare her, and she's not exactly built for a ram."

"I suppose it's a case of putting her on the beach?"

"There's nothing else for it," said Kettle with a sigh. "I should like to have carried those blessed coals into Havana if it could have been done, just to show people ours was a bona fide contract, as Mr. Gedge said, in spite of its fishy look. But this old steamboat has done her whack, and that's the square truth. It will take her all she can manage to reach shore with dry decks. Look, she's in now nearly to her forecastle head. Lucky the shore's not steep-to here, or else—"

From beneath there came a bump and a rattle, and the steamer for a moment halted in her progress, and a white crested wave surged past her rusty flanks. Then she lifted again and swooped further in, with her propeller still squattering astern; and then once more she thundered down again into the sand; and so lifting and striking made her way in through the surf.

More than one of the hands was swept from her decks, and reached the shore by swimming; but as the ebb made, the hungry seas left her stranded dry under the morning's light, and a crowd of insurrectionists waded out and climbed on board by ropes, which were thrown to them.

They were men of every tint, from the gray-black of the pure negro to the sallow lemon tint of the blue-blooded Spaniard. They were streaked with wounds, thin as skeletons, and clad more with nakedness than with rags; and so wolfish did they look that even Kettle, callous little ruffian though he was, half regretted bringing arms for such a crew to wreak vengeance on their neighbors.

But they gave him small time for sentiment of this brand. They clustered round him with leaping hands, till the morning sea fowl fled affrighted from the beach. El Senor Capitan Inglese was the saviour of Cuba, and let every one remember it. Alone, with his unarmed vessel, he had sunk a warship of their hated enemies; and they prayed him (in their florid compliment) to stay on the island and rule over them as king.

But the little sailor took them literally. "What's this?" he said; "you want me to be your blooming king?"

"El rey!" they shouted. "El rey de los Cubanos!"

"By James," said Kettle. "I'll do it. I was never asked to be a king before, and the chance may never come again. Besides, I'm out of a berth just now, and England will be too hot to hold me yet awhile. Yes, I'll stay and boss you, and if you can act half as ugly as you look we'll give the Dons a lively time. Only remember there's no tomfoolery about me. If I am king of this show I'm going to carry a full king's ticket, and if there's any man tries to meddle without being invited that man will go to his own funeral before he can think twice. And now we'll just begin business at once. Off with those hatches and break out that cargo. I've been at some pains to run these guns out here, so be careful in carrying them up the beach. Jump lively now, you black-faced scum."

Carnforth listened with staring eyes. What sort of broil was this truculent little scamp going to mix in next? He knew enough of Spanish character to understand clearly that the offer of the crown was merely an empty civility; he understood enough of Kettle to be sure he had not taken it as such and would assert his rights to the bitter end. And when he thought of what that end must inevitably be he sighed over Owen Kettle's fate.

CROWN AND GARROTE.

"We will garrote el Senor Kettle with due form and ceremony," said the mulatto, with an ugly smile. "The saints must have sent us this machine on purpose."

He threw away the cigarette stump from his yellow fingers, and began to knot a running bowline on the end of a rawhide rope. "I will do myself the honor of capturing him. He covered me with that revolver of his this morning and put me to shame before the men. I have not forgotten."

"And the other Englishman?" said the ex-priest. "He fought well for us in the morning. He is brave."

"And so is far too dangerous to be left alive, padre, after we garrote the sailor."

"My dear Cuchillo," said the ecclesiastic, "you are so abominably bloodthirsty. But I suppose you are right. I will come with you, and if the man shows trouble, I will shoot him where he sits." He and the mulatto got up as he spoke, and the other men rose also, and the six of them left the ingenio silently on the side away from the camp. The jungle growths of the ruined plantation swallowed them out of sight. They held along their way silently and confidently, like men well skilled in woodcraft. With primitive cunning they had arranged to make their attack from the rear.

The noise of their chatter ceased, and from the distance there went up into the hot, tropical night faint snatches of the "Swanee River," sung by a Louisiana negro, who had grown delirious from a wound.

In the meanwhile the two Englishmen were taking their tobacco barely a couple of hundred yards away. They had built a small fire of green wood, and were sitting in the alley of smoke as some refuge from the swarming mosquitos, and the conversation ran upon themselves and their own prospects.

"I don't want to mess about with a crown," Capt. Kettle was saying. "A cheese-cutter cap's good enough for me, or, seeing that Cuba's hot, a pith helmet might be preferable, if we are going in for luxury." He peered through the smoke wreaths at the camp of the revolutionists, a naked bivouac chopped from amongst the canes, and strewn with sleeping men who moaned in their dreams. The ruined ingenio at the further side had its white walls smeared with smoke. The place ached with poverty and squalor.

"Not that there seems much luxury here," he went on. "These beauties haven't a sound pair of breeches amongst them, and if it wasn't for the rifles and ammunition we brought ashore from the poor old Sultan, sir, I'd say they'd just starve to death before they kicked the Spaniards out of the island. But if ugliness mean pluck, there should be none better as fighting men; and when we get to bossing them properly you'll see we shall just make this revolutionary business hum. You are going to stay on and help, Mr. Carnforth?"

The big man in the shooting coat gave a rueful laugh. "You've got my promise, Kettle. I don't see any way of backing out of it."

"I thank you for that, sir," said the sailor with a bow. "When I come to be formally made king of these Cubans, you shall find I am not ungrateful. I am not a man to neglect either my friends or my enemies.

"You shall sign on as prime minister, Mr. Carnforth, when we get the show regularly in commission, and I'll see you make a good thing out of it. Don't you act the notion it'll be a bit like the dreary business you were used to in parliament in England. Empty talk is not to my taste, and I'll not set up a parliament here to encourage it. I'm going to hold a full king's ticket myself, and it won't do for anyone to forget it."

"You seem very anxious for power, captain."

"It's a fact, sir," said the other with a sigh. "I do like to have the ordering of men. But don't you think that's the only reason I'm taking on with this racket. I'm a man with an income to make, and I'm out of a berth elsewhere. I'm a man with a family, sir."

"I am a bachelor," said Carnforth, "and I'm thanking heaven for it this minute. Doesn't it strike you, captain, that this is no sort of a job for a married man? Can't you see it's far too risky?"

"Big pay, big risk; that's always the way, sir, and as I've faced ugly places before and come out on top side, there's no reason why I shouldn't do it again here. Indeed, it's the thought of my wife that's principally pushing me on. During all the time we've been together, Mr. Carnforth, I've never been able to give Mrs. Kettle the place I'd wish.

"She was brought up, sir, as the daughter of a minister of religion, and splendidly educated; she can play the harmonium and do crewel work; and, though I'll not deny I married her from behind a bar, I may tell you she only took to business from a liking to see society." He looked out dreamily through the smoke at the fireflies which were winking across the black rim of the forest.

"I'd like to see her, Mr. Carnforth, with gold brooches and chains and a black satin dress and a bonnet that cost 20 shillings, sitting in government house, with the British consul on the mat before her, waiting till she chose to ask him to take a chair and talk. She'd fill the position splendidly, and I've just got to wade in and get it for her."

The little man broke off and stared out at the fireflies, and Carnforth coughed the wood smoke from his lungs and rammed fresh tobacco into his pipe. He was a man with a fine sense of humor and he appreciated to the full the ludicrousness of Kettle's pretensions. The sailor had run a cargo of much-wanted contraband of war onto the Cuban beach, had sunk a Spanish cruiser in the process and had received effusive thanks.

But he had taken the florid metaphor of the country to mean a literal offer, and when in their complimentary phrase they shouted that he should be king, a king from that moment he intended to be. The comedy of the situation was irresistible.

But at the same time Mr. Martin Carnforth was a man of wealth, and a man (in England) of assured position; and he could not avoid seeing that by his present association with Capt. Owen Kettle he was flirting with ugly tragedy every moment that he lived. Yet here he was pinned, not only to keep in the man's society, but to help him in his mad endeavors.

He would gladly have forfeited half his fortune to be snugly back in St. Stephen's, Westminster, clear of the mess; but escape was out of the question; and, moreover, he knew quite well that trying to make Kettle appreciate his true position would be like an attempt to reason with the winds or the surf on an ocean beach. So he held his tongue, and did as he was bidden. He was a man of physical bravery, and the rush of actual fighting that morning had come pleasantly to him.

It was only when he thought of the certain and treacherous dangers of the future, and the cozy niche that awaited him at home in England, that his throat tickled with apprehension, and he caressed with affectionate fingers the region of his carotids. And if he had known that at that precise moment the ex-priest, and the mulatto they called el Cuchillo, and the others of the insurgent leaders were stalking him with a view to capture and execution, it is probable that he would have felt even still more disturbed.

"We did well in that fight this morning," said Kettle presently, as he drew his eyes away from the light-snaps of the fireflies, and shut them to keep out the sting of the wood smoke. "You've been shot at before, sir?"

"Never," said Carnforth.

"You couldn't have been cooler, sir, if you'd been at sea all your life, and seen pins flying every watch. Do you know, I've been thinking it over, and I'm beginning to fancy that perhaps our black and yellow mongrels weren't quite such cowards as I said. I know they did scuttle to the bushes like rabbits so soon as ever a gun was fired, but then their business is to shoot these Spanish soldiers and not get shot back, and so, perhaps, they were right to keep to their own way.

"Anyway, we licked them, and that means getting on towards Mrs. Kettle's being a queen. But that murdering the wounded afterward was more than I can stand, and it has got to be put a stop to."

"You didn't make yourself popular over it."

"I am not usually liked when I am captain," said Kettle grimly.

"Well, skipper, I don't, as a rule, agree with your methods, as you know, but here I'm with you all the way. Your excellent subjects are a great deal too barbarous for my taste."

"They are wholly brutes, and that's a fact," said Capt. Kettle, "and I expect a good many of them will be hurt whilst I'm teaching them manners. But they've got to learn this lesson first of all: They're to treat their prisoners decently, or else let them go, or else shoot them clean and dead in the first instance whilst they're still on the run. I'm a man myself, Mr. Carnforth, that can do a deal in hot blood; but afterward, when the poor brutes are on the ground, I want to go round with sticking plaster, and not a knife to slit their throats."

"It will take a tolerable amount of trouble to drum that into this crew. A Spaniard on the warpath is not merciful; an African is a barbarian; but make a cross of the two (as you get here) and you turn out the most unutterable savage on the face of the earth."

"They will not be taught by kindness alone," said Capt. Kettle suggestively. "I've got heavy hands, and I sha'n't be afraid to use them. It's a job," he added with a sigh, "which will not come new to me. I've put to sea with some of the worst toughs that ever wrote their crosses before a shipping master, and none of them can ever say they got the top side of me yet."

He was about to say more, but at that moment speech was taken from him. A long rawhide rope suddenly flicked out into the air like a slim, black snake; the noose at its end for an instant poised open-mouthed above him and then it descended around his elbows and was as simultaneously plucked taut by unseen hands behind the shelter of the jungle. Capt. Kettle struggled like a wildcat to release himself, but four lithe, bony men threw themselves upon him, twisted his arms behind his back and made them fast there with other thongs of rawhide.

Carnforth did nothing to help. At the first alarm that burly gentleman had looked up and discovered a rifle muzzle, not 10 feet off, pointed squarely at his breast. The voice of the ex-priest came from behind the rifle and assured him in mild, unctuous tones that the least movement would secure him a quick and instant passage to one or other of the next worlds. And Martin Carnforth surrendered without terms. When the four men had finished their other business they came and roped him up also.

The mulatto strode out from the cover and flicked the ashes of a cigarette into Kettle's face. "El rey," he said, "de los Cubanos must have his power limited. He has come where he was not wanted, he has done what was forbidden and shortly he will taste the consequences."

"You gingerbread-colored beast," retorted Capt. Kettle, "you shame of your mother, I made a big mistake when I did not shoot you in the morning."

The mulatto pressed the lighted end of his cigarette against Kettle's forehead. "I will trouble you," he said, "to keep silence for the present. At dawn you will be put upon trial, and then you may speak. But till then (and the sun will not rise for another three hours yet), if you talk, you will earn a painful burn for each sentence.

"You are a man accustomed to having your own way, senor; I am another; and as at present I possess the upper hand, your will has got to bend to mine. The process, I can well imagine, will be distasteful to you. It was distasteful to me when I looked down your revolver muzzle over the affair of those prisoners. But I do not think you will be foolish enough to earn torture uselessly."

Kettle glared, but with an effort held his tongue. He understood he was in a very tight place. And for the present the only thing remaining for him was to bide his time. He quite recognized that he was in dangerous hands. The mulatto was a man of education, who had been brought up in an American college, and who had learned in the States to hate his white father and loathe his black mother with a ferocity which nothing but that atmosphere could foster.

He was a fellow living on the borderland of the two primitive colors, and his whole life was soured by the pigment in his skin. As a white man he would have been a genius; as a black he would have become a star; but as a mulatto he was merely a suave and brilliant savage, thirsting for vengeance against the whole of the human race. He had entered this Cuban revolution through no taint of patriotism, but merely from the lust for cruelty. By sheer daring and ability he had raised himself from the ranks to supreme command of the revolutionists, and he was not likely to let so appetizing a situation slip from his fingers for even a few short hours without exacting a bitter retribution when the chance was put in his way.

Carnforth lifted up his voice in expostulation, but was quickly silenced by the promise of branding from the cigarette end if he did not choose to hold his tongue. Quiet fell over the group. The only sounds were scraps of the "Swanee river" sung by the wounded negro in his delirium from somewhere in the distance:

"Still longing for the old plantation,
And for the old folks at home."

came the words in a thin quavering tenor, and Carnforth, with a sigh, thought how well he could indorse them.

The first glow of morning saw the camp aroused, and half an hour later the court was ranged. The self-styled judges sat under the whitewashed plazza of the ruined house; the motley troops faced them in an irregular ring 20 yards away; and the two prisoners, with an armed man to guard each, stood on the open ground between.

El Cuchillo was himself principal spokesman and proceedings were carried on in Spanish and English alternately. The crime of Capt. Kettle was set forth in a dozen words. He had stopped the rightful execution of prisoners, and had let them go free.

"You had no place to jail them," said Carnforth in defence.

The mulatto pointed a thin yellow finger at the sun-baked ground in front of the plazza. "We have the earth," he said. "Give them to the earth, and she will keep them gaoled so fast that they will never fight against us more. It is a war here to the knife on both sides. The Spanish troops kill us when they catch, and we do the like by them. It is right that it should be so. We do not want quarter at their hands; neither do we wish them to remain alive upon Cuba. Three Spanish soldiers were ours a few hours ago. Our cause demanded that their lives should have been taken away. And yet they were set free."

"Yes," broke in Kettle, "and, by James, that's a thing you ought to sing small about. Here's you, 6 officers and 150 men, all armed. Here's me, a common low-down, foul-of-his-luck Britisher, with a vinegar tongue and a 30-shilling pistol. You said the beggars should be hanged; I said they shouldn't; and, by James, I scared the whole caboodle of you with just one half an ugly look, and got my own blessed way. O, I do say you are a holy crowd."

Carnforth stamped in anger. It seemed to him that this truculent little sailor was deliberately inviting their captors to murder the pair of them out of hand. He understood that Kettle was bitterly disappointed at having his bubble about the kingship so ruthlessly pricked, but with this recklessness which was snatching away their only chance of escape, he could have no sympathy. He was unprepared, however, for his comrade's next remark.

"Don't think I'd any help from Mr. Carnforth here. He's a member of parliament in London, and is far too much of a gentleman to concern himself with your fourpenny-ha'penny matters here. He warned me before I began that being king of the whole of your rotten island wasn't worth a dish of beans; but I wouldn't believe him till I'd seen how it was for myself.

"I'm here now through my own fault; I ought to have remembered that niggers and yellow bellies, and white men who have forgotten their color, could have no spark of gratitude. I'll not deny, too, that I got to thinking about those fireflies, and so wasn't keeping a proper watch; but here I am, lashed

Free Treatment for Sick Kidneys
WRITE FOR GIN PILLS
If you have suffered for years with kidney trouble—if you know your kidneys are sick, but have not been able to find anything that will help you—or if you suspect that you have kidney disease, write for a sample of GIN PILLS, the pills that cure. We don't ask you to spend a single penny, or promise to spend any. Simply take the box of pills which we send you free of charge. We leave it to you whether or not you will take any more after the sample box is gone.
RAT PORTAGE, October, 1905
I was troubled for about two years with kidney trouble, so common among railway men. I doctored in the regular way and took a great deal of medicine, but received no benefit. My fireman recommended Gin Pills, and I am pleased to state that after taking the first box I got relief, and while I am not taking them regularly, if I feel any indications of a return of the trouble, a few doses puts me all right again.
CHAS. SIMMONS, C.P.R. Engineer.
This letter is the experience of hundreds. They try doctors and drugs without relief, but they find the cure for their trouble in GIN PILLS. Take advantage of our generous offer. Mention in what paper you saw this, with your name and address, and we will send you, absolutely free of charge, a sample box of GIN PILLS. They are sold by all druggists at 50c a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50.

Bowel Troubles of Childhood
It is impossible to exaggerate the value of FRUIT-A-TIVES as a medicine for children. They contain no alcohol — no morphine or cocaine—no dangerous drugs of any kind.
Fruit-a-tives are fruit juices—concentrated and combined with the most valuable tonics and internal antiseptics known to medicine.
Fruit-a-tives are free of calomel, cascara, senna and the host of violent purgatives that simply act by irritating the bowels. Fruit-a-tives are made from fruit and tonics and are pleasant to take, and so mild in their action that they never gripe or pain.
During the summer, when children are so apt to eat improperly, mothers should have a box of Fruit-a-tives always handy.
At the first sign of Diarrhoea, Indigestion, Headaches, Biliousness, Peevishness, Vomiting—give Fruit-a-tives according to directions. These splendid fruit liver tablets will instantly correct faulty digestion—clean and sweeten the stomach—regulate the bowels, kidneys and skin—and so invigorate and strengthen the whole system, that the little ones can quickly throw off the temporary illness.
Get a box now—to-day. 50c. a box or 6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price, if your druggist does not handle them.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

FARM NOTES.

The successful feeder is the liberal feeder.

Do not put poor food into the cow and expect to take out golden butter. they can be had without a cash out- and trifling losses waste handsome profits.

Dirty dairy rooms and unclean utensils are rich fields for the growth of ill flavored butter and milk germs.

Vegetables, fruit and berries are both necessities and luxuries, but the ycan be had without a cash outlay, and should be made to take the place of much expensive grocery stuff.

The traditional little farm well tilled and the little barn well filled is sufficient for contentment. Many a farmer has lost all peace in life through a mortgage put on to build a bigger barn or to take in more land than he could till.

Cattle at pasturage weed out the grass and leave the bushes and the weeds. This foul growth scatters its seeds into the sod all ready to sprout when the land is turned for cultivation. Hence, contrary to a common impression, newly plowed pastureland is often more weedy than fields devoted to tillage.

At a Farmers' Institute the other day somebody asked Mr. Terry, the Ohio potato expert, whether it was necessary "to plant potatoes with reference to the moon." Mr. Terry brought down the house by replying dryly that he thought it was important to plant potatoes in the light of the moon, because the planter "could see so much better how to do the work."

Good farm managers are not very easy to find, for the reason that the man who can make a farm pay generally prefers to run a place of his own. There are a few men who can take a rich man's expensive farm, carry it on in the showy way which the owner desires for his amusement, and at the same time make it a paying operation. Naturally, such men are in good demand.

Farmer Slow insists that poultry is a luxury, therefore not to be included in the home bill of fare. Slow's stock of market poultry includes a half dozen long-spurred roosters needlessly kept over from last winter and a number of superannuated hens on a vacation from June to April — the whole lot not worth over ten or twelve cents a pound. When the butcher cart comes around Slow buys steak at 20 cents a pound.

To improve dairy profits, begin the reform right away. Better cows, better rations, regular feeding, warm but sufficiently airy stables, good water clean, careful and gentle treatment, all these are steps which, taken together, go far to bridge over difference between loss and profit. In fact, the farmer who has the gumption to make such improvements may safely be trusted to conduct the details and the selling part of the business in an effective manner.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

Tree Planting.

A writer on farm topics urges a national organization of farmers for the encouragement of systematic and extensive tree planting, for he sees great wealth in timber land for future generations. It is unfortunate that in the worry and hurry of money making in the present day people are not seriously inclined to sow that their grandsons, or some one else's grandsons, may reap.

The Tussock Moth.

The Province of Quebec is threatened with a plague of the tussock moth which is very numerous in the region of Montreal and attacks many kinds of trees. The authorities are fighting the pest by destroying their nests. The nests resemble white patches of cobweb and contain hundreds of eggs which will hatch in the spring.

Fascinating Tree Work.

Grafting and budding young trees is fascinating work for ladies, and we know several who can do a good, neat bit of work. Quick, precise movements are requisite and the ladies pick it up readily. Every boy should learn the process. One farmer's son recently applied for work on a ranch "We have plenty of farm help," said the owner, "but I wish I could get a man who understands grafting and budding. If you can do that I will pay you high wages and board the year round."

FROM A SHEPHERD'S NOTE BOOK.

Weeds and sheep don't get along together.

Water and shade are very important at this season.

Don't allow your sheep to drink from stagnant pools.

Don't use a ram lamb while a good yearling is available.

Where sheep are fed heavily, variety is the spice of life.

Our this month's wool markets are worthy of careful study.

To sell or not to sell, is the question with the wool grower.

You can afford to attend to both form and fleece these days.

Don't forget that water is half the sheep's living in summer.

The successful shepherd is the one that carefully cares for the little things. in every department.

There are two kinds of dogs, the one is the friend of the shepherd, the other the enemy of the sheep.

Do animals think? This is a question that is attracting much attention in agricultural journals at present. Do you think that sheep think, when you put them into the dipping vat, that it is for their good, even after they have experienced the soothing effect following the destruction of a crop of ticks with which their bodies may have been infested? If so, why do they struggle to escape such a dipping? Sheep respond to the rattle of the grain pail and start at the bark of a dog—for why?

AGRICULTURAL.

The following method of draining may be of service, being of a practical nature.

To secure satisfactory results careful study should first of all be given to the best manner of laying out a system of drains; the aim being to secure the greatest fall, the least outlay for tile, and least amount of digging, and the most perfect drainage.

For underdraining there is nothing better than the ordinary round drain tile. The size to be used can only be decided by a study of the condition under which the drain is to work. They should be large enough to carry off in twenty-four to forty-eight hours, the surplus water from the heaviest rains, but it is important that they should not be too large, as the cost of underdraining is governed largely by the size of the tile used. It may be mentioned that the capacity of round water pipes is in proportion to the squares of their diameters. That under the same conditions, a two inch pipe will carry even more than this proportion, because of the greater friction in the small pipe. In ordinary cases five or six inch tile are recommended for the lower part of a main drain, and four inch for the upper portion; for the branches 2 1-2 to three inches are preferable.

It is seldom necessary to lay drains more than four feet below the surface and in most cases 2 1-2 to 3 feet will be found sufficient. The proper distance between branch drains depends upon the quantity of water to be carried and the nature of the subsoil. In general practice the lines of tile are usually placed from fifty to one hundred feet apart. In a tenacious clay soil, however, thirty feet would not be too close.

The drain may be opened up in the first place by passing three or four times along the same track with an ordinary plow. Then the subsoil may be broken up with a good, strong subsoil plow. In this way the earth may be loosened to a depth of two feet or more and thrown out with narrow shovels. The bottom of the drain should be kept straight by means of a line stretched tightly near the ground and about four inches back from the edge. In ordinary cases the ditch should not be more than a foot wide at the top, and four to six inches at the bottom, the width of course increasing in proportion to the depth of the drain and the size of the tile.

As a rule drains should be given as much fall as possible, and the gradient should not be less than two inches per hundred feet, if this can be secured. Careful levelling is necessary to insure a uniform fall throughout the course of a drain. As a simple method for this purpose would recommend the ditches to use several crossheads made from strips of inch boards three to four inches wide. The length of the standard varies according to the depth of the drain. A cross piece about two feet long is nailed on the top of the standard. These crossheads are then placed along the line of the ditch so that the cross pieces are in line. The proper grade is ascertained by the use of the ordinary spirit level. When ready to lay the tile a standard should be set at the bottom of the drain and marked in line with the top of the crossheads. This will, by testing every few feet, give a true grade for the tiles.

When the bottom of the drain has been brought to the proper grade and shape, the tile should be laid very carefully to secure perfectly close joints. With the aid of a tile hook they may be placed rapidly and accurately without getting into the ditch, and stepping carefully on each tile as laid. In covering it is preferable to put the surface soil next the tiles, for if properly packed, it will prevent the subsoil from getting in at the joints. The laying should begin at the outlet of the main drain and where connection is made with branch lines, enough of the branch should be laid to permit the main to be partly filled in.

All junctions of branches with the main line should be made at an acute angle, or where the fall is sufficient, from above the axis of the main. This is necessary in order to prevent the deposit of silt and the consequent blocking of the tile at the junction.

Specially made joint tile may be used or the connection may be made by cutting a hole in the main tile with a tile pick. The outlet of the drain should be so placed that there will be a free flow of water. If protected by masonry and a grating to keep out animals, so much the better. Glazed sewer pipe or glazed drain tile may be used with advantage for the last ten or fifteen feet to prevent injury from the frost.

It should be berne in mind that trees should not be allowed to grow near a line of tile, through which water flows during the greater part of the year, as the roots are apt to enter at the joints in search of water, and in course of time close the drain. Willows and poplars are particularly objectionable in this respect.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

Veal Souffle.

This is a delicious entree and particularly useful when chickens are high. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, and when dissolved stir in a tablespoonful of flour. Season with cayenne pepper, grated nutmeg, a teaspoonful of anchovy sauce and salt. Stir the salt till thoroughly smooth, add to it half a pint of chopped cooked veal and heat all together. Draw the pan to the side of the fire, and add the beaten yolks of two eggs. When the mixture has cooled sufficiently, add the beaten whites of the eggs. Place all in a buttered mould or basin and steam for an hour. Serve, turned out on a hot dish, with a good white sauce poured round.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Prepare the tomato by taking out the stalk and a small quantity of the pulp, so as to make a hole. Put the pulp so removed into a basin, mash it up, mix with a few breadcrumbs, chopped parsley, herbs, butter, pepper and salt and beaten egg to bind. Fill the tomatoes with this force-meat, sprinkle a few crumbs over the top, and bake for half an hour.

Cold Meat Fritters.

Put one ounce of butter in a saucepan to melt, then mix into it one ounce of flour and a gill of milk; boil up, when it will become very thick and leave the sides easily; mix into it about one-quarter pound of any cold meat, finely chopped, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, the juice of half a lemon, pepper and salt. Leavet the mixture until cold, shape into cork or balls, with the hands dipped occasionally in flour to prevent sticking. Dip into the following batter and fry in boiling fat or lard. Lightly beat one egg in one gill of milk, and beat into it lightly one ounce of flour.

A Good Salad.

Waldorf salad, made of celery and tart apples, with a mayonnaise dressing, is improved by the addition of a little freshly grated cocoanut sprinkled over the top.

GINSENG THE CHINESE CUREALL

It has often been asserted that, next to tea, ginseng is the most celebrated plant in all the Orient. It may well be termed the cureall, as the Chinese have a wonderful faith in its curative and strengthening properties, for which reason it has been styled the "cinchona of China." It is considered to be a cure for fevers and weaknesses of all sorts, the chief and most costly medicine.

The plant is found wild in the mountain forests of eastern Asia, from Nepal to Manchuria, according to a descriptive article in Harper's Weekly. It formerly grew in Fukien, Kiangnan and Shansi, but was supplanted by the Manchurian wild root. The root is carefully hunted by the Manchus, who boast that the weeds of their country are the choice drugs of the Chinese.

The American ginseng hunter goes armed with a pick made of good steel, and very strong, being made similar to the tomahawk, one side having a hatchet blade, the other side a long pick, and hung on a very strong, hardwood handle, the handle serves as a cane when walking tthrough the woods. The blade is used to cut off the tree roots thatt are often in the way, and with the pick tthe ground is loosened up so that the root can be easily removed with the hand. Others use only a picked stick made of some strong, hard wood, which does very well, is always at hand, and can be made in a few moments.

It would be impossible accurately to price ginseng. Some wild roots have been known to realize their weight in gold, while the cultivated variety costs from fifty cents a pound up. Generally speaking, the average prices are, for the best, $12 per pound; fair, $6.50, and ordinary fifty cents to $1 per pound. The value and quality of the root of the four principal producing countries rank as follows: Manchuria, Korea, America and Japan. The cheaper root from Japan is used to adulterate the better article from Manchuria. Some Chinese provinces prefer it white, others a reddish hue, due, it is said, to the ferruginous soil, others asserting it to be due to the peculiar process of clarifying.

NEW AND OLD IN DAIRYING.

The young farmer must be a progressive farmer if he would reap the richest harvest.

A most estimable and well meaning man, who had been a fairly prosperous and successful farmer for more than forty years, and is still in the business, was overheard recently to say that it is pretty hard for a man who had been in the business as long as he had to adopt new methods without pretty good proof that they were better than the old ones.

His old methods may be best for him, it is not our purpose to discuss that question; but we do maintain that they cannot all be strictly adhered to by the modern farmer with the best results or with the same degree of success that has characterized this man's long and prosperous career. For instance, the farmer of to-day, especially if a beginner, should start with the most improved dairy cattle procurable by him, and with the latest and most improved dairy appliances for the production and manufacture of milk, cream and butter, with due regard for raising up young stock to keep good his herd and have some to sell of a superior quality.

One of the main operations in dairying, if not the principal one, is cream separation, several methods of which are now in vogue. In olden times the dairyman knew of but one way of separating cream from milk. That was to set the milk in shallow pans, in a cool, clean place, where, in the course of time, the heavier parts of the fluid settled down, forcing a part of the lighter cream or butter fat to the top, where it was skimmed off by hand to be churned into butter.

Changes were made from time to time in the shape and size of the pans or cans in which the milk was set, and the method of setting, all more or less unsatisfactory and having objectionable features.

The milk and cream were exposed for a considerable time to the surrounding atmosphere, with its accompanying dust, foul odors and changes of temperature all having their effect. At best a portion of the cream was left in the skimmilk and lost for butter purposes.

In course of time the centrifugal cream separator was invented and the handling of milk and cream greatly facilitated. The cream is immediately separated from the milk on its being drawn from the can, without being exposed to any bad condition. Besides, the impurities which exist in all milk are removed, leaving the cream pure and sweet, from which better butter can be made, and for which better prices are realized, if the weekly market reports are any criterion.

The advantages of the centrifugal cream separator are one of the things which the above-mentioned old-time farmer cannot see, but persistently adheres to the old shallow setting, gravity method of raising cream, claiming that way equal, if not superior, to the new idea.

When the superior condition of the fresh skimmed milk for feeding purposes was mentioned he was not so sure about that point.

His argument was that milk contained only a certain per cent. of solid matter, and that the separator removed a greater per cent. than the total solids in the milk, therefore it removes all the solids and some besides from the milk, thus impairing its feeding value.

Now that is where he has an entirely wrong impression, for while the separator does remove in butter fat a greater per cent. than the total solids contained in the milk, it removes but a small part of the solid matter; at least seventy-five per cent. of the most important part of the milk for feeding purposes still remains, the protein and albuminoids being the most essential for the growth of young animals, and they still remain in the milk. Any one who has ever fed separator milk warm from the cow knows it is far superior to the cold, sour milk left from shallow set, gravity separated milk.

It cannot be otherwise, for it is never as near to what nature intended to make it after it is once cold, as it is when fed with the animal heat in it.

The Vermont Experiment Station found in their tests that skimmilk has a feeding value of forty-six cents per hundred pounds.

Another farmer, who is also considered prosperous, keeps his calves, during the winter, in a damp, dark cellar stable, where the sun never penetrates, and where the only light is through one remote window. He said recently that some people thought it better to keep young stock in the dark, as they would sleep more and grow better.

For such as these and other like self-satisfied farmers who persist in sticking to old ideas and methods, this or any other like article will probably have little interest. But there are others whose watchword is "progress," who realize that they live in a progressive age, and that to succeed they must keep abreast with the times and use moden methods even if they are new, and not depend on old methods long ago found inferior, just because some one was successful with them twenty, thirty or fifty years ago. To such we would say, advance. Be not satisfied with things past or present, but study to improve on the methods of others with constantly better methods and appliances.— E. M. Pike, in American Cultivator.

Lard, prime westeru, in tierces, dull, 44s 3d; American refined, in pails, 45s 8d. Turpentine, spirits, steady, 47s 3d.

NEW YORK DAILY MARKET.

New York, Sept. 10.—Butter, strong; receipts, 7063; street price extra creamery, 24½c to 25c. Official prices, creamery, common to extra, 18½c to 24½c; state dairy, common to fancy, 17c to 23½c; renovated, common to extra, 15½c to 21½c; western imitation creamery, firsts, 19c to 20c.

Cheese—Weak; receipts, 984; state, full cream, large fancy, 12⅛c; do., fair to good, 12c to 12½c; small fancy, 12½c; fair to good, 11½c to 12c; inferiors, 10c to 11c; skims, full to best, 2c to 10c.

Eggs—Firm; receipts, 11,835; state, Pennsylvania and nearby fancy selected white, 29c to 30c; do., good to choice, 27c to 28c; mixed extra, 25c to 26c; western firsts, 21½c to 22c (official price western firsts, 21½c); seconds, 20c to 21c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

British Prices Steady—Cattle and Hogs Are Firmer at Chicago.

London, Sept. 10.—Canadian cattle in the British markets are quoted at 9½c to 11½c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 8½c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 12½c to 15½c per lb.

TORONTO JUNCTION LIVE STOCK.

Toronto Junction, Sept. 10.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 97 car loads, composed of 1864 cattle, 3 hogs, 258 sheep, 24 calves.

Exporters.

The best loads of shipping cattle sold from $4.75 to $4.90, with one load at $5 per cwt. The common to medium exporters sold from $4.25 to $4.60 per cwt. Export bulls were few in number and sold at $3.75 to $4.30. More good quality bulls would have sold.

Butchers.

Not many good butchers' cattle were offered, not enough to supply the demand. All good butchers' cattle were readily picked up at about the same prices as were recorded last week. The common half-finished were bought, but the market for them was slow in comparison with the best grades. Choice picked lots sold at $4.50 to $4.70 per cwt.; loads of good, $4.35 to $4.50; medium, $3.90 to $4.20; common, at $3.65 to $3.85; cows, from $2.50 to $3.75 per cwt.

Milch Cows.

The quality of the ten milkers and springers offered was above the average, generally speaking, selling from $35 to $63 each, the bulk going between $47 and $58 each.

Veal Calves.

The quality of the 24 veal calves offered was generally good, in fact some of them were choice and sold at $4 to $7 per cwt., the bulk going from $5 to $6 per cwt. There were several choice quality calves that were a little too heavy, being in the neighborhood of 300 lbs., which is about 100 lbs. too much to suit the trade.

Sheep and Lambs.

Over 250 sheep and lambs were sold as follows: Export ewes, $4 to $4.50 per cwt.; bucks, at $3 to $3.50 per cwt.; lambs, at $5.75 to $6 per cwt.

Hogs.

As usual few hogs are offered on this market on Monday, only 3 being delivered to-day. Mr. Kennedy reports prices unchanged at $6.40 for selects, and $6.15 for lights.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—(Special.)—Cables from Liverpool and London on Canadian cattle were weaker and prices show a decline of half cent, with sales in Liverpool at 10½c to 11c and in London, at 11c. Exports last week were 6610 cattle; receipts to-day were 1500 cattle, 50 milch cows, 1000 sheep and lambs, 350 hogs, 100 calves. The butchers were out strong and trade was good, but prices had a downward tendency. Prime beeves sold at 4¼c to 4½c per lb., and a choice pair brought $4.60 per cwt. Pretty good cattle sold at from 3c to 4c and the common stock at 2½c to 3c per lb. Milch cows sold at from $25 to $30 each. Calves sold at from $2.50 to $10 each. Sheep are lower, selling at from 3½c to 4c per lb. A number of good lambs were bought for American markets at 5⅜c per lb. Fat hogs sold at from 6⅞c to 7c per lb.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, Sept. 10.—Cattle—Receipts, 5700 head; good, active and steady; common, slow, 10c lower; prime steers, $5.60 to $6.25; a few, $6.20; shipping, $5.00 to $5.65; butchers', $4.25 to $5.25; heifers, $3.30 to $5.25; cows, $3 to $4.35; bulls, $2.50 to $4.25; stockers and feeders, $2.75 to $4.15; stock heifers, $2.50 to $3; fresh cows, slow, $2 lower; springers, steady, $18 to $52.

Veals—Receipts, 1400 head; active and firm; $4.25 to $8.50; a few, $8.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,800 head; active, steady to shade higher; heavy, $6.30 to $6.80; mixed, $6.80 to $6.85; yorkers, $6.75 to $6.85; pigs, $6.50 to $6.60; roughs, $5.25 to $5.50; stags, $4 to $4.50; dairies, $6 to $6.70.

NEW YORK LIVE STOCK.

New York, Sept. 10.—Beeves—Receipts, 5474; steers, opened slow; closed firm for medium and good; others, steady. Bologna bulls, 10c to 15c higher; others, steady; medium and common cows, strong; fat cows, rather easier; steers, $4.25 to $6. Bulls, $2.50 to $3.90; cows, $1.25 to $4.20; few extra fat do., $4.25 to $4.40. Exports to-morrow, 960 cattle and 3300 quarters of beef.

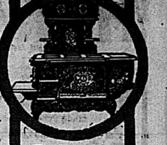
Calves—Receipts, 2050; veals, steady; grassers, lower. Veals, $5 to $8.75; extra, $9; throw-outs, $4 to $4.50; grassers and buttermilks, $3.25 to $4; few feeders, $4.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 13,702; sheep, steady; lambs, 25c to 50c lower; sheep, $3.50 to $5.50; culls, $1.50 to $3; lambs, $7 to $8.50; one car, $8.75; culls, $5 to $5.50; Canada lambs, $8.30 to $8.37½.

Hogs—Receipts, 11,136; market, firm. State and Pennsylvania hogs, $6.80 to $7.

The Oven That Ends Guesswork

Before you put the roast in an Imperial Oxford oven, let the draft bring the heat to the right point. You'll know when it gets there if you'll look at the oven thermometer. After the roast goes in, you can know (not guess) it will be cooked right in a certain definite time. There's no ups-and-downs to the oven-heat in a range built as this one is — the diffusive oven-flue takes all the guess work out of cooking, all the drudgery out of oven-use.



That Rack That Ends Bother

When the roast needs basting, pull forth the Imperial Oxford draw-out oven rack,—roast and all—slide it right out where you can get at it. Needn't reach in and scorch your fingers nor sear your wrists,—baste it in comfort. That one thing alone—the draw-out rack—ought to make you like this range above all ranges. And that's only one of the twelve better things about this range. Come and look.

WATERLOO.

Grouchy Was Solely to Blame For the Downfall of Napoleon.

Napoleon would have won the battle of Waterloo had Grouchy prevented the junction of the Prussians with the English army, because he would not have had to fight two battles at once. Few persons realize that the so called battle of Waterloo was in reality a double battle, somewhat like Jena and Auerstadt. Napoleon fought one battle at Waterloo against the English. On the arrival of the Prussians he was forced to go in person toward Planchenoit and there fight another battle against the Prussian army, leaving to Ney the conduct of the troops at Waterloo. It is a well known maxim in war that a very great or decisive victory cannot be gained unless one commander makes a serious blunder of which the other takes immediate advantage. It is very evident that the fact of the emperor having to fight two battles at once instead of concentrating his attention on one alone enormously increased the possibility of a mistake. Moreover, Napoleon did not have the able lieutenants of his former campaigns. Desaix, Kleber, Lannes and Bessieres were dead, Massena and Macdonald had taken the oath of allegiance to the Bourbons, and Murat had split with the emperor. Napoleon's personal attention was therefore imperative. To Grouchy alone all blame must be attributed, for had he prevented the union of the Prussians with the English the emperor would have had to fight only one battle at a time and could have given his entire personal attention to that one battle.

In the second place, Napoleon would not have been forced to fight with 71,947 men against two armies numbering about 125,000—nearly two to one against him. He would have had 71,947 good soldiers pitted against a raw, undisciplined army, of 67,661 men under the Duke of Wellington, which was not only inferior in mere numbers, but far inferior in morale and experience. The chances would have been greatly in favor of the French. Then, too, the French army was commanded by the acknowledged master of modern warfare, whose brilliant successes at Rivoli, Marengo, Austerlitz, Jena, Friedland, Wagram, the Borodino and Dresden had dazzled the whole world. Until then Napoleon had never been defeated in any great decisive battle except Leipsic, and the French were strong in their confidence of the emperor's success. Two of the best writers on the Waterloo campaign, Shaw-Kennedy and Sibourne, both Englishmen, concur in saying that had Grouchy kept the Prussians away the English army would have been badly beaten. This view is also held by the ablest writer of all, Mr. Ropes.

Doctor Prentice System

On and after Monday, the 10th Sept., we will be prepared to make appointments and examinations, as well as fitting the "Prentice Lens" by the "Prentice System," for any parties who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity to get the wonderful help this special system affords, not only in the relief of vision, but in the cure of many distressing nervous diseases produced by Brain Strain through the visual centres. We have had not only five weeks of personal instructions from Dr. Prentice, but have been his assistant in the examination and fitting of hundreds of the most difficult and complicated cases, with very gratifying results to the parties concerned, and as we are aware there are many people who were anxious to consult him, but have not been able to do so, we feel confident we can give them the same satisfactory results. Consultation free. Appointments made to suit the parties concerned.

City Fathers Meet After Long Vacation.

Interesting Matters Discussed Last Night--Some Information About the Tax Rolls--Congratulatory Resolution to Board of Trade Delegates--Surveyors Make a Discovery--Many Pertinent Questions.

When the City Council met last evening after some weeks' vacation, His Worship Mayor Sulman said he was pleased to see the aldermen present, and hoped and believed they were prepared to undertake the fall work of the Council with benefit to the citizens. The only absentees was Alderman McCrodan.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Messrs. Northrup & Roberts, asking, on behalf of Mrs. Thomas Kelso, the privilege of making a drain on South George street to connect with the drain on Dundas street, and thence to South John street.

A few accounts were also presented.

COMMITTEE, OF THE WHOLE.

Ald. Panter in the chair.

The reports of the various committees, as already published, were adopted without discussion.

The following accounts were passed:—

O. S. Latta	$ 4.00
W. Palmer	102.60
N. McDonald	55.10
A. L. Geen	10.32
S. Lazier	6.75
A. L. Geen	15.09
Parks pay sheet	15.00
Miss McIninch, re postage	5.00

Ald. Green suggested that the stairway leading to the laboratory over the meat market be painted, also the door and the floor of the room at the head of the stairs.

This matter was left in the hands of Ald. Green, with power to act.

The petition for a sidewalk on a portion of South Dundas street was referred to the Public Works Committee.

The recommendation of the Public Works Committee re repairs to a certain portion of sidewalk on Yeomans street was taken up.

The Surveyor stated that the walk in question was being repaired.

The request of Mr. W. B. Robinson, re a walk leading to his residence from off Albert street, was on motion referred to the Chairman of Public Works to look into.

The request of Mrs. Kelso for a drain on George street was considered.

Ald. Sinclair thought it would not be wise to allow the building of such a drain in order to drain an overflowed cesspool, if such was the case.

At the suggestion of the Mayor the matter was left in the hands of the Surveyor and the Chairman of Public Works, they to inspect the same and report.

AN ADVERTISING BOOKLET.

The Mayor spoke in support of a booklet which it was contemplated to get up, describing the city. He said that a start in this direction should be made in order to have the same printed and distributed. It would no doubt prove to be a wise investment and would in all probability be the means of attracting visitors to the city. The cost for 5,000 would be $175, and as a number would be bought the cost to the city would not be much.

Ald Marsh stated that already enough of the booklets had been spoken for to net the city $50, and more, he had no doubt, would be taken. The book would contain valuable information in reference to the city.

Mayor Sulman said that other cities had such booklets, which were placed in the hands of commercial travellers and others, and they had proved to be beneficial in many respects.

Ald Marsh moved that 5000 booklets, descriptive of Belleville, be printed, and that a special committee, consisting of the Mayor, Ald. Paterson and the mover, be a committee to attend to the issuing of the same.—Carried.

SOME TAX ROLL INFORMATION.

Ald. Marsh stated that $15,000 had been deposited to the credit of the sinking fund this year. The 1904 tax roll was about ready to be returned and the 1905 roll, Mr. Diamond had informed him, would be ready before the end of this year. There had been $65,000 collected on this year's roll, which was some thousands in excess of the collection at the same date in previous years.

HERE'S-A HOWDYDO.

Mayor Sulman stated that the Corby Company had found out, by surveying, that 10 feet of the Leavens coal shed was upon their elevator property, and something would probably have to be done in the matter.

On motion it was referred to the Legal Committee.

It was suggested that the surveyor have certain hydrants painted, these to be used by Mr. C. Cook from which to obtain water for the purpose of watering the streets.

A recommendation from the Industrial Committee was adopted to the effect that the Chairman, Ald. Cooper and Marsh be a committee to ascertain how many power users in the city will undertake to use power to be provided by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and the amount, preparatory to an application being made to the Commission for power for the city of Belleville.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Panter asked what shape the Sewage By-law was in and if the city had lost the $100 deposited.

The Mayor said the $100 deposited had been withdrawn.

Mayor Sulman stated that a slight accident had occurred to the planking on the lower bridge, it not being close to the iron work. He desired to know if that space could not be filled in.

The Surveyor, in reply, said it could, but it would be better to have a space, as at present, to allow the refuse to go through. There was now 18 feet planking on the bridge.

Mayor Sulman called attention to the presence of tar on the water in the harbor which was disagreeable, and also bad for boats. He suggested that it be burned.

Ald. Sinclair said it could be burned, but the expense of putting in the appliance would probably be $200.

The Mayor asked if the lights in the City clock could not be improved? They were not very good.

Ald. Green said he would see about it.

Ald. Panter desired to know what shape the filtering system By-law was in.

The Solicitor said the by-law would have to be submitted again to the ratepayers.

Ald. Panter wanted to know what was to be done with the sewage when this work was undertaken. Would it be burned or emptied into the bay. Dr. Hodgetts, Medical Health Officer, of Toronto, so the speaker was informed, had condemned the emptying of sewage into the bay. The plan should show some definite disposal of it,

The Clerk said a sewage farm would have to be kept or some other scientific means might be adopted to get rid of it.

The Mayor stated that Dr. Hodgetts had not objected to having it carried out into deep water here.

Ald. Green asked where the trunk line would be in West Belleville.

Mayor Sulman — "Down Moira St. and Coleman St. Also a sewer down West Bridge St,

INTRODUCTION OF BY-LAWS.

Ald Green introduced a by-law regulating the tying of horses and other animals on the market square. The by-law prohibits the tying of horses at any place on the market square.

The by-law was passed through its various stages and numbered 1295.

CONGRATULATING THE DELEGATES.

Moved by Ald. Sinclair, seconded by Ald. Green;—

"That this Council, having noted with pleasure the publicity given to our city, through the publication in the leading newspapers of Great Britain of the addresses made of the recent meetings of the Chambers of Commerce, held in London, Eng., by the delegates from the Belleville Board of Trade,

"Therefore be it resolved that this Council place on record its appreciation of the services so gratuitously rendered by Ex-Mayors Johnson and Graham, Col. Ponton and Mr. C. M. Reid in placing the city of Belleville so favorably before the most intelligent people of the old world."

Ald Sinclair said these gentlemen had given Belleville much publicity, and had done so without any expense to the city.

After Ald. Sinclair had spoken in support of the motion it was carried by a standing vote.

Ald. Green called the Council's attention to the second overhead bridge, which is situated on the boundary between the city and the county. It was a dangerous place owing to the bridge and approach being so steep, and a vehicle approaching from the opposite direction cannot be seen.

Ald. Panter and Sinclair spoke in support of having something done in the matter.

Mayor Sulman said the matter, with other matters, might be delegated to the Railway Commission.

The Solicitor said that he had written two days ago to the G.T.R. authorities in reference to this matter, but had had no reply as yet.

It was decided to wait a reply from the railway company.

Mayor Sulman presented the following report of his and the Clerk's attendance in Toronto at the Municipal convention;

To the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville;

Report of the delegates appointed by the Council to attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Union.

Your delegates attended the meeting of the Association, August 29th and 30th, 1906, held in the City buildings, Toronto.

The meeting was well attended by representatives from cities, towns, villages, counties and townships.

Papers were read by Commissioner Hall, of Hamilton, on the industrial development in the municipalities of the province; by Ald. Lyon, of Guelph, on distribution of power by the Hydro-Electric Commission; by W. C. Mikel, of Belleville, on the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, and by Commissioner Forman, of Toronto, on assessment.

The question of electric power received a good deal of attention, and the enthusiastic discussion showed that the municipalities of the province are alive to the advantages of cheap power.

Some useful points were brought out by Commissioner Hall, of Hamilton, as to securing industries, he having charge of this work in Hamilton. His principal recommendations were, shortly: Keep the opportunities and advantages of your town before those who are likely to be attracted by them. Do not be discouraged because success does not come at once. He instanced the case of two large industries that were recently brought to Hamilton from the United States, but only after four years of constant effort. Systematic advertising with a follow-up plan. Get all the citizens to assist in talking up the opportunities and advantages of the town and looking out for industries that may be established here or brought from elsewhere, utilizing those who travel and especially commercial travellers. When strangers come make them feel at home.

On the matter of getting industries your delegates made special enquiry from the delegates from the municipalities which have been most successful in obtaining industries and it was found that the bonus system had a great deal to do with their success, and, what most surprised your delegates, was that in some of the very best and most progressive manufacturing centres the Councils gave exemption from taxation to industries and other bonuses in indirect form without even submitting the question to the vote of the electors, though contrary to law, and what also surprised your delegates, was that they were informed nobody in these places went to law about it and the citizens and newspapers applauded the Councils' action. Of course places which try to live within the law in this matter are greatly handicapped in the race for industries with cities adopting the above tactics.

A number of amendments to the municipal law were recommended, two of the more important of which were;

To make it clear that no person can be a candidate for municipal council if there is any taxes standing against him on any Collector's roll.

To give councils of cities power to have the nomination held on the last Monday in November and the election the following Monday, so that the elections will be over before the Christmas trade begins.

Your delegates brought before the meeting the question as to what should be done with fines imposed by magistrates for offences under the Criminal Code, and it was ascertained that the city of Ottawa, one of the few places that pay such fines to the Provincial Treasurer, had received same back upon application to the Attorney-General's department. This seemed to do away with the necessity for legislation.

C. N. SULMAN, Mayor.
W. C. MIKEL, City Clerk.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The Central Canada Exhibition was formally opened this afternoon by Sir Wilfrid Laurier President White of the Exhibition Association expressed the hope that the Dominion Exhibition might be held in Ottawa next year, which will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the selection of Ottawa as the seat of Government, and the fortieth anniversary of the confederation of the Canadian provinces.

Suffocation From Bedding.

St. Thomas, Sept. 11.—The adjourned inquest into the cause of the death of the infant daughter of Lizzie Smith, for whose supposed murder she and her mother are under arrest, was resumed last night. Dr. Curtis said it had come to its death by strangulation, which might have been caused by the bedding. The inquest was adjourned till Tuesday night.

Motorman Held For Manslaughter.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Henri Sansregret, the motorman of the street car which killed a wealthy but eccentric Scotsman, John Morrison, some weeks ago, has been committed to the Court of King's Bench for trial on a charge of manslaughter. The heirs of the estate have decided to take an action against the street railway company for $25,000 damages.

$4,000,000 In Binder Twine.

Winnipeg, Sept. 11.—J. L. Haycock, binder twine inspector for the Dominion, states that never before had such a quantity of binder twine been used in Canada as this present year. The sales to the farmers totaled $4,000,000, over $500,000 above last year's sales.

Stammer to Yourself.

To the many correspondents who have written inquiries and suggestions as to a cure for stammering we may state that this is not a medical bureau. This writer gave his own method of curing his own particular nervous disorder, which is probably shared by many of his fellow men. Let it be repeated in answer to many who seem to have seen the problem and missed the solution. Consume your own smoke. If you must stammer, try to stammer to yourself. When you have tut-tutted and gur-gurred sufficiently to yourself, you will be ready with the word. It is quite astonishing how soon the inaudible stammer becomes unnecessary and the word is whipped out! But there are some men who hug a stammer—stammering always in the right place—lifting curiosity to tiptoe in the listener. Charles Lamb stammered, but always in the right place, as when he went to buy cheese (the story may be quite untrue). The shopman offered to send it home. Lamb inspected it. Then he asked for a bit of string. "I think," he said, "I could l-l-l-lead it home."—London Spectator.

Not a Clothes Peg.

Peggie Newton had been a faithful household drudge for years, and had not grumbled much when her wages were occasionally passed over. But as time went on, and her salary fell more and more into arrear, she ventured to ask for something "on account."

"Why, haven't I paid you your wages lately, Peg? How careless of me," her mistress said. "I'm sorry I have no money in the house just now, but here's a smart cloak that I've ceased to wear, and which is only a wee bit out of fashion. You'll take it in lieu of wages, won't you?"

"No, ma'am, I'm sure I shan't," said Peg, wrathfully eying the faded old cloak. "A peg I may be by name, but I won't be the sort of peg that people hang castoff clothes on—not if I know it."—London Answers.

Base Slander.

"Your husband," said Mrs. Highmus graciously, "is decidedly interesting and original, even if he does sometimes blow his own horn a little too"—

"It isn't so!" indignantly exclaimed Mrs. Gaswell. "My husband always uses his handkerchief!"

McINTOSH BROS.

LAID THE CORNER-STONE.

Hon. Frank Cochrane Officiates At the Ceremony of the First Canadian Smelter in North Country.

North Bay, Sept. 11.—Two thousand people from the town and district attended the corner-stone laying at the site of the Montreal Refining & Reduction Co.'s plant, at Trout Lake, yesterday afternoon. Special trains were run from New Liskeard, and intervening points, one from Coppercliff, and eight crowded cars carried the North Bay people.

Mayor Purvis presented the civic address to Hon. Frank Cochrane, who laid the stone. The address recited the fact that when the smelter is completed it is hoped to handle all kinds of ore, with a capacity of 500 tons a day. The total cost of the works is placed at $2,000,000, and will employ about 1,000 men.

Mr. Cochrane, in replying, said that since assuming office he had endeavored to put the mining laws on a broader basis, but they were not yet entirely satisfactory, not even to himself. His main object in the new act had been to secure more development, as the more development there was and the better the showing the greater the advantage of the miner with a claim to dispose of. The lack of reduction works was being overcome, and he hoped as great success would follow the refining and smelting industry as had followed the building of the T. & N. O. Railway.

He also hoped that before many years had passed Ontario would not only be refining, but also marketing its own ores.

A. G. Browning, president of the local board of trade, presented the president of the company, E. E. Leonard, M.P., with a lease of the site of the plant.

Mr. Leonard, Hon. Nelson Monteith, F. D. Monk, M.P.; Chas. McCool, M.P.; N. Labrosse, M.P., and the company's engineer, Mr. Brown, spoke. The proceedings terminated with a banquet.

PEACE IS ALL OFF.

President Palma Declares Martial Law in Three Cuban Provinces.

Havana, Sept. 11.—President Palma last night issued a decree suspending all constitutional guarantees in the Provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana and Santa Clara. The law enforcing public order, which is equivalent to martial law, also is put in immediate effect in the three provinces named.

A supplemental decree has been issued ordering that all rebels be arrested and jailed.

The Government also ordered the arrest of practically every prominent Liberal. Alfredo Zayas, president of the Liberal party, and several others have disappeared.

All peace projects are declared off.

Troop Train Attacked.

Havana, Sept. 11.—A troop train from Havana was attacked early yesterday at Artemisa, but the rebels were driven off with machine guns.

LACOMBE FIRE SWEPT.

Loss From Fire In Alberta Town May Total $100,000.

Lacombe, Alberta, Sept. 11.—A serious conflagration occurred Saturday in the down-town business portion of Lacombe, which consumed the following places of business:

The Adelphi Hotel; Charles Atkinson, barber; J. I. Poole, barrister; H. I. MacDiarmid, druggist; A. McCampbell, general merchant; C. L. Darie, lawyer; John McKenty, real estate; E. Titsworth, fruit and billiard hall; Dr. Aunger, dentist; J. H. Rose, druggist; C. R. Denike, jeweler; Morrison & Johnson's warehouse; Blindman Electric Light Co.'s office.

The fire brigade did heroic service, and the citizens did splendid work, forming themselves into a bucket brigade.

It is estimated that the property and stock burned will amount to between $75,000 to $100,000.

Healey Falls Power Lease.

Cobourg, Sept. 11.—The perplexities of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co. were thrashed out at a meeting of the directors here yesterday when a deputation from the Village of Brighton was heard. Having heard Dr. Stinson there was considerable discussion, which was terminated by J. A. Culverwell, the largest stockholder, and with proxies representing a majority of the stock, who moved a resolution that "under the act and our lease of Healey Falls from the Ontario Government, we are compelled to refer the matter to the Hydro-Electric Commission." The motion carried and the meeting was immediately adjourned.

Right of Way Mining Claims.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—The Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Co. has granted a lease for the right of way mining claims in the Cobalt district to a syndicate composed of Messrs. J. P. Dickson, A. W. Fraser, T. A. Bement, J. G. Turriff, M. P., Edmund Seybold and George Goodwin, contractor. Mr. Cecil B. Smith, chairman of the Commission, said that the terms of the new contract are exactly the same as the former one to the Murphy syndicate. The syndicate is to pay a royalty of $50,000 and a flat rate of 25 per cent. on the ore taken out of the mines.

Strike Riot at 'Frisco.

San Francisco, Sept. 11—As an aftermath to the recent strike on the United Railroads, a riot broke out last night when the Street Car Co. started to march about 200 strike-breakers from the car barns to the ferry building. Many shots were fired by the armed guards escorting the men, and a half-dozen persons are reported wounded.

Election In Cardwell.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—For the election of a successor to Mr. Little, who was appointed surrogate clerk of Simcoe, nominations will be held for Cardwell on Friday, Sept. 21, and the election will take place on Sept. 28. A Conservative convention will be held on Thursday at Beeton.

Insurance Actuaries Meet.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—The fifth international congress of insurance actuaries opened here yesterday in the Reichstag building. America, Japan and all the leading countries of Europe were represented.

PERMITS NO DEFENCE

Although Christian Scientist Was on Trial For Crime.

Coroner Dr. Gray at Peterboro, Instead, Denounced the Christian Scientists as Imbeciles, and Said the Government Should Provide a Place of Refuge Where They Could Be Treated —The Jury's Verdict.

Peterboro, Sept. 11.—The jury empaneled to enquire into the cause of the death of Arthur Randlett, who died at the home of R. J. Todd, a local Christian Science practitioner, several weeks ago, at the third sitting of the coroner's inquest last night, returned a verdict that death had been caused by hemorrhage, induced by typhoid fever, and that his death was accelerated by the neglect and want of proper attention by those in charge.

They also recommneded that the Government be memoralized to enact such legislation as would enable such cases to be dealt with properly.

A "Nefarious Process."

The inquest was characterized by sweeping statements by the coroner, Dr. Gray, regarding Christian Science. He termed it a "nefarious process," "public robbery" and a "state of affairs that would not be permitted even in heathen countries." He denounced the Christian Scientists as imbeciles, and said that the Government should provide a place of refuge, where they could be treated.

He would not listen to any evidence from Mr. Todd, although the latter's counsel requested that he be heard.

Many of those present at the inquest were Christian Scientists, and they are highly indignant at the coroner's statements.

"HANDBOOKIES" FOR TRIAL.

Eight Will Appear at General Sessions —Four Discharged.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Magistrate Denison, in the Police Court yesterday, dealt with those who were arrested last summer on the charge of conducting "hand books," and taking bets on the races.

The following were sent for trial to the criminal sessions, which got down to business yesterday:

Jos. Midgley, W. W. Worthington, Herbert Frankland, John Murray, Jos. Wagner, John Goebel, Peter McCormack and Wesley Hastings.

These were dismissed: John Honan, Alex. Smiley, Geo. McSweeney, Albert C. Duncan.

Alleged frequenters dismissed: Edward Ward, Charles Olcott, F. C. Clapp and Morgan Kelly.

Alleged frequenters remanded indefinitely: J. Dunlap, John Anderson and W. O'Connor.

Those committed for trial furnished the same bail as before.

FARMERS ISSUE WRITS.

Toronto & Niagara Power Co. Faces Considerable Litigation.

St. Catharines, Sept. 11.—Yesterday, Lancaster & Campbell, acting on behalf of the farmers of Caister and Gainsboro' townships, issued four writs against the Toronto & Niagara Power Co., three to recover possession of lands and the fourth for damages for trespassing and interfering with the use of the farm. The farmers claim that in one case a roadway, the only access to the farm, has been closed.

Grantham Township Council has granted to the Buffalo, Niagara & Toronto Railway the right of way through the township to this city. The road is a branch of the main line, which runs parallel with the Niagara River.

Dam For the Red River.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—Tenders were received at the Public Works Department yesterday for the construction of a dam and locks on the Red River, near Winnipeg, the construction of which would open navigation from Winnipeg and the Red River through to Lake Winnipeg.

200 SIEDLCE JEWS DIE

Soldiers' Awful Revenge For Killing of Comrades.

Massacre Was Preceded by Terrorist Deeds of Vengeance—Artillery Used in the Streets to Quell the Rioting —Local Governor Practically Gives the Jews Over to the Soldiers— Bloodshed Also at Rudgusowska.

Siedlce, Sept. 11.—A Jewish massacre surpassing in seriousness all previous ones in this vicinity took place here Saturday and Sunday.

It was carefully planned beforehand, the soldiers warning all of the Christian population in advance to hang out their ikons, so that they might remain undisturbed.

Saturday night some terrorists killed two soldiers, and thereupon the Libau regiment broke forth in unrestrained fury. They began murdering Jews on every hand and continued the work of slaughter all Saturday night and all day Sunday.

The ghastly work of murdering and pillaging continued until early yesterday, when Governor-General Skallon telegraphed for permission to use the artillery. Four batteries then opened fire down Penkna, Warsaw and Allena streets, which were inhabited by thousands of Jews. The destruction was horrible.

200 Killed, 1,000 Wounded.

As a result of the general slaughter, it is estimated that fully 200 Jews have been killed and 1,000 wounded. There are 3,000 prisoners in custody, a great many of whom are wounded. Not a soldier was killed.

Yesterday morning squads of soldiers were parading through the streets selling pillaged watches and jewellery. The army officers openly countenanced the selling of loot. The local governor took no steps to prevent the outrage.

The telegraph offices are closed and nobody is allowed on the streets or to leave the town. The refugees continue to crowd to the stations. The soldiers are drunk and behaving with extraordinary brutality.

A delegation of citizens asked the governor to order the troops to cease firing, but the governor replied that the citizens must deliver up their leaders and the revolutionists or otherwise the city would be bombarded.

The authorities assert that 15 terrorists have arrived here from Warsaw, and that they must be arrested before any of the inhabitants are permitted to leave the city.

Massacre Resumed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 11.—(3.35 a. m.) —Advices from Siedlce received during the night are to the effect that the fighting and bombarding of houses, which ceased about midday on Monday, was resumed late in the afternoon, apparently in consequence of Governor Engelke's demand that the Jewish and Polish populace deliver up to him the members of the Jewish Self-Defence Association. Artillery was again brought into action.

Bloodshed at Rudgusowska.

Warsaw, Sept. 11.—A bomb was thrown in the market square of Rudgusowska, Province of Warsaw, yesterday afternoon, killing one policeman and wounding another. Later another bomb was thrown at the entrance of the Zirardow Spinning in this city, severely wounding a policeman and a janitor. The troops thereupon fired in all directions, and killed or wounded forty persons.

DEAD, BUT TELLS TALES.

Secret Memoranda of Suicide Teller Reveals More Forgeries.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Secret memoranda covering illegal transactions in the Stensland Bank were found among the effects of Frank Kowalski, the teller whose suicide followed closely the exposure of the bank's condition.

The record kept by Kowalski indicates apparently that in less than a year Hering, the imprisoned cashier, personally obtained $110,800 of the money of the depositors.

In four months, by the use of "cash tickets," which he placed in the drawer, he obtained $8,000 more, and in another month $3,000.

Americanists Officers.

Quebec, Sept. 11.—The fifteen International Congress of Americanists opened yesterday morning at the Legislative Assembly chamber, Parliament Buildings. About one hundred scientists from all parts of America, and delegates from European countries, were present.

The new officers elected are: President, Dr. R. Bell, Ottawa; vice-presidents, Mgr. Laflame, Quebec; David Boyle, Toronto; general secretary, Dr. N. E. Dionne, Quebec; associate secretaries, Lecomte de Perigny, Paris; Naz Levasseur, Quebec; Dr. McIver, Eng.; Rouillard, Quebec.

45,000 Horse-Power Asked For.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—The third report of the Hydro-Power Commission engineers, which will deal with the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron available sources of power supply, will be ready in a few days.

Meanwhile the Commission has received applications totalling 45,000 horse-power from various Ontario municipalities.

Premiers to Confer.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The conference of the Provincial Premiers with the Dominion Government will take place in Ottawa on Oct. 8. Notices to this effect have been sent to the different Premiers of the provinces. All the provinces will be represented.

The Lost Is Found.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 11.—The Norwegian barque Norman Ink, which left Liverpool, England, July 11, and had been given up as lost, arrived yesterday morning leaking, having met heavy gales.

London Fair Opens.

London, Sept. 11.—The opening of the Western Fair yesterday morning found everything in good shape, and the management report that not for years has there been such a demand for space.

REGULATED RATES SAFEGUARD.

Premier Whitney Makes a Statement on the Power Question.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Premier Whitney was in consultation yesterday with Attorney-General J. J. Foy, Col. Matheson, Hon. W. J. Hanna, Dr. Pyne, J. P. Downey and Deputy Minister A. H. U. Colquhoun, respecting the Healey Falls matter. The following statement was given out yesterday afternoon by the Premier:

"I believe the public mind is grasping the true phase of the question. There can be no surer safeguard than that the rates are under the control of the Government, and you must remember that the Government has never declared its intention to take hold and develop power.

"I think the whole matter will be satisfactorily cleared up in a day or so."

The Premier's left hand, which he accidentally severely cut on Monday, has given him much trouble. It commenced bleeding freely again yesterday morning, and he had to have the wound dressed and bound.

Text Book Samples.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, brought back with him complete sets of text books in use in England, Scotland and Ireland, with prices in each case and information regarding them.

He will assist the text book commission with information gathered upon his trip. He found that in the old country the local boards prescribed the text books, and that this stimulated competition among the publishers.

Pine Forests on Fire.

Detroit, Sept. 12.—Smoke from forest fires is making navigation exceedingly hazardous in the upper ends of Lake Huron and Michigan, and the Mackinaw and Soo Channels. Fires are raging in the pine forests on both sides of the Straits of Mackinaw, and are constantly spreading. No rain has fallen in this vicinity for several weeks, and the woods are like tinder.

Bail Refused Ford's Assailants.

Bowmanville, Sept. 12.—The trial of William Terry and Charles Wilmot, charged with assaulting and robbing Richard Ford, began yesterday morning before Magistrate Horsey. Ford's face still shows the result of the battering he received. He swore positively to the two as his assailants. No evidence was offered for the defence. Magistrate Horsey said that from the enormity of the offence, the worst of the kind he had ever known in the township, he would not accept bail, and committed the prisoners to jail for trial.

Tenders For G. T. P. Bridges.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—The Dominion Bridge Co. is the lowest tenderer for four bridges on the sections of the Transcontinental Railway under contract, and the Locomotive Machine Co., the lowest for four others. The former tender is about $100,000, and the latter about $60,000.

Poisoned By Mistake.

Fatal Error of a Drug Clerk of Eight Years' Experience.

Death of Mrs. Labatt, of London, Was Due to Unintentional Use of Nux Vomica in Prescription—An Inquest Commenced and Adjourned—Prosecution of Man Who Made the Mistake Not at All Likely.

London, Sept. 12.—The death of Mrs. John Labatt, which occurred at the family residence, Queen's avenue, Monday evening, was due to an unaccountable mistake on the part of a clerk in a local drug store.

Mrs. Labatt, who was the wife of the well-known brewer, had been under the care of her physician for a few days, and Monday evening a prescription was sent to the druggist's for her. A clerk who has had eight years' experience and was considered very careful and reliable undertook to fill it, but in the place of a non-poisonous ingredient he used nux vomica, the result being that Mrs. Labatt died in three-quarters of an hour after taking a dose of the medicine.

Coroner MacLaren and Crown Attorney MacLaren were notified, and an inquest was commenced yesterday morning. No evidence was taken, an adjournment being made for a week.

The act of the clerk is considered to be purely a mistake, and it is not at all likely that he will be prosecuted.

Mr. Labatt is at present in Sault Ste. Marie, and he will not reach London until this morning.

Falls 50 Feet Down Cliff.

Glace Bay, N. S., Sept. 12.—Thomas Laycock, the 14-year-old son of Henry Laycock, was found floating in the water off Burnt Mine Cliffs yesterday afternoon. He is supposed to have stumbled in going down a path on the cliff and fell 50 feet to the water below.

Robert Davidson was killed instantly in No. 2 pit this evening by a fall of coal.

Killed In Sarnia Tunnel.

Sarnia, Sept. 12.—William S. Frank, section foreman on the Grand Trunk, was killed in the tunnel here Monday night. He was bossing a section gang when an east-bound train came through the hole. There are safety ladders for men to climb on when trains pass. Frank was knocked by the side of the train, and when the men found him both his legs were broken and his head badly smashed.

Leg Cut Off.

Gladstone, Man., Sept. 12.—A section man named M. Comoronski was run over by a C. N. R. express train near Beaver yesterday morning, and had a leg cut off below the knee.

Girl Wrapped In Flames.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Annie Priest, the 5-year-old daughter of Joseph Priest, fruit dealer, 720 West Queen street, is in St. Michael's hospital, suffering so severely from burns, that her recovery is doubtful.

The girl was cleaning her dress with benzine yesterday afternoon, when it became ignited from the flames of a candle, by the light of which she was carrying on her task. She was at once removed to the hospital.

The shock has proved very acute and it is feared she may succumb.

Child Burned to Death.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—Permanence Beauchman, aged four years, daughter of Bernard Beauchman, was burned fatally Monday. She had been playing with matches. It was expected that the little girl would recover, but the dreadful nature of her burns prevented it, and she died yesterday morning.

Fatal Shooting Accident.

Quebec, Sept. 12.—Details concerning the fatal shooting accident which resulted in the death of two boys at St. Edouard de Lotbiniere on Sunday reached town yesterday.

Robbery and Arson.

Orangeville, Sept. 12.—About midnight Monday evening a fire broke out at the residence of Mrs. Patterson, John street. The building, which was a frame one, was almost totally destroyed. Mrs. Patterson is an aged widow, living alone, and little of her furniture was saved, upon which there was no insurance. Her cash box was rescued, but was found to have been broken into and the contents abstracted, some $25. A fire inquest will likely be held.

Douks Won't Pay School Taxes.

Langham, Sask., Sept. 12.—The Doukhobors have flatly refused to pay school taxes on their lands, saying that as they have always refused to have their children educated, lest they learn evil things, they will not pay money for school purposes.

Peace In Persia Again.

Teheran, Sept. 12.—The Shah has signed the reform ordinance demanded by the clergy, and dismissed the ex-grand vizier, Almed Dowleh. This action has put an end to the agitation, and business is being resumed.

Five Long Years for Raffles.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—John Woods the gentleman burglar, and quite a modern Raffles, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary yesterday for breaking into the house of Mrs. A Desbarats.

Bad Fire at Pilot Mound.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—The Massey-Harris warehouse and several buildings in Pilot Mound's (Man.) business section were destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The loss is $20,000.

Mr. Carscallen Improves.

Hamilton, Sept. 12.—The condition of Henry Carscallen, K. C., M. P. P., showed decided improvement yesterday morning, and he spent a good day.

An Adamless Eden.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—There is not one male student enrolled for this session at the Ottawa Normal College.

Montreal Chauffeur Guilty.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—H. T. Atkinson, chauffeur for A. H. Dorsey, manager of the Dominion Park, was yesterday found guilty of manslaughter in causing the death of Antoine Toutant on Aug. 11. He will be sentenced on Thursday.

Home For Irish Council.

Dublin, Sept. 12.—The Evening Mail says the Government contemplates handing over the old Parliament House, on College Green, which is now being used as the Bank of Ireland, as an assembly house for the new Irish council.

Gave Beer to Employes.

Port Hope, Sept. 12.—At the Police Court yesterday morning the Port Hope Brewing & Malting Co. was charged with giving beer to employes in the building. The company was fined $20 and $5 costs.

Farmers and Protection.

It will be remembered that a convention of farmers met in Toronto a few days ago, part of the business transacted being the passage of a resolution condemning the policy of protection. This resolution, it seems, has given great satisfaction to the Liberal organs, which have insinuated that the resolution in question was a direct slap at the Conservative party and policy of protection. Why the Liberal press should find so much satisfaction in the farmers' pronouncement is a mystery, for the policy condemned by the farmers was the tariff policy of the Laurier Government, and one which, no matter how it meandered between increased protection and the unredeemed pledges of the party, has always received their enthusiastic endorsation. Discussing the view of the farmers in attendance at this convention, which was that the tariff should be revised downward in order to eliminate the protective principle, one of them says: "This is naturally the view of the farming community irrespective of party leanings, for the farmer loses by the protective policy, whether he be Liberal or Conservative." This, as the Montreal Gazette very aptly points out, is wrong. As a matter of fact, the most loyal supporters of protection in Canada and the class which has, as a whole, benefited more largely by it than any other, is the farmer. Scattered all through Canada are scores of manufacturing communities. Interspersed are other towns and villages which do not boast of any industrial activity. The industrial centre represents the policy of protection. The other stands for the policy of tariff for revenue only, or anything else you like to call it. What is the farmer's experience with the two. In the industrial town he finds a quicker and better market for all that he produces on his farm. In it he finds a ready demand for all the little odds and ends which the farm produces in excess of the farmer's home requirements. If he has butter to sell, he gets the top price of the market. His eggs, his hay, his oats, etc., are always in demand. And this is not all. When he comes to buy, he finds that he can do so cheaper than in the small agricultural centre, and has a larger range of goods to choose from. On the other hand, the place without industrial activity offers a much more restricted market to the farmer, and he not infrequently finds it impossible to get rid of certain lines of his produce at anything like remunerative prices. The farmer knows that the policy of protection is responsible for the centre of industry, and he recognizes that without that protection it would be as the non-industrial centre, a dull and unremunerative market. That is why he is a protectionist. He can remember the day when the centres of industrial activity were few and far between. Then there is another aspect of the situation. It will be found reflected in the difference between the price at which a farm can be bought, located within easy distance of a manufacturing centre, and that for which one can be obtained equally good in every way except that of location. In the older settled sections of Canada wherever farm property has increased in value that increase has been very largely due to proximity to a desirable market. It is the home market which counts. The people of ten Canadian cities last year consumed more of the produce of the Canadian farms than was sold abroad.

Undressing For Dinner.

There is a New York family now spending the season in the country the head of which believes in solid comfort for all concerned. The dinner rule is the most cheerful feature of the happy day in a bungalow on the hillside. Father, mother, three young girls and a son all bathe late in the afternoon and appear at the dinner table in the lightest garments. The son, 7, is barefooted and in his pajamas. Papa is in his pajamas, socks and slippers. The smaller girls, 9 and 5, are in their nighties. The elder sister wears her kimono and mamma is draped in dainty clinging things, cambrics and muslins, with here and there a ribbon. Such nonsense as dressing for dinner in Hedor is never dreamed of. If guests appear in conventional evening clothes it is their own fault. There is no prinking or pomp for company.—New York Press.

If the Public Works department don't hurry up and fix up the footbridge the least it can do is to give away accident insurance policies. That archaic old structure is surely in a most decrepit condition at present.

Peterboro merchants have started a crusade against shoplifters. Which reminds us that some Belleville young men, who should know better, seem to think it clever to appropriate fruit which is in front of stores. It is stealing, just the same, and might mean an ugly chapter in a boy's history if he were detected.

The Woodstock Express just about hits the nail on the head when it says: "Flag loyalty does not amount to a great deal, and a person may make himself foolish by an excessive display of the flag of his country. That is better, however, than making himself foolish by waving the flag of some other country."

Many Canadian papers at present are handing lumps of taffy to Mr. Hamar Greenwood, the Canadian who tumbled into a seat in the British House of Commons during the recent stampede, but it remains for the Ottawa Journal to advance the following chunk of truth about him: "Mr. Winston Churchill's sugary assurances of his Cabinet's love for Canada are fitly conveyed by a Canadian like Mr. Hamar Greenwood, who is one of the fighters with Churchill against Canada getting a trade preference from Britain in return for the preference Canada gives. Men like Mr. Greenwood are peculiarly useful to the anti-Chamberlainites."

The irreverent funny man of the Toronto News thus proclaims the fact that the Methodist general conference is now being held in Montreal:

Who are these men all hiking to the East,
Their neckties snowy-white, their trousers creased,
Their silken tiles a-gleaming in the light,
Their waistcoats buttoned high, their boots so bright,
Who?—They are Methodists departing hence,
They will attend the Gen'ral Conference.

In Montreal they gather from afar;
"From where the ever-flaming Northern star
Soft smiles upon the snow-clad hills, to where
The rip'ning grapes throw perfume on the air,"
(This is the way the delegates "orate"
Before the Church officials pass the plate.)

Oh, what a bully talkfeast will be there.
Long adjectives will fill the smoky air.
Phrase-making speakers will arise to say
How Wesley's noble army fares today.
And if objections come from any bloke,
"Our Brother" will be handed SUCH a poke.

The article in another column, "Plague in Washington," shows that filtration in the U. S. Capital has been a total failure. It might be well for Belleville to take this case into consideration before submitting another Zwick's island by-law to the people. But then, there's no need to worry; If another by-law were passed it might, like the last, never be put into force.

The recently appointed Commissioner of Industries of Toronto has captured his first industry. It will employ from eight to ten men. It would have been an awful blow, says the Gazette, if Hamilton or Montreal had secured this industry.

Spices that Are Spices : :

Many spices on the market are not spices but mixtures composed of ground cocoanut shell, charcoal, mineral red, etc., used to make weight and cheat the purchaser.

We have true spices and know they are true because they have been analyzed. We sell them at about the price of the adulterated kinds.

In Collision.

Picton Gazette: When coming in from Conway on Saturday night about 12 o'clock, after leaving her Toronto passengers down the bay, the Str. Niagara was crashed into by the R. & O. steamer Belleville, which was backing out from the lower dock. The impact was a most severe one, and caused many of the passengers on the Niagara to be sent down sprawling on the deck. The bulwarks of the latter vessel were stove in above the water line, and considerable damage was done, but she brought in her passengers all right.

Mr. E. Guss Porter, wearing a Sir John A. Macdonald tie and his ubiquitous smile, came over from Belleville this morning. At the Rossin House The Telegram picked him out from a bevy of friends and said:

"What do you think of Mr. Fielding and affairs away down east?"

"It's only a discovery after all."

"Only a discovery."

"Yes. It's just the fringe of what has been going on down there, but the end will be same as it was in the ballot-box frauds. The Government will head off further revelations, head 'em off the same as it did in Belleville."

By far the commonest cause of NERVOUSNESS.

The actual underlying cause of many ills, which the thousands of sufferers are vainly trying to relieve by drugs. Really the most dangerous evil that now exists, because it gives rise to brain irritation of so many different degrees. The most unsuspected, and therefore, neglected menace to the general health, because the very brain-strain enables the person to "see alright."

Very often completely changes the person's disposition, by the intense irritation of nerve-centers in the brain.

SPORTING NOTES.

Somebody writes to The Toronto Globe urging that hockey in Ontario should be placed on a professional basis this winter. The contention is that baseball and lacrosse have been professionalized and the plan has worked well, and the same result may be looked for after the professionalizing of Canada's other great sport—hockey. In the mind of every fair-minded man, there can be no doubt of the justice of the plea for open professionalism in hockey. It is simply a case of honesty vs. dishonesty. Which is more manly and fair: To come out straight and pay salaries in the open, or to continue the veiled payments to so-called amateurs, which practice, as is well known, has prevailed in Canada for years? It is to be hoped that fair play may at last prevail in the most fascinating of Canada's sports, and, that the hypocritical practices which have prevailed during the last few years may come to an end.

Globe: Two very slick green pacers were uncovered at Napanee on Monday last in the 2.40 class. These were the bay mare Iris K. and the bay gelding Jim K. The former, which is by D.L.C., 2.13 1-4, dam by Thunder, thoroughbred, is owned by E. Taylor, of Napanee. She is six years old and was rather rattleheaded until now, when, after having been bred, she has settled down and has paced the Napanee track in about 1.04. Jim K. is owned by Mr. L. O. Ketcheson, of Belleville. He is a big bay gelding, by Frank Smith, 2.14 1-2, pacing, dam by the imported thoroughbred Slap Bang, and his winning heat in 1.07 shows that he is likely, with experience, to develop 2.10 speed ere long.

MRS. MARY GREGOVICH,

Of Philipsburg, Montana, Tells How She Was Cured of Dandruff.

Mrs. Mary Gregovich, of Philipsburg, Montana, under date of Nov. 26, 1899, writes: I had typhoid fever this summer, consequently was losing my hair terribly, and my head in places was perfectly bald. Newbro's Herpicide had just come into use in Philipsburg, and the doctor strongly recommended it to me. After three or four applications my hair stopped falling out, and is coming in again quite thick. I used to be troubled greatly with dandruff, of which I am now cured.' Kill the dandruff germ with "Herpicide." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

A Rare Stamp.

One of the highest prices yet paid —namely 2,000 pounds—is offered by an American philatelist for a copy of the Annapolis postmaster stamp on the original envelope, similar to the one in the Earl of Crawford's collection. The stamp is said to be the only existing specimen and the greatest rarity. Other high prices are that of 1,804 pounds paid by the German Postal Museum for the two-penny Maritius stamp, and the 1,440 pounds paid for the penny Maritius stamp by the Prince of Wales, and there is a story of 3,500 pounds having been given for the four cent British Guiana (the only one in the world), owned by a Parisian collector. Two thousand one hundred pounds each was offered recently for two 1848 Maritius stamps. The "postmaster stamps" were issued before the regular United States stamps in 1845 and 1846. Postmasters had local unauthorized stamps issued, which they signed as proof that they had been paid for. The present bit of paper shows in one corner a circular black stamp, in the centre of which is an eagle with expanded wings. One of its talons grasps a branch, while the other holds three arrows. In the beak is held a sprig of olive or palm. At the top is the inscription, "Post Office," and at the bottom, "Annapolis." To the left of the stamp is a large figure "5," underneath being "Paid." The color is red on white, and the stamp was issued by Postmaster Martin F. Revell in 1846.

They Found Him Out.

(Chicago Chronicle.)

The employees of a downtown wholesale firm are telling a story on one of the bookkeepers of the house who recently returned from his summer vacation. The young man is known as Harry, and he has bored his friends for months past with his stories of the glorious time he was going to have visiting his rich relatives in the East during his vacation. When the time came he bade his fellows farewell and informed them that he was bound for Atlantic City.

Two weeks later he returned with an elegant coat of tan spread over his visible anatomy, and his friends were forced to listen to wondrous tales of his conquests in the far east. He had even cultivated a New York dialect, and regaled his friends with the standard idioms used by the short-story writers.

One morning he discovered pasted on the wall near his desk the following clipping from the Plainfield Weekly News: "Our old friend Harry Jones is once more among us. Harry has had a rapid rise in the world since he went to Chicago, and is now the junior partner of his firm. They say that he is one of the prominent financiers of Chicago. He is spending a vacation on his father's farm, and has not lost his old-time ability to pitch hay. Harry says the country is restful after the turmoil of the city."

Needless to say, no more stories of the gay life of Atlantic City and New York were told in that office.

Nail Wounds in Horses' Feet.

It has long been known that nail pricks and other similar injuries in the horse's hoof may lead to an infection followed by the formation of pus under the horn of the hoof and a serious general disease of the horse, or at least, the loss of the hoof. In a bulletin of the South Dakota Station Prof. Moore has recently reported results obtained in a number of cases from applying strict antiseptic treatment to injuries of this sort. The method consists in paring away the horn of the hoof from the affected part until the blood oozes out. The hoof is then thoroughly washed in a solution of bichloride of mercury, at the rate of 1 part to 500 of water after which absorbent cotton saturated in a solution of the same strength is applied to the wound and the whole hoof is packed in cotton, surrounded by a bandage and well coated with tar. This prevents any further filth from coming in contact with the wound. The operation must usually be done by a qualified veterinarian. Subsequent treatment, however, can be applied by the average farmer, since all that is necessary is to pour a little of this solution of bichloride of mercury upon the cotton which projects from the upper part of the bandage. The cotton will absorb enough of the solution to keep the wound moistened and hasten the healing process. If a remedy of this sort is not adopted in the case of foot wounds in the horse, the owner runs considerable risk of serious infection, either of blood poisoning or lockjaw.

Typhoid Plague In Washington.

TYPHOID FEVER IN THE U. S. CAPITAL WORSE THAN IT HAS EVER BEEN — FILTRATION A TOTAL FAILURE.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 11.— The city of Washington is suffering from an epidemic of typhoid fever, a fact most remarkable as it has come immediately upon the completion of the $3,000,000 filter plant, whose purpose was to render the water supply clean and sanitary.

Experts in the marine hospital service, who were called in to help discover the source of infection, pronounce it the Potomac water. The district commissioners have issued public warnings and advise that the water be boiled for drinking purposes.

New cases of typhoid are being reported at the rate of 75 per week. This is much worse than a year ago, when the filter was still under construction, and no efforts were being made to purify the water. For the past six or eight weeks the number of cases has been from 50 to 100 more each week than for the same period a year ago.

Washington is probably the most unhealthy city in the country. Few, if any, cities have so high a death rate. The death rate among the black people is particularly high. The average annual rate per 1,000 has lately been running as high as 32 for blacks, and from 17 to 21 for white people.

Few cities have spent anything like the amount of money that Washington has on its water supply. The system was originally planned by George Washington, and was carried out only after many years of labor and the outlay of thousands of dollars. The intake is located fourteen miles distant from the White House, at Great Falls, in the Potomac river, and from this point the water is carried in an aqueduct to a reservoir located just beyond the north city boundary.

It was supposed by the engineers who laid out the city that the water taken so far up the river would be uncontaminated by sewage. What they failed to take into account is the sewage from Cumberland, situated one hundred miles up stream.

Then when it was positively shown that typhoid bacillus would travel one hundred miles in the water and still live, the wise engineers decided on the construction of what is known as "a slow sand filter," at a cost, as has been stated, of $3,000,000. Last spring, when typhoid seemed to be raging pretty badly, the contractors were made to hurry up the filter, and finally it was put into operation.

It has been in operation now more than six months, and during all that time typhoid has increased. Recently the Washington officials asked Surgeon General Wyman to lend them his bacteria artists, which he did, and they took samples of the pretty water coming from the filter. They found it full of wigglers.

A new leaf is really the same old one with another turn.

Go s Home to Die On Sweetheart's Grave.

New York, Sept. 11.— A dramatic scene occurred on the French line pier as the steamer La Provence left for Havre. Among the passengers was Luigi Contanrini, 34 years of age, who was bound for his old home in Locco, province of Lombardi, Italy, to keep a suicide pact to die on his sweetheart's grave.

Antonio Contantini, his brother, created the scene on the pier and afterwards told his brother's story. He said that Luigi became betrothed to Josephine Ballantini, a girl of his native town. Her parents opposed the match, preferring a wealthier suitor, and Luigi, with his sweetheart's promise to keep faithful, came to America to seek his fortune. He established himself at Beaver, Oklahama, where he secured a farm and tilled it successfully. Then he wrote for Josephine to come, but she replied sadly that she could not; that her parents forbade; that she intended to commit suicide and that she expected Luigi to join her in death.

News quickly came that the girl had carried out her purpose and Luigi sold his property and started for Italy to kill himself on the girl's grave. His brother, Antonio, lives in Paterson, N.J., and Luigi went to him, told him the story and bade him farewell. Entreaties failed to swerve the man and on the pier yesterday Antonio made his final appeal. He clung to his brother, passionately kissed him and implored him not to go. Luigi shook his head. Antonio then half dragged his brother to an open space on the pier, fell on his knees, raised a crucifix aloft, and, with tears in his eyes, renewed his pleadings. Luigi could not be swerved and finally turning his back on Antonio went on board La Provence.

When the ship sailed Luigi stood at the rail and sadly watched Antonio, who had again fallen to his knees and with outstretched arms was beckoning to his brother.

Picture Post Cards.

Summer vacation travellers who are returning home from the various pleasure resorts report the ever increasing popularity of the picture post card. Post office officials tell the same story. These cards are certainly a godsend to the tourist, who does not wish to spend his resting time in writing letters, but yet who wishes to keep in touch with his friends in some way. There is still another advantage in these cards, which serve as a most valuable panoramic record of scenes and persons.

Picture post cards were invented in Germany about a decade ago, and for some years they remained a German specialty, at which foreigners were inclined to smile as an ephemeral fad. To-day these cards are made in enormous quantities in England, France and other countries, but Germany still remains their headquarters.

Last year about 1,200,000,000 of them were mailed in the post offices of that country. They represented a value of over $22,000,000, and at least thirty different occupations are benefitted thereby. If any fresh stimulus had been needed, it would have been supplied by the extraordinary interest of the Kaiser in these cards. The other day he spent two hours in having a series of photographs taken of himself in his divers uniforms, to be reproduced in colors. This was done at his own suggestion. He also ordered a series of views illustrating his last Mediterranean cruise.

The most advanced and expensive artistic processes are employed in making these pictures of persons and scenes; it is noted as a curiosity that while Italy orders the cheapest kinds, Japan wants the most expensive, a recent order from Tokio being for 1,000 cards at 1,500 marks, wholesale.

Night Attack by Pulajanes.

Manila, Sept. 12.—Lieut. R. E. Treadwell of the Philippine Scouts was killed Monday night by Pulajanes six miles north of Barauen. He was in command of a small detachment of scouts, whose bivouac was attacked during the night by 100 Pulajanes.

The Caserta Camellia Tree.

In the days of its glory the palace at Caserta of the king of Naples had among its features a so called English garden, made in 1782 by order of Marie Caroline of Austria. It was bright with flowers and wonderful rare oriental plants and trees, so that it was renowned throughout the world, but the crown and glory of all consisted in a camellia tree, a plant then unknown in Europe. The seeds were collected as though flakes of gold, and the queen used to give them and cuttings of this camellia as presents to her friends. These cuttings were most highly prized, and thus it has become a European flower, so much so that the exportation of camellias is an extensive industry in central Italy, and in Germany there are vast fields of them. In its palmy days the Caserta plant had eight branches, the largest of which was twelve inches in diameter, the whole being thirty feet high. This mother plant was in a flourishing condition up to a few years ago, but lately the gorgeous garden has been allowed to fall into decay, and with it the glorious camellia.—Pall Mall Gazette.

NERVOUS DEBILITY
OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you, and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. The various organs become natural and manly. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. We invite all the afflicted to consult us confidentially and free of charge. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard-earned dollars. WE WILL CURE YOU OR NO PAY.
☞NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.
THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.
Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:
"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me, guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through my nerves. I was cured mentally, physically and sexually. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."
CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY.
We treat and cure VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, BLOOD DISEASES, URINARY COMPLAINTS, KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

Dancing is to be introduced in the public schools of Cleveland. E. W. Ehler, director of physical culture, who has the matter in charge, has engaged Miss Burchenal, of New York, to teach the pupils 'folk dances.' Ehler's plan is to teach dancing after school hours. Then, if it proves successful, he will incorporate it with the regular physical culture exercises.

He climbed down from the pay car, says New York Life, with his month's wages still in his hand.

"Sure ye must be feelin' rich, Pat, with all ye have there," said a bystander.

"And what does this signify to me?" answered Pat. "Just two looks, wan whin I get it, and wan whin I give it to the ould woman."

The fox is an excellent mouser. He will lie and watch for a field mouse in the long grass like a cat, pounce upon it, kill it with a bite and lay it one side until he has caught another and another, when, picking them all up, as many as he can carry in his mouth, he will canter away with them to serve them out to the cubs. This fact was confirmed by witnesses in Scotland who were examined by a committee of the Board of Agriculture when taking evidence on the occasion of the plague of field moles on the Lowland sheep farms in 1893.

More than nine years have elapsed since Andre set out for his ill-fated expedition to the North Pole. The Geographical Society of Stockholm has decided to erect a memorial to him and his companions. Drs Stindberg and Herr Fraenkel, in some conspicuous spot in the city of Stockholm. The completed design shows the balloon hovering over the Arctic ice regions. In one section of the design Sweden is represented by an allegorical figure watching with anxiety the balloon moving away towards the Pole. The names of the occupants are carved underneath the sculpture, with the date July 11, 1897.

Liberals have been protesting that there was no danger of any dissatisfaction with the leadership of the party being expressed at the meeting of the General Reform Association in Toronto, but there seems to have been some fear that something unpleasant might happen. The sessions were held behind closed doors, and the only reporters admitted were those of the two Toronto Liberal papers. Perhaps anything like an official protest may be prevented for a time, but the discontent among the Liberals is none the less strong, because it fails to find open utterances. Liberals know that success under Ross is impossible, and therefore with him as leader they cannot even put up a good fight.

Just as we expected. The Kingston Grits are not yet satisfied, e'en though a Belleville man is to get the job promised Major Shannon. A despatch from Kingston says:—"The proposal of the Department of Militia to transfer Major Shannon from the office of paymaster of the Eastern Ontario command, to which he was recently appointed, to the position of district staff adjutant, has aroused the local Liberal executive again, and this time their wrath seems to be increased. The Whig, the organ of E. J. B. Pense, M.L.A., on Saturday said: "The intimation that Major Shannon is not to get the paymastership of the Eastern Ontario command, but is to be made a D.S.A., does not satisfy the Kingston Liberals. They declare that the principle at stake remains and that is that appointments that can be capably filled should go to the friends of the party in power and not to those who have been its avowed enemies. In this case Major Shannon, as president of the Conservative company, as well as the long time proprietor of the News and an inveterate Tory, has been aggressive in his attacks on the Government and its Kingston upholders, and his attitude has been antagonistic to everything Liberal. Now to see him put into office is more than the Liberals will stand. 'He must be removed completely is their demand. Changing him about only aggravates the party workers."

Referring to the above the Toronto News (Independent) says:

The News has no complaint to make about Capt. W. S. Conger who gets the office. No doubt he is a competent officer. But he owes his appointment to the fact that the man originally designated for the position was distasteful to a band of narrow partizans mean enough, and, unfortunately, powerful enough to bring the Ottawa Government to its knees in the attitude of suppliance. The Shannon incident and the partizan interference of Mr. Fisher, which drove Lord Dundonald from Canada, threw light on dark places."

Etiquette of the Table.

Delicacy of manner at table stamps, both man or woman, for one can, at a glance, discern whether or no a person has been trained to eat well, i.e., to hold the knife and fork properly, to eat without the slightest sound of the lips, to drink quietly, to use the napkin rightly, to make no noise with any of the implements of the table, and last, but not least, to eat slowly and masticate the food thoroughly. All these points should be taught most carefully to children, and then they will always feel at ease at the grandest tables in the land, writes the editor of Woman's World in Toronto Sunday World. There is no position where the innate refinement of a person is more fully exhibited than at the table, and nowhere that those who have not been trained in table etiquette feel more keenly their deficiencies.

The knife, it is almost needless to say, should never be used to carry food to the mouth, but only to cut it into small mouthfuls before it is conveyed to the mouth on the fork. When both have been used finally they should be laid diagonally across the plate with both handles to the right side. This is understood by well-bred waiters to be the signal for removing them, together with the plate.

Be careful to keep the mouth shut closely while masticating the food. It is the opening of the lips which causes the smacking sound so very disgusting. Always swallow what is in the mouth before adding either food or drink. Chew the food well, but do it silently, and be careful to take small mouthfuls. Be careful, too, not to clatter the knives and forks upon the plate, but use them without noise. When helped to anything begin eating at once. It is not considered good breeding to wait until all the company are provided. When passing the plate for a second helping lay knife and fork together at one side of the plate with handles toward the right. At a formal meal a guest should not ask for a second helping of any dish, but at an informal or family dinner he may or the host or hostess may ask him to have another helping, but he must never take soup a second time.

Will Have a Mineral Display.

In connection with the proposed enlargement of the Parliament Buildings it is said that whatever the general plan eventually decided upon by the Government committee and the architects having the matter in charge, it is certain that the library will be greatly enlarged, and by means of fireproof walls, doors and screenings be practically made a separate building. The alterations in this respect contemplate the provision of sufficient accommodation to give a floor to a comprehensive display of mineral specimens from all parts of the province. At present there is a meagre collection of such specimens in cases in the corridors and elsewhere around the buildings. It has long been felt in view of the growing importance of Ontario as a mining province, and the crowds of visitors which flock to the buildings every year, that a display of the nature named should be properly provided for.

Another Use For It.

A Western Senator has a brother who is in the live stock business. The brother sent a letter to a statesman a few days ago that was entirely typewritten, even to the signature. The statesman was mad. He thought it an outrage for his brother to write to him like that and not even sign the letter, and he sent a bitter protest. This was the reply he received: "Dear Jim: Cheer up. I am so busy that I never use a pen except for sheep."—Calgary Herald.

The door "like a window" that shows how the baking is going on

It's Better to Watch Your Baking Without Cooling it!

A skilful cook knows how important it is to keep the oven door shut. The range which allows Madam to see the progress of the baking without chilling the oven has the right to her preference. The Happy Thought Range has an oven door "like a window"—transparent—showing the contents of the oven and allowing continual inspection of the baking going on inside. This window door is one of the exclusive features of the Happy Thought Range. The women in 130,000 homes are considered good cooks, just because they use this door. Its results are splendid. If you want the best stove in the world, ask your dealer to show you the special features in the

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

all snug; and I guess you're going to make the most of your chance. By James though, if you weren't a pack of cowards you'd cast me adrift, and give me my gun again!"

"Speaking as a man of peace," said the ex-priest, "I fancy you are safest as your are, amigo."

"I'd be king of this crowd again inside three minutes if I was loose," retorted Kettle.

El Cuchillo snapped his yellow fingers impatiently. "We are wasting time," he said. "Capt. Kettle seems still to dispute my supreme authority. He shall taste of it within the next dozen minutes; and if he can see his way to resisting it, and asserting his own kingship, he has my full permission to do so. Here, you: go into the ingenio, and bring out that machine."

A dozen ragged fellows detached themselves from the onlookers, and went through a low stone doorway into the ruined sugar house. In a couple of minutes they reappeared dragging with noisy laughter a dusty, cumbersome erection, which they sat down in the open space before the piazza.

It was made up of a wooden platform on which was fastened a chair and an upright. On the upright was a hinged iron ring immediately above the chair. A screw passed through the upright into the ring, with a long lever at its outside end, on either extremity of which was a heavy sphere of iron. If once that lever was set on the twirl, it would drive the screw's point into whatever the iron ring contained with a force that was irresistible.

The mulatto introduced the machine with a wave of his yellow fingers. "El garrote," he said. "A mediaeval survival which I did not dream of finding here. Of its previous history I can form no idea. Of its future use I can give a simple account. It will serve to ease us of the society of this objectionable Capt. Kettle."

"Great heavens, man," Carnforth broke out, "this is murder."

"Ah," said el Cuchillo, "I will attend to your case at the same time. You shall have the honor of turning the screw which gives your friend his exit. In that way we shall secure your silence afterward as to what has occurred."

"You foul brute," said Carnforth, with a shout, "do you think I am an assassin like yourself?"

The mulatto took a long draft at his cigarette. "What a horrible country England must be to live in, if all the people there have tongues as long as you two, Senor, if you do not choose to accept my suggestion for pinning you to silence, I can offer you another. Refuse to take your place at the screw, and I promise that you shall be stood up against the wall of this ingenio and be shot inside the minute. The choice stands open before you."

"Mr. Carnforth," said Capt. Kettle, "you mustn't be foolish. You must officiate over me exactly as you are asked, or otherwise you'll get shot uselessly. Gingerbread and his friends mean business. And if you still think you're taking liberty in handling the screw (in spite of what I say) you may fine yourself a matter of 10 shillings weekly, and hand it across to Mrs. Kettle. I make no doubt she would find that sum very useful."

"This is horrible," said Carnforth.

"It will be horrible for Mrs. Kettle and my youngsters, sir, if you don't act sensibly and man the lever as Gingerbread asks. If you get planted here alongside of me, I don't know anyone at all likely to give them a pension. It would afford me a great deal of pleasure just now, Mr. Carnforth, if I knew my family could still keep to windward of parish relief."

"Of course," said Carnforth, with a white face, "I will see your wife and children are all right if I get clear; but it is too ghastly to think of purchasing even my life on these terms."

"You seem slow to make up your mind, senor," broke in the mulatto. "Allow me to hasten your decision." He gave some directions, and the men who had brought out the garrote took Capt. Kettle and sat him on the chair. They opened the iron ring, which screeched noisily with its rusted hinge, and they clasped it, collar-fashion, about his neck. Then they led Carnforth up to the back of the upright and cast off the lashing from his wrists.

"Now, Senor Carnforth," said the yellow man, "I want that person garroted. If you do it for me, I will give you a safe conduct down to any seaport in Cuba which you may choose. If I have to set on one of my own men to do the work you will not have sight to witness it. I will stick you up against that white wall yonder and have you shot out of hand. Now, senor, I have the honor to ask for your decision."

"Come, sir, don't hesitate," said Capt. Kettle. "If you don't handle the screw, remember someone else will."

"That will be a flimsy excuse to remember afterwards."

"You will be paying a weekly fine, and can recollect that carries a full pardon with it."

"Pah," said Carnforth, "what is 10 shillings a week?"

"Exactly," said Kettle. "Make it 12, sir, and that will hold you clear of everything."

"What feeble, dilatory people you English are," said el Cuchillo. "I must trouble you to make up your mind at once, Senor Carnforth."

"He has made it up," said Kettle, "and I shall go smiling, because I shall get my clearance at the hands of a decent man. I'd have taken it as a disgrace to be shoved out of this world by a yellow beast like you, you shame of your mother."

The mulatto blazed out with fury. "By heaven," he cried, "I've a mind to take you out of that garrote even now and have you burnt."

"And we should lose a pleasant little comedy," said the ex-priest. "No, amigo; let us see the pair of them perform together."

"Go on," said the mulatto to Carnforth.

"Yes," said Kettle in a lower voice. "For God's sake go on and get it over. It isn't very pleasant work for me, this waiting. And you will make it 12 shillings a week, sir?"

"I will give your wife $1,000 a year, my poor fellow. I will give her $5,000. No, I am murdering her husband, and I will give her all I have, and go away to start life afresh elsewhere. I shall never dare to show my face again in England or carry my own name." He gripped one of the iron spheres and threw his weight upon the lever. The bar buckled and sprang under his effort, but the screw did not budge.

"Quick, man, quick!" said Kettle in a low, fierce voice. "This is cruel. If you don't get me finished directly, I shall go white or something, and those brutes will think I'm afraid."

Carnforth wrenched at the lever with a tremendous effort. One arm of the bar bent slowly into a semicircle, but the lethal screw remained fast in its socket. It was glued there with the rust of years.

Carnforth flung away from the machine. "I have done my best," he said sullenly to the men on the piazza, "and I can do no more. You have the satisfaction of knowing that you have made me a murderer in intent, if not in actual fact; and now, if you choose, you can stick me up against that wall and have me shot. I'm sure I don't care. I'm sick of it all here."

"You shall have fair treatment," said el Cuchillo, "and neither more nor less. You have tried to obey my orders, and Capt. Kettle is at present alive because of the garrote's deficiency and not by your intention." He gave a command and the men released the iron collar from Kettle's neck. "I will have the machine repaired by my armorer," he said, "and in the meanwhile you may await my pleasure out of the sunshine."

He gave another order and the men laid hands upon their shoulders and led them away, and thrust them into a small arched room of whitened stone, under the boiler house of the ingenio. The window was a mere arrow slit; the door was a ponderous thing of Spanish oak, barred with iron bolts which ran into the stonework; the place was absolutely unbreakable.

The silence had lasted a dozen hours, although it was plain that each of the prisoners was busily thinking. At last Kettle spoke.

"If I could only got a rhyme to 'brow,'" he said, "I believe I could manage the rest."

"What?" asked Carnforth.

"I want a word to rhyme with 'brow,' sir, if you can help me."

"What in the world are you up to, now?"

"I've been filling up time, sir, whilst we've been here by hammering out a bit of poetry about those fireflies. I got the idea of it last night, when we saw them flashing in and out against the black of the forest."

"You don't owe them much gratitude that I can see, skipper. According to what you said, if you hadn't been looking at them, you'd have been more on the watch, and wouldn't have got caught."

"Perfectly right, sir. And so this poem should be all the more valuable when it's put together. I'm running it to the tune of 'Greenland's icy mountains,' my favorite air, Mr. Carnforth. I'm trying to work a parallel between those fireflies switching their lights in and out, and a soul, sir. Do you catch the idea?"

"I can't say I do, quite.

Capt. Kettle rubbed thoughtfully at his beard. "Well, I'm a trifle misty about it myself," he admitted, "but it will make none the worse poetry for being a bit that way, if I can get the rhymes all right."

"'Plow might suit you," Carnforth suggested.

"That's just the word I want, sir. 'The fields of heaven to plow.' That would be the very occupation the soul of the man I'm thinking about would delight in; something restful and in the agricultural line. I wanted to give him a good time up there. He was due for it," he added thoughtfully, and then he closed his eyes and fell to making further poetry.

Martin Carnforth knew the little ruffian's taste for this form of exercise, but it seemed to him jarringly out of place just then. "I am in no mood for verse now," he commented with a frown.

"I am," said Kettle, and tapped out the meter of a new line with a finger tip upon his knee. "It always takes a set-to with the hands, or a gale of wind, or a tight corner of some kind, to work me up to poetry at all. And the worse the fix has been the better I can rhyme. I find it very restful and pleasant, sir, to send my thoughts over a bit of a sonnet after times like these."

"Then you ought to turn out a masterpiece now," said Carnforth, "and enjoy the making of it."

Kettle took him seriously. "I quite agree with you there, sir," he said, and puckered his forehead and went on with his work.

Carnforth did not say any more, but turned again to brooding. Every time he looked at the matter, the more he cursed himself for leaving his snug pinnacle in England. The utmost boon he could have gained in Capt. Kettle's society was not to be caught. Dangers, hardships and exposures he was discovering are much pleasanter to hear of from a distance, or to read about in a well-stuffed chair by a warm fireside. The actual items themselves had turned out terribly squalid when viewed at first hand.

At last he broke out again. "Look here, Skipper," he said, "I'm fond enough of life, but I don't think I want to earn it by playing executioner. I'd prefer to let this rebel fellow parade me and bring out his platoon."

Kettle woke up from his work. "I'm not sweet on wearing the iron collar again, and that's a fact. It's horrible work waiting to have your backbone snapped without being able to raise a finger to interfere. I'm not a coward, Mr. Carnforth, but I tell you it took all the nerve I'd got to sit quiet in that chair without squirming whilst you were getting ready the ceremonial.

"It's no new thing for me to expect being killed before the hour was through. I've had trouble of all kinds, with all sorts of crews, but I've always had my hands free and been able to use them, and I will say I've 'most always had a gun of some sort to help me. I might even go so far as to tell you, sir (and you may kick me for saying it if you like). I've felt a kind of joy regularly glow inside me during some of those kind of scuffles. Yes, sir, that's the kind of animal I am; in hot blood I think no more of being killed than a terrier dog does."

"If there was only a chance of being knocked on the head in hot blood," said Carnforth. "I'd fight like a cornered thief till I got my quietus."

"And Mrs. Kettle would lose her 12 shillings a week if—— By James, sir, here they come for us."

He leaped up from the bench on which he had sat, and whirled it above his head. With a crash he brought it down against the whitened wall of the cell, and the bench split down its length into two staves. He gave one to Carnforth and hefted the other himself like a connoisseur.

"Now, sir, you on one side of the door, and me on the other. They can't reach us from the outside there. And if they want us out of here, we've got to be fetched."

Carnforth took up his stand, and shifted his fingers knowingly along his weapon. He was a big man and a powerful one, and the hunger for fighting lit in his eye.

"Horatius Cockles and the other Johnnie holding the bridge," quoth he. "We can bag the first two, and the others will fall over them if they try a rush. What fools they were to untie our wrists and shins! But our fun won't last long. As soon as they find we are awkward, they will go around to the windowslit, and shoot us down from there."

"We aren't shot yet," said Kettle grimly, "and I'm wanting to do a lot of damage before they get me. Look out!"

The bolts grated back in the rusty staples, and the heavy door screamed outwards on its hinges. A negro came in, whistling merrily. The two halves of the bench flew down upon his head from either side with a simultaneous crash.

A white man's skull would have crunched like an eggshell under that impact, but the African cranium is stout. The fellow toppled to the ground under the sheer tonnage of the blows, and he lay there with the whistle half frozen on his lips, and such a ludicrous look of surprise growing over his features that Carnforth burst into an involuntary laugh. Kettle, however, was more businesslike. The negro had a machete dangling from his hip, and the little sailor darted out and snatched it from its sheath. He jumped back again to cover with slim activity, and a couple of pistol bullets which followed him made harmless gray splashes on the opposite wall. Then there was a pause in the proceedings, and Carnforth felt his heart thumping noisily against his watch as he waited.

Presently a brisk footstep made itself heard on the flagging outside, and the voice of the mulatto leader spoke through the doorway.

"If you come out now, one of you shall be garrotted, and the other shall go free. If I have more trouble to fetch you, you shall both be roasted to death over slow fires."

"If—if—if!" retorted Kettle. "If your mother had stuck to her laundry work and married a nigger, she'd have kept a very great rascal out of the world. If I'd the sense of a sheep I'd come to you at once, and my poor wife would have 12 bob a week for life. If you want to talk, you frightened lump of gingerbread, come in here and do it, and don't squall out there like a cat on a garden wall."

The suave voice of the ex-priest made a comment. "Saints deliver us from these Englishmen's tongues. Truly they are not fit to live; but why should we send our terriers into the rat pit? A little careful shooting through the window yonder will soon limit their capers, and if the shooting is carefully done, neither will be any the worse as a roast."

El Cuchillo answered him savagely. "Then do you see to it. The big man you may shoot as you please, but if you kill the sailor, look to yourself. That man is in my debt, and I want him in my hands alive, so that I may pay it."

"Amigo," said the unfrocked priest, "you may trust to my shooting. I will pink him most scientifically in one leg and the right arm, and I will guarantee that you shall get him in perfect condition to have your satisfaction on."

"Do so," said the mulatto, and the other marched briskly away on his rope-soled sandals. But in the meantime Kettle's active brain had formed a plan, and in dumb show he had telegraphed it across to Carnforth at the opposite flank of the doorway.

Of a sudden the pair of them rushed out simultaneously. Kettle handed the machete to his companion, and sprang upon the yellow man with greedy fingers. His feet he kicked away from beneath him, and at the same instant grappled him by the throat. It was a trick he had many a time before played upon mutinous seamen, and he had dragged the mulatto back into the cell almost before the man had time to struggle. Carnforth followed closely upon their heels, leaving signatures behind him written redly with the machete.

Capt. Kettle bumped the mulatto's head against the wall as a way of quieting him, and keeping his fingers away from dangerous weapons, and threw him onto the floor. He extracted a revolver and a knife from the man's belt, and looked up to see the face of the ex-priest staring at him from the window. Then he sat himself on the chest of his prisoner and prepared to treat for terms.

A shot rang out across the bivouac outside, and then another. The man at the window slit turned away his face. There was a minute's pause, and then a dropping fire began, the sound of it coming from two distinct quarters.

The ex-priest's head went out of sight. It was the last they ever saw of him. Some one outside the doorway shouted "Los Espanoles!" and there was a scuffle of bare feet running away and fading into the distance. And, meanwhile, outside the windows the crackle of rifles grew more noisy, and cries rose up of men in pain. The light in the vaulted room grew faintly blue, and the air was soured with powder smoke.

"By James," said Kettle, "the Spanish regular troops have raided the camp, and the whole lot of them are fighting like a parcel of cats. Hark to the racket. Here's a slice of luck."

"I don't see it," said Carnforth. "If we're out of the fire, we're into the frying pan. Sinking that Spanish warship was an act of piracy, and we shall be strung up if the Dons catch us, without the prelude of a trial. Listen! There's a maxim come into action. Listen! I wonder which way the fight's going. They're making row enough over it. I'm going to get to the window and have a look."

"It's tempting," said the little sailor wistfully, "but I think, sir, you'd better not. If you're seen we shall be gastados, as they say, anyway. Whereas, if the rebels are licked, the Dons may march off again without knowing we are here, It's a chance. By James, though, I'd like to have a look. Hark to that. They're at hand-grips now. Hear 'em swear. And here 'em scream.

"Some of them are beginning to run. Hark to that crashing as they're making their way through the cane."

"And hark to those shouts. It's like a lot of cockneys at a foxhunt."

"These Dagos always yell blue murder when they're in a fight," said Kettle contemptuously.

"The maxim's stopped," said Carnforth, with a frown.

They listened on for awhile with straining ears, and then: "Perhaps that means the rebels have rushed it."

"They may have run. But the Dons ought to be browning the cover if they've cleared the camp. The fools! A maxim would shoot through half a mile of that cane jungle."

"Short of ammunition," said Kettle, "or perhaps it's jammed." A bugle shrilled out through the hot air, and its noise came to them there in the hot, dark room. "That means cease fire, and the Spaniards have won. Our mongrels had no bugles. Well, it's been a quick thing. I wonder what next!"

There was a dull murmur of many voices. Then orders were shouted, and noise came as of moving men, and a few more scattered shots rang out, most of them answered by cries or groans.

"Hullo?" said Kettle.

A weak voice from beneath him made explanation. "They are shooting their prisoners, senores—the men who were my comrades. It is the custom—the custom of Cuba."

"So you have concluded to come to life again, have you?" asked the little sailor. "I thought I'd bumped you harder. What do you expect to be done with, eh?"

"I am in your hands," said the mulatto sullenly.

"That's no lie," said Kettle, "and I've a perfect right to kill you if I wish. But I don't choose to dirty my hands further. You've only acted according to your nature. And—when it came to me being able to move, I've beaten you every time. But now we'll have silence, please, for all hands. If those Spaniards are going to search this old sugar house they'll do it, and up on a string we go, the three of us; but there's no need to entice them here by chattering."

Their voices stopped, and the noises from without buzzed on. Of all the trials he had gone through, Carnforth felt that waiting to be the most intolerable of all. The Spanish soldiery were looking to their wounds and hunting through the bivouac. Some (to judge from their talk) had gathered round the rusted garrote and were examining it with interest. And a few strolled up to the ruined ingenio, and smoked their cigarettes under its piazza. Any moment the room beneath the boiler house might be peeped upon.

The sun beat down upon the stonework and the heat grew. The voices gradually drew away till only the hum of the insects remained. And so an hour passed.

Another hour came and went without disturbance, and still another; and then there came the sound of a quavering tenor voice singing a scrap from the "Swanee River" from close outside the walls:

O, take me to my kind ole mudder!
Dere let me live and die.

"That Yankee nigger," said Kettle, in a whisper. "He was wounded and delirious before we came, and he's been hidden amongst the cane. They can't have seen him before; but, poor devil, they'll shoot him now."

But no quietening rifle-shot rang out and wonder grew on the faces of all three. They waited on with straining ears and Carnforth raised his eyebrows in an unspoken question. Kettle nodded, and the big man rose gingerly to his feet and peeped from the corner of the window-slit. He turned around with rather a harsh laugh. "The place is empty," he said. "I believe they've been gone these three hours."

Capt. Kettle leaped to his feet and made for the door. "Quick," he cried, "or we shall have the rebels back again and I'll own that I don't want to fight the whole lot of them again just now. We'll leave Gingerbread in here till his friends come to fetch him; and you and I, sir, will slip down to the beach and get off in one of the old Sultan's quarterboats."

They passed outside the door and closed and bolted it after them.

"By the way," said Capt. Kettle, "you couldn't happen to think of a rhyme to 'gleam,' could you?"

"No," said Carnforth.

"Well, I'll hammer it out on the road down, and then I'll have finished that sonnet, sir. But never mind poetry just now. I'll say the piece to you when we've got to sea. For the present, Mr. Carnforth, we must just pick up our feet and run."

And so they went off to the quarterboat, and 10 minutes later they were running her down the beach and into the sea.

THE WAR STEAMER OF DONNA CLOTILDE

I think it may be taken as one of the most remarkable attributes of Capt. Owen Kettle that, whatever circumstances might betide, he was alway neat and trim in his personal appearance. Even in most affluent hours he had never been able to afford an expensive tailor; indeed, it is much to be doubted if, during all his life, he ever bought a scrap of raiment anywhere except at a ready-made establishment; but, in spite of this, his clothes were always conspicuously well-fitting, carried the creases in exactly the right place, and seemed to the critical onlooker to be capable of improvement in no one point whatsoever. He looked spruce even in oilskins and high boots.

Of course, being a sailor, he was handy with his needle. I have seen him take a white drill jacket, torn to ribbons in a rough and tumble with mutinous members of his crew, and fine-draw the rents so wonderfully that all traces of the disaster were completely lost. I believe, too, he was capable of taking a roll of material and cutting it out with his knife upon the deck planks, and fabricating garments ab initio; and though I never actually saw him do this with my own eyes, I did hear that the clothes he appeared in at Valparaiso were so made, and I marveled at their neatness.

It was just after his disastrous adventure in Cuba; he trod the streets in a state of utter pecuniary destitution; his cheeks were sunk and his eyes were haggard; but the red torpedo beard was as trim as ever; his cap was spic and span; the white drill clothes with their brass buttons were the usual miracle of perfection; and even his tiny canvas shoes had not as much as a smudge upon their pipe-clay. Indeed, in the first instance I think it must have been this spruceness, and nothing else, which made him find favor in the eyes of so fastidious a person as Clotilde La Touche.

But be this as it may, it is a fact that Donna Clotilde just saw the man from her carriage as he walked along the Paseo de Colon, promptly asked his name and, getting no immediate reply, dispatched one of her admirers there and then to make his acquaintance. The envoy was instructed to find out who he was and contrive that Donna Clotilde should meet the little sailor at dinner in the cafe of the Lion d'Or that very evening.

The dinner was given in the patio of the cafe where palm fronds filtered the moonbeams and fireflies competed with the electric lights; and at a moderate computation the cost of the viands would have kept Capt. Kettle supplied with his average rations for 10 months or a year. He was quite aware of this and appreciated the entertainment none the worse in consequence. Even the champagne, highly sweetened to suit the South American palate, came most pleasantly to him. He liked champagne according to its lack of dryness, and this was the sweetest wine that had ever passed his lips.

The conversation during that curious meal ran in phases. With the hors d'oeuvres came a course of ordinary civilities; then for a space there rolled out an autobiographical account of some of Kettle's exploits, skillfully and painlessly extracted by Donna Clotilde's naive questions; and then, with the cognac and cigarettes a spasm of politics shook the diners like an ague.

Of a sudden one of the men recollected himself, looked to this side and that with a scared face, and rapped the table with his knuckles.

"Ladies," he said imploringly, "and senores, the heat is great. It may be dangerous."

"Pah!" said Donna Clotilde, "we are talking in English."

"Which other people besides ourselves understand, even in Valparaiso."

"Let them listen," said Capt. Kettle. "I hold the same opinions on politics as Miss La Touche here, since she has explained to me how things really are, and I don't care who knows that I think the present government, and the whole system, rotten. I am not in the habit of putting my opinions in words, Mr. Silva, and being frightened of people hearing them."

"You," said the cautious man drily, "have little to lose here, captain. Donna Clotilde has much. I should be very sorry to read in my morning paper that she had died from apoplexy—the arsenical variety—during the course of the preceding night."

"Pooh," said Kettle, "they could never do that."

"As a resident in Chili," returned Silva, "let me venture to disagree with you, captain. It is a disease to which the opponents of Pres Quijarra are singularly addicted whenever they show any marked political activity. The palm trees in this patio have a reputation, too, for being phenomenally longeared. So, if it pleases you all, suppose we go out on the roof? The moon will afford us a fine prospect—and—the air up there is reputed healthy."

He picked up Donna Clotilde's fan and mantilla. The other two ladies rose to their feet; Donna Clotilde, with a slight frown of reluctance, did the same; and they all moved off toward the stairway. Silva laid detaining fingers upon Capt. Kettle's arm.

To be continued.

SAYS THE U. S. CLIMATE IS VILE.

AND THAT FOR SAYING SO THE YANKEES WOULD CALL HIM A "GOL DARNED BRITISHER."

It is no use arguing with the average American about the weather, says a writer in the Strand. You might as well try to convince the untravelled Englishman that all Americans do not speak down their nose.

Now, the Americans are quite certain they have got the best climate in the world, despite folks being gilted in blizzards or frizzled in torrid heat. "God's own country; finest in the world, sir!" Why attempt to put them right? It is a mere matter of national temperament.

Besides, if you did put the American right what an unkindness you would be doing him! It is his special privilege among all men on the earth to be ever engaged in comparison, to the advantage of the "Land of the Free" and the disadvantage of "Johnny Bull."

He compares what is best in his land with what is worst in ours and draws deductions. He compares four cents a mile trains in America with one cent a mile trains in England; the residences of Fifth avenue millionaires with the dens of the poor in the East End; the charm of the Indian summer with the fogs of London, which we have about five times in five years.

He never tells you about the cheap, safe and fast travelling on our lines and the dear, unsafe and dawdling travelling in his own land; about the happy content of English life and the sweatshops in Chicago's Little Italy; the beautiful fragrance of an English summer and the vile rain, sleet and snow of an American winter.

On and off I have lived three years in the United States of America. Excepting for six weeks in September and October the climate of America is the most vile and uncomfortable in the world. England has the most equable and healthy climate to be found anywhere. But the American will push my testimony on one side by denouncing me as a "gol darned Britisher." And for once he will be quite accurate.

The Knife May Make Criminals Good Men.

A special from Philadelphia to the New York Herald, says:

Following out the theories of the country's foremost physicians and the recent rulings of the juvenile courts the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, working in conjunction with Director Coplin of the Bureau of Health and Charities, and Chief Abbott of the Bureau of Health, has instituted the practice of performing operations upon the children given into its charge where medical opinion is rendered that such a course is likely to prevent a criminal career.

The first subjects of these experiments were operated on recently at the infirmary of the society, which was the first organization of its kind in the country to adopt this course. In all seven children were put under the knife by a number of the city's most prominent surgeons, who performed operations of varied natures, from the most delicate to ones of minor importance, calculated to improve the mental and moral condition of the patients.

There were two operations on brains, three on eyes and two minor operations for nervousness, and all it is believed will be successful.

Medical men in this city are greatly interested in the new unprecedented move of the society, and the most prominent of local surgeons have volunteered their services in the cause. Heretofore such operations have been performed infrequently by court order, on the recommendation of medical experts, but this is the first time it has been taken up by an organization of this character. As a result it is likely that several hundred operations will be performed yearly, if the experiments prove successful, and a corresponding decrease in crime is anticipated as a result of it.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. SARAH PLATT DECKER.

President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is an organization that represents the union of all the women's clubs of America, regardless of what may be the object or sphere of operation of the individual club. To be the president of this splendid national organization is a high honor, and Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver, Colo., the efficient executive head of the federation, is fairly entitled to all the fame that may come to her from this source.

Mrs. Decker is a woman of great magnetism and charm. She has lived in Denver since 1887 and is the widow of Judge Decker. She is one of the leading club women of the country and is an ardent advocate of equal suffrage. She is one of the best women debaters in the United States, and it is mainly due to her untiring efforts that the Woman's Club of Denver is one of the most influential and successful organizations in the country.

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY J. C. STRAUSS ST LOUIS

MRS. SARAH PLATT DECKER.

Mrs. Decker was born at Holyoke, Mass., and lived for a number of years on Long Island before moving to Denver. She has served as vice president of the national federation and also has been at the head of the federation in Colorado. She is described as ample and hearty and with a direct, positive way of saying what she thinks—a typical western woman, with a jolly laugh and a firm grasp—a woman who naturally would expect to take the short cut of common sense to any conclusion.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Children and Vocations.

If it were possible to ascertain the number of cases in which children have "disappointed their parents" by not having followed the particular vocation designed for them by fathers and mothers, the figures would certainly be surprising. The young people are usually blamed for this deviation from the plans arranged for them, but there is much injustice in that censure.

The parents make up their minds as to what they would like their children to be, quite regardless of the fact as to whether they are fitted for it or not. When the children fail they are cut adrift as unwilling to adopt the career chosen by their fathers when in reality absolutely unsuited for the vocation.

That is not the worst of the matter, unfortunately. The youth or maiden has spent all the best time of life in an uncongenial and practically useless occupation, and there is not enough time left afterward to pursue a vocation which would have been congenial and for which the boy or girl had some aptitude.

The plain fact is, parents must watch their children, thrusting aside their own hopes and desires, and try to detect if the lad or girl shows aptitude for any one thing more than for another. Where this is observed the proper course is to develop it, for the child will do better in that sphere than in any other. It may be quite contrary to the wishes of father or mother, but what is the use of rebelling? You must crowd down your disappointment and think only of the welfare of your offspring, says Woman's Life.

That is the sensible course. Are we all strong enough to follow it?

Expression of the Mouth.

Have you ever tried to cultivate a pleasant expression of the mouth? It is hard at first, but it soon becomes second habit. The woman who is always whining will have a thin face, with flabby cheeks and a drooping mouth. And she will look old. But the cheerful young woman will have round, hard cheeks and a mouth that has a Cupid's bow. She will have a mouth that lifts at the corners and which smiles of its own accord. And in each cheek she will have a dimple. This is a state of affairs that is not at all hard to cultivate and one which every woman, whether she be the mother of a grownup family or not, can easily obtain. Faded beauties should take notice of this. You can bring back your bright, pretty cheeks. Homely women should look sharp. There is a chance for you to be pretty, says Woman's Life. Clever women, this is your day. If you will take the time and have patience, you can make yourself one of the most irresistible of women.

Use For Old Silk Dresses.

Silk dresses which have outlived their usefulness as dresses may be turned into petticoats and bloomers and made to serve out their cost over again. Only plain, staple colors should be used for bloomers—black preferably, although pongee (the natural color) is best of all for summer bloomers. Possibly two dress skirts may have to be put together to get out enough for a full flounced petticoat. See that the two combine well, and if you can eke it out put stitched bands of the upper upon the flounce. Often there is enough good silk in a dress skirt to make a shirt waist of, with a little contriving. In such a case don't begrudge spending a little for pretty braids and buttons to finish it off with; the bit of something new will freshen the whole waist up. But whatever you do with the silk, treat it to a bath in gasoline before making it over.

Don't Spoil Your Husband.

There is no better way, says an American writer, of making a selfish, spoiled husband out of a perfectly good man than by always being unselfish and doing a thousand and one things for him that he has been accustomed to do for himself. If you want a model husband, don't be always doing things for him, but try to train him to do them for you, says London Home Notes. It is a recognized truth that we all care more for the person who is dependent upon us than for the one we depend upon.

To Renew a Mirror.

To renew a mirror keep for this purpose a piece of sponge, a cloth and silk handkerchief, all entirely free from dirt, as the least grit will scratch the fine surface of the glass. First sponge it with a little spirits of wine or gin and water to clean off all spots, then dust over it powdered blue tied in muslin, rub it lightly and quickly off with the cloth and finish by rubbing with the silk handkerchief. Be careful not to rub the edges of the frame.

Her Lot Complete.

The woman was sobbing as though her heart was broken. "Why do you weep?" asked the spirit. "You have health, beauty, love and wealth. Surely you should be happy."

"That's just it!" answered the woman. "I haven't a thing to sorrow over, and my life is incomplete."

Whereat the spirit sent unto her pain, and she still wept, but she smiled through her tears, for her lot was now complete.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Hole In a Veil.

"If women would only learn that smartness is impossible with a veil through which the nose has succeeded in boring a hole!" remarked a laughing young girl the other day. "The nose seems to have a passion for coming out the other side of a veil, I suppose, because it is the most prominent feature. Sometimes you see a deep gash on the cheek. Not infrequently the lower lip comes through. And veils are so cheap!"

Using Hot Applications.

Have you ever tried to wring out hot cloths—boiling hot cloths—for a neuralgic or other sort of patient? If you have and have had your hands burned in the process you will be glad to know that if you plunge them first into cold water—ice cold if possible—they can stand an incredible amount of heat. Even boiling vinegar, the hottest of liquids, may be approached with calm nerves under such conditions.

For Scant Eyebrows.

Ointment for scant eyebrows: Two and one-half ounces of cologne, one and one-half ounces of glycerin, two drams of fluid extract of jaborandi. Agitate the ingredients until thoroughly incorporated. Apply to the eyebrows with a tiny brush. This preparation can be used for the eyelashes as well, but it must be applied very cautiously, as almost anything in the form of oil or alcohol will irritate the eyes.

Wringing Clothes.

Good laundresses make a point of careful wringing, squeezing the last drop of water out of each piece as they take it from the soapy water and again after they have thoroughly rinsed it. You cannot get the clothes a good color, they say, unless this point of wringing out thoroughly is looked to.

Dressing Table Stains.

Stains on dressing tables are generally made by perfumery or medicine having alcohol for a body. A few drops of any of these substances will melt the varnish. A piece of white rubber placed under the scarf will protect the wood and prevent any discoloration from these causes.

For Dingy Bronzes.

Use a soft cloth barely moistened with oil when you are dusting bronzes which have a dingy look. Get into every corner and crevice and finish your work by rubbing the bronze down with a perfectly dry, clean cloth.

For staircases pieces of old blankets may be folded neatly and placed on each step separately, taking care to cover the edge. This is pleasant and soft to walk on and will make the carpet wear double the time.

As a carpet cleaner bran slightly dampened, thrown on the carpet and then thoroughly swept out, is unexcelled. It removes all dust and, being damp, prevents dust from flying.

The girl who marries a man to reform him seems to lose sight of the fact that there are lots of men who don't need reforming.—Philadelphia Record.

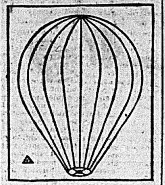
Towels that are worn in the middle should be cut in two and hemmed to make hand towels.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A FIRE BALLOON.

It Is Easily Made of Tissue Paper and Thin Wire.

Small fire balloons are easily made of tissue paper cut into gores and then pasted together in the shape of a balloon, no slit or hole being left by which any air might escape except one at the mouth. Your mother or your big sister will make you a pattern by which you can cut the strips of paper to form the balloon. A ring of thin wire is fastened to the mouth of the balloon, and across this wire two other wires are fastened in the shape of the letter X. These wires should be a little depressed where they cross each other. Be sure to have the opening at the bottom wide enough to keep the burning cotton well away from the paper. A piece of cotton dipped in alcohol is placed in the depressed center of the crossed wires, a light is applied, and directly the air inside becomes heated the balloon ascends.



A FIRE BALLOON.

THE GREAT DIPPER.

Something About the Constellation Known as Ursa Major.

Most of our boys and girls, no doubt, are familiar with that wonderful group of seven stars in the northern sky known to the astronomers as Ursa Major—the Great Bear—but to ordinary people as the Great Dipper or simply as the dipper. You have noticed, of course, that it appears to revolve around the North Star, and it is hard, perhaps, to convince yourselves that it does not really move, for you see it in a different position at every hour of the night.

If you have studied astronomy, however, you know that its apparent change of place is due to the turning of the earth on its own axis, which makes it appear that the Dipper is moving. You will notice that the two outer stars in the bowl of the Dipper always point to the North Star and that the handle swings around in a giant circle. These two stars are called the Pointers.

The Dipper is seen in a different part of the sky at different seasons, as you have also noticed perhaps, but do you know why? That is caused by the earth's revolution around the sun. Sailors and travelers watch the Dipper so closely that they can tell the hour of the night by its position.—Exchange.

The Iridescence of Pearl.

You have all noticed the beautiful prismatic colors on the inner surface of shells, even of the common oyster shells. This surface is composed of the substance called mother-of-pearl, and its iridescence and its gloss make it beautiful. Do you know what makes it iridescent? The substance is made up of an infinite number of little parts, separated by minute lines, and this has the effect of breaking up ordinary light into its prismatic colors. It is a similar arrangement of the particles that makes the opal iridescent. The so called "unlucky" nature of the opal consists in the fact that it sometimes bursts without apparent cause, but the bursting is merely a natural result of its peculiar composition. Sometimes a sudden change of temperature makes it burst; sometimes the breakage is due to a cause that even a lapidary cannot determine. The belief that the stone is "unlucky" is nothing but a silly superstition.

The Fogs of Newfoundland.

Newfoundland is famous for its heavy fogs, which, under certain conditions, drift out to sea and make navigation dangerous. It may be that you do not know why the fogs are so heavy there. They are caused by the mingling of the Arctic current, with its ice fields and icebergs, with the warm waters of the gulf stream. This produces great masses of vapor, which, when westerly winds prevail, is carried out to sea, but when the wind is from the south or the southeast the fog is carried in on the island, covering the bays and the headlands.

The Two Travelers.

[A fable.]

In bygone times it came to pass
A tall giraffe and a dwarfish ass
As fellow travelers side by side
Were jogging through a country wide.
The ass was much inclined to smile
At his companion's awkward style;
His great long legs to criticise
And at his neck express surprise—
In short, to spare no cruel hit
Whereby he might display his wit.

But as they moved the region through
The vegetation scarcer grew,
Until upon the sterile ground
But little else than stones were found,
And only on the tallest trees
Grew aught that could their hunger ease.
And there, with famine worn away,
The hungry ass was forced to stay
And watch his comrade eat the fruit
A dozen feet above the root.
"Ah, me," he cried, "no more I'll chaff,
Nor at your neck and figure laugh!
In truth, I find now, after all,
I'd give my ears to be as tall."

—Palmer Cox in St. Nicholas.

THOUGHTFULNESS.

The Simple Way One Woman Won Widespread Popularity.

A popular woman is seldom able to disclose the secret of her charm, but one such person dropped a valuable hint the other day when she said she thought women liked her because she wrote them notes. It seems that whenever a joy or a sorrow comes to any of this woman's acquaintances she always writes a little note of sympathy or congratulation. When a young girl announces her engagement or approaching marriage the popular woman always sends a few lines of felicitation.

When a friend is ill, she writes a note of sympathy. If there is trouble or death in a family, she writes a letter of condolence. Frequently after attending an unusually enjoyable social function she sends a bit of a note containing a pretty compliment, which makes the hostess think the nicest of thoughts about the sender. When a friend who has been in mourning returns to the social world, the popular woman writes her a word or two of welcome back to society, telling her how pleasant it is to see her again.

"It takes so little time to write notes," she says, "and they are so much appreciated!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WALL PAPERING.

Some Points a Watchful Woman Got From a Paper Hanger.

A housekeeper with a watchful eye says: The paper hanger has been working at our house, and I decided to watch him closely for what I could learn from his way of handling paper. I feel well repaid for the attention I gave, for many of the things I observed would be of great value if I were to undertake to paper a room myself.

When he made his paste (using flour), he added to it a tablespoonful of pulverized alum. This, he said, "set the color" and prevented the colors in the under paper striking through. The side paper and bordering were pasted, well folded on themselves, exactly even, then trimmed. The strips were folded in a small package to carry to the wall, and it proved much better than carrying them in long strips. If any pieces were trimmed from the pasted paper, they were doubled, paste sides together, before dropping. That saved a vast amount of work when cleaning up time came.

Cracks in the wall were covered by pasting a piece of white muslin over them and allowing it to get perfectly dry before paper was put over it. Then there was no trace of them.

DRESS HINTS.

A piece of soft flannel is better than a brush for removing dust from silk.

Cut steel buttons may be polished with powdered pumice stone slightly moistened and applied with a soft brush or cloth.

A new silk petticoat can be made to last twice its usual length of time if an underruffle of sateen be made and placed on the inside of the silk flounce at the edge.

Remember in cutting out a bodice that all the portions which are liable to stretch, such as sleeves, yokes and collars, should be cut on a lengthwise fold of the material.

A short sleeve or a long sleeve with a fullness above the elbow is always more satisfactory when made over a tight fitting lining, as the lining holds the fullness in its proper place.

To make a walking skirt the right length—that is, just to clear the ground without appearing too short—measure the person to be fitted from the waist line to the ground and then deduct an inch and a half.

Chafing Dish Utensils.

Useful utensils for the chafing dish are a wooden spoon and a measuring cup of glass marked into halves, quarters and thirds. A glass mug is more of an ornament than a tin one. A metal tray, too, is important—one that is large enough to hold not only the chafing dish, but the spoons, salt, pepper, etc., used for seasoning. The tray will prevent any danger of burning from the heat of the lamp or from alcohol that may be spilled. Glass and porcelain jars in numerous sizes and with tight covers are very useful for the chafing dish closet. Very good toast may be made over the chafing dish. For this purpose a little wire toaster covered with an asbestus mat is made either with or without a handle. The toaster is placed on the frame directly over the flame.

Eczema In a Child.

For a child who is afflicted with eczema you will find nothing more soothing and harmless than this cosmetic jelly, which is inexpensive and most easily made: Seven ounces of rosewater and thirty grains of gum tragacanth; let soak overnight, strain through fine muslin and add half an ounce of alcohol, half an ounce of glycerin and a pinch of boric acid. This may be applied to the entire body of the child, and when the skin is rough or the little face smarting from the wind it will be found the greatest comfort.

Extravagance of Attire.

The curse of feminine existence is extravagance of attire, says a writer. There are women who waste in other directions, but the number is small compared with that of wives and daughters who keep hardworking men on the anxious seat by their love of expensive clothing. The good old days of renovation must be passing away, save for the few who have been able to keep their desires within the bounds of a modest income, and they are the only kind of women who belong rightly in the homes of working men.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS LILLIAN MUSGAT.

A Fashion Artist Whose Work Brings Her a Princely Income.

Miss Lillian Musgat of Chicago enjoys the triple distinction of being the hardest working young woman in the world, of earning more money than any other woman commercial artist in the world—a much greater sum than is earned by any of her rivals among the sterner sex—and of having worked herself up within six years from nothing a week to an income that is princely. Only twenty-four years of age, she learned to draw fashion pictures in an engraving house, and now she has a studio of her own high up in Quincy street, where she has all the work she can do and is able to command prices paid to few if any of the fashion artists in the world.

This fashion artist, whose drawings are seen in the advertisements every morning in the Chicago papers and whose work probably is scanned by more women than that of any other artist, is classed by all those who know something of the amount of work she turns out as the hardest working woman in Chicago or in the world.

MISS LILLIAN MUSGAT.

The fashion artist comparatively is a new employee of the engraver, and in no place is he paid more than living wages. His first fate is to come in and work without pay to learn, the learning to be accomplished without supervision or attention.

This was the way with Miss Musgat. She worked a couple of years putting in checks and laces and ruffles and everything included under the mysterious name of "detail." It was apprenticeship, with no one to teach you—you just learned; that was all.

After Miss Musgat acquired a good knowledge of the business she took a course at the Art institute, then worked for a time on salary and finally opened a studio and started in business for herself. Since then her success has been phenomenal.—Chicago Tribune.

Decorative Crude Materials.

The various forms of work which have taken for themselves the modest name of handicraft have demonstrated in a striking way the immense possibilities for decorative purposes which lie hidden in the crudest materials. Burlap is only a development of bagging, and many another so called "art material" is nothing more than a stuff of homely origin, says an exchange.

Yet for their purposes these ruder stuffs have in them a certain style that the more finely woven stuffs utterly lack. The coarsest crash made can be turned into the most artistic sort of hangings by stenciling, while a delicate silk stuff, though it might be prettily stenciled, would be utterly lacking in character.

Table covers and couch covers are made of rough bagging, treated in a bolder way, of course, like the delicate Mexican drawn work, the same spider webs and butterflies woven of threads in the open corners left, while threads that cross are drawn. That same bagging can be stenciled or motifs of it in colors may be appliqued into it, each part of the figure outlined with heavy thread—not unlike a sort of glorified twine.

Linen Hints.

When hanging your linen to dry use two lines comparatively close and parallel for your tablecloths and sheets. Throw one selvage side of your tablecloth over one line toward the other, allowing it to hang down about a quarter of a yard and being careful to pin it a short distance from the ends. Take the opposite for your cloth and throw it over the other line, facing the first line, and pin it in the same manner. This will form a sort of bag and will prevent to a considerable extent the wild blowing of the tablecloth in windy weather.

After the table linen is thoroughly dried remove it from the line and prepare to dampen it. A whisk broom is excellent for the purpose.

Table linen, in order to bring out the bright gloss that makes it attractive, should be dampened quite considerably. Sprinkle the tablecloths freely, being sure that the selvage ends or hemstitched borders are thoroughly damp, says Woman's Life. Roll up tightly, patting the roll frequently to spread the dampness.

Too Young to Marry.

The girl who marries when she is but seventeen or eighteen has not had time to get to now thoroughly all that is included in a good education. Is it any wonder that when she enters on her new life, with its thousand and one fresh pleasures, duties and distractions, she should cease to take much interest in the work of her school days? Unless she is a really intellectual woman she, as a rule, drops out of all the literary and artistic pursuits of her girlhood and becomes absorbed in domesticity or in a round of amusements, to the great detriment of her mental vigor, says Woman's Life. Girls who marry very young for this reason run a great risk of becoming very uninteresting in middle age, more especially if the income on which they marry is a narrow one, entailing a home life limited by lack of means and leisure to travel, to read and to cultivate their minds and necessitating close attention to the supervision of the household.

To the Engaged Girl.

Start finding out the cost of food. Learn the cuts of the joints also when certain items of diet such as game, fish, etc., are in season. Then study cooking. Even though your lover's income may be sufficient to provide a reliable servant or servants, you should, nevertheless, know thoroughly how everything should be cooked. Then, in the matter of housework, master all its details. Do not imagine that because you will not have to sweep rooms, clean silver and burnish brass you need know nothing of such work. On the contrary, you should be proficient in every housewifely trifle or you are not fit to be an employer of domestic labor.

Saves Dishwashing.

"I've almost solved the dishwashing problem," said a New York housewife. "I use those lovely carved wooden trays for bread and cake and all kinds of dry fruit, and they never have to be washed. I slip a paper napkin or doily under the bread and throw it away when I am through with it. My salads I serve in the shell of a grape fruit or an orange, and I cook my meats on a plank, including fish and fowl. I bake French pancakes on a soapstone griddle, and in all these ways I lighten the burden of housework."

Baby's Eyes.

Absolute cleanliness is one of the most important things to consider. The infant's eyes should be bathed two or three times a day and dried with a very soft fine towel or handkerchief. If, as is sometimes the case, the eyelids get incrusted from cold or other causes, great care is needed to prevent the lashes being pulled out when the matter is removed. The proper course to pursue is to bathe the eye with lukewarm milk and water and afterward apply a very little pure vaseline to the edge of the upper lid.

Spanish Fritters.

An excellent way to use a stale loaf of bread is to make what are known as Spanish fritters. Cut stale bread into even slices. Dip each into a mixture of egg and milk, using one egg to a cup and a half of milk. Butter a hot frying pan and brown the slices in it. Serve them hot, either with a little powdered sugar and cut lemon or with a bit of currant jelly. Sometimes a pinch of grated nutmeg is added to the egg and milk, and as this is a sufficient flavor when it is used the lemon will not be needed.

Your Own Hair.

If your hair is so thin that you cannot carry out some desired style of coiffure without the assistance of a braid or rat, save your combings. When you have collected a large bundle take it to a good hairdresser, and he will untangle the mass and fashion whatever you wish, provided the quantity of hair permits. Then if anybody asks you if your hair is false you may truthfully say, "It is all my own."

Cleaning Porcelain.

Common house ammonia is much better for cleaning porcelain than sand soaps. Many of the stains on porcelain tubs, washbasins and sinks are caused by allowing them to be injured. When new porcelain is smooth and is rubbed with sand soaps it becomes rough, and it is quite impossible to remove the discoloration.

Coarse Eyebrows.

In the event of the brows being staring and coarse a bit of mucilage or bandoline applied at night after smoothing them into shape will prove effectual. Quite a bit of difference in the brows can be accomplished by accentuating the upper line by rubbing the hairs up from the bottom, or vice versa.

Dress and Emotion.

Every woman knows that the consciousness of being ill dressed has a distinct effect on her expression and manner. On the other hand, the feeling that one is well and tastefully dressed imparts a cheerfulness to the spirits that finds clear expression in the looks.—Drapers' Record.

Olive oil is the beauty doctor's cure all for poor complexions. He advises its use in every possible food, plenty of green salads reeking with it, and then doses of it by the teaspoonful, says an authority on health.

A small paint brush with long, strong, supple bristles is the best thing with which to keep cut glass clean. It is the only means of reaching the dust in the small carvings.

Spirits of camphor should not be used on the complexion. It is very strong and will cause the cuticle to become rough.

For the removal of grease spots from woolen dresses salt dissolved in alcohol is recommended.

Brain Strain

"In the long history of the past glasses were resorted to for the purpose of correcting imperfect vision only. More especially during the later years it has been observed that glasses now and again have relieved nervous disorders, and the more closely we have studied and observed the effects of properly adjusted glasses in disease, the more convinced we have grown that eyestrain is the cause of many serious disorders, and that its correction will in a great measure relieve troubles that have heretofore baffled the skill of the medical profession. All work connected with the function of vision is done at the base of the brain."—Prentice. We correct Brain Strain by the "Prentice" Lens and System.

MILLINERY OPENING!

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Takes pleasure in announcing to the public, that her Millinery Opening takes place on Monday, Sept. 10th, and following days, to which all are cordially welcome.

This will be one of the finest Millinery displays ever shown by Miss Campbell, and all should take this opportunity of seeing this grand display.

MISS M. CAMPBELL.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"DOLLY VARDEN" OPENED THE THEATRICAL SEASON LAST NIGHT.

Considering the hot weather, there was a large audience at the Carman last night, when dainty "Dolly Varden" opened the theatrical season. Manager Carman is to be heartily congratulated on securing such a superb attraction as the initial offering to his patrons. The pretty opera house, with new carpets and added electric lights, looked exactly what it is — a credit to any city twice the size of Belleville. As before remarked the attraction last night was superb. "Dolly Varden" treats of the good old days when George the First was king, though it may be remarked that the "Dolly" of the comic opera has no connection with the old locksmith's pretty daughter, of whom Dickens wrote. The comic opera tells the story of a pretty country girl, with a large fortune and a scheming guardian who wishes to marry her and tries to hide her from the world. She, determined to see the sights of London, sees and falls in love with a handsome officer, and the guardian, in his efforts to head off the lovers, overreaches himself and plays into their hands. The comedy element is introduced by a London exquisite, "Lord Gayspark," very well portrayed by Mr. Martin Cheesman. "Dolly Varden" contains some exceedingly catchy numbers, not the least of its features being a well-balanced and well-trained chorus There was delightful harmony in some of the choruses, while not one of them was poorly sung. The star, Miss Lillian Spencer, is fitted by nature for the part of "Dolly Varden," and played the kittenish tomboy to the life. Her merriment, at times, seemed rather forced, but she is a very young girl, and will, no doubt, outlive that kind of thing before long. Miss Spencer is a fair vocalist, but her voice seemed rather clouded last night. Miss Klara Farm, as "Lady Letitia Fairfax," a London belle, was very good, and her numbers were all excellently sung. John O'Donnell, as "Captain Horace Harcourt," and J. A. Wallerstedt, as "Captain Richard Belville," were both good singers and good actors, and easily fulfilled all required of them. The best singer of the company, however, was W. H. May, who, as "Lord Fairfax," sang several songs in a fine bass voice. His two numbers, "Lovers' Lane" and "The Song of the Sword," were splendidly given, the chorus in the last, as the male chorus fenced with each other while singing, made a striking and effective scene. In fact, too much praise could hardly be given the chorus; it was the best feature of an attraction very much above the average. The scenery was excellent and the costumes worthy of all the superlatives one could use. Powdered wigs, silks and brocades galore. Those were the days when men as well as women, dressed richly. The costumes in the wedding scene of "Dolly Varden" were brilliant, and must have cost a small fortune. Taken altogether, the attraction was all the advance notices claimed for it, and it was a well-pleased audience, which left the opera house at five minutes to eleven last night.

It is regrettable that many patrons of the local theatre persist in being late. Last night half of the first act was well-night spoiled for many in the audience because of latecomers. The curtain went up shortly after eight, but the tardy ones kept coming in for fully half an hour after that. They not only missed many good things themselves, but prevented others from enjoying them. Punctuality is not the strong point of many Belleville theatregoers, more's the pity.

"THE ARRIVAL OF KITTY."

This is what a New York paper said about the leading lady in "The Arrival of Kitty," which comes to the Carman next Tuesday, Sept. 18; "Possibly something personal about Miss Eveleen Dunmore, the dainty little woman who is appearing with such success this week at The Casino in The Arrival of Kitty, would not go amiss. Miss Dunmore, fair of skin and with charming flashing eyes, is young, as her audiences quickly judged. She is a colleen, born in Dublin, and came to this country eleven years ago. As has been noticed, too, probably the little woman is possessed of a remarkably sweet and silvery voice, one that reaches away up into D above high C, which Miss Dunmore accomplishes with apparent ease."

Overcome by Heat.

A man named Viscombs, an employee at the Rolling mills, was yesterday afternoon engaged in unloading scrap iron from a car when he was overcome by the heat. He fell and in falling had the misfortune to cut his head. The ambulance was called and the unfortunate man was taken to his home, where medical aid was rendered. He is doing nicely.

Ottawa, Sept. 11. — The Grand Trunk Railway company proposes to build a line between Ottawa and Kingston, to establish a short line to Toronto, and has taken over the charter of the Kingston, Smith's Falls and Ottawa Railway company. An application was made to-day to the city council for a three years' extension of time to complete the work towards which the city some years ago voted a bonus of $50,000. The money has never been earned.

Mayor Pressed Button; Fair Is Now Open.

BETTER EXHIBITS THAN EVER BEFORE IN HISTORY OF THE FAIR — FINE DISPLAY IN MAIN BUILDING — LIVE STOCK SPLENDID.

The big Belleville and East Hastings Fair is on once more.

The Mayor and party drove up to the grounds this afternoon, about 1.45, and His Worship immediately drove up to the main building, pressed the button (on his vest) and declared the fair of 1906 open to the world. But perhaps it would be as well to say something about the earlier doings.

Promptly at 8 o'clock this morning the gates of the Driving Park were opened, and the first day's doings of the Belleville and East Hastings Fair were on.

There were many visitors, though, as everybody knows, the first day, especially in the morning, is devoted chiefly to the placing of exhibits.

The Intelligencer visited the grounds this afternoon, and found things well under way.

Mr. Henry Fairman, the popular and hustling secretary, wore a cheerful smile and as little clothing as he could conveniently get along with Things looked promising, he said, the entries were larger and the exhibits, he believed, better than at any previous fair in the Society's history.

"Take a walk round and see for yourself," he said, and the newspaper man accepted the invitation.

A visit was first paid to the new exhibition building, recently erected. The exhibit inside this building was certainly an attractive one. Many Belleville merchants were represented. One side of the big building was devoted to the display of ladies' fancy work, etc., and the many pretty things shown were certainly calculated to win admiration from members of the fair sex, and even a mere man could see that rare skill had been shown in the manufacture of all the pretty things.

Next the fruit and vegetable display was visited. The dry season does not appear, judging by the exhibits, to have done much harm to fruit and vegetables in this district. The display seemed fully up to the average of former years.

The live stock exhibit is a large one, and some splendid specimens of sheep, cattle, hogs and horses are shown. The oppressively hot weather seemed hard on some of the arrivals. The promised cool wave will surely be a relief to them.

There is a fine exhibit of poultry, and the roosters crowed defiantly, in spite of the heat and their strange surroundings.

A glance at the track, as one passed along, showed it to be in fine condition, and there should be some fast time made in the speeding events of this and to-morrow afternoon. Some speedy nags are entered, and the free-for-all, on Thursday afternoon, should provide plenty of excitement for lovers of harness horse racing.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the judging in the ladies' work took place. So far as the writer could see, every one of the exhibitors was entitled to a prize.

About 2 o'clock the I.O.O.F. band arrived on the scene. They passed around the side handing out an inspiring march, everyone of 'em perspiring like a watering can.

A steady steam of people followed the band through the gates, and it appeared that the first day's fair, though it would not be so largely attended as the second day's, would still be a winner.

A summary of the different track events, etc., will appear to-morrow.

Wedding Bells Still A-Ringing.

NUPTIALS OF DR. THOS. W. CALDWELL AND MISS LENA A. FORD THIS MORNING.

A very pretty house wedding took place at 11 o'clock this morning, at the residence of Mrs. Ford, Bridge street, when her daughter, Miss Lena Alberta, became the wife of Dr. Thomas Wilfrid Caldwell, of Yorkton, Province of Saskatchewan. The interior of the home was very tastefully decorated with potted plants and flowers for the occasion.

Rev. A. H. Drumm, Pastor of the John Street Presbyterian Church, was the officiating minister.

The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Ernest Ford, of Peterboro. She was attired in a beautiful gown of pattern lace over chiffon and duchesse satin, and wore the customary bridal veil. Her bouquet consisted of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid was Miss Della Ford, sister of the bride, her dress being of white silk trimmed with white Valenciennes lace. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Gordon Caldwell, brother of the groom, was best man.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of silk voile, trimmed with real lace, and carried a bouquet of red roses. At the conclusion of the ceremony a wedding breakfast was partaken of.

The young couple are both well-known and popular in this city. The groom is a son of Dr. Caldwell and spent the greater portion of his life here.

This afternoon, Dr. Caldwell and his bride left for the west, and after a visit to some places of interest will proceed to their home at Yorkton.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts.

A Pleasant Cruise

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Black and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Thompson and family have returned home after a cruise among the Thousand Islands. The party went from here by the steam-yacht Dean, and report having had a most enjoyable trip.

May Take Belleville In.

Cobourg, Sept. 11. — It is not improbable that Belleville may be included in the scope of the operations of the Northumberland - Durham Power Company. To-day J. A. Culverwell, managing director of the company, noticing that Belleville had asked the Hydro-Electric Commission for power, wired the Mayor of Belleville, saying the company is ready to negotiate with the city.

Belleville Delegates.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, Rev. George Brown and Messrs. W. W. Chown and Wm. Johnson, of this city, are delegates from Belleville to the General Methodist Conference which is being held in Montreal.

RARE APPETIZERS.

Another Quake At Va'paraiso.

New York, Sept. 12.—(Special.).—A Valparaiso cable yesterday says:

"Another violent earthquake at a quarter past eight o'clock last evening caused a terrible panic. The people, fearing another catasthrophe, spent the whole night in parks and open spaces. The quakes continued at short intervals, but were less violent."

Miss Irwin's Millinery Opening Delights Ladies

Thronged to their utmost capacity by delighted visitors Miss Irwin's showrooms to-day provided a sight worthy of any city in Canada. Certainly her reputation as a leader in the "Millinery Art" is provincial. Some beautiful pattern hats were shown us, many of the real gems, both beautiful and original in design, being from her own workroom. Miss Edith McCurdy ably assisted Miss Irwin in the showrooms. Miss Minnie Sills, who has charge of the workroom as designer and trimmer, has few equals. The already large staff has been increased this season, owing to the ever-growing business. The picture hats, with their sweeping plumes, are the striking feature, the Empress, Elsie Janis, Peter Pan, the Hood, Vesta Tilley, all strive for preference. To describe the many varied styles would be impossible. Ostrich feathers have a new lease of life, they are more shown than in former years. The uncurled feather, and vulture are both novelties. Wings, osprey and flowers are also much used. Little beaver hats, as well as feathers and fur hats, are decidedly new. Many of the felt hats are two tone and exceedingly pretty. The colors most used are Browns, Empire Greens, Wine to Burgundy, Old Rose to Pink, Blue, London Smoke, Grays, Black and White. Special designs for mourning and children were shown; also Neckwear and Belts, for which this house is noted. Miss Irwin buys for cash, and gathers from all parts the most choice and rare goods procurable. The present showing is one of unsurpassed beauty and elegance, which we advise all to see.

A Painful Accident.

On Monday afternoon Mr. Thomas Hampton, an elderly man, met with a painful accident. He was engaged in doing some carpenter work at the residence formerly occupied by the late Mr. John Bell, when some bricks fell from above him and one of them struck him upon the head, inflicting an ugly scalp wound. Mr. Hampton was conveyed to a physician near by, who was compelled to take several stitches in the wound produced. He is now doing as well as could be anticipated, and no serious results are looked for.

Gives Up Leadership

Mr. John Allen, who for some time past has been leader of the Fifteenth band, has given up that position, as he finds it too great a tax on his time. He will not, however, sever his connection with the band. The leadership will now be assumed by Mr. Carey. The members of the band are sorry to see Mr. Allen give up his position, but realize that business exigencies justify it.

ONE CHRISTIAN KILLED

But 140 Jewish Corpses Picked Up in Siedice Streets.

As Many More Hidden In Cellars—Residents Still In Panic, Fearing Slaughter—1,000 Jews Arrested at Warsaw—Children Used as Terrorist Agents—Villages Bombarded by Artillery—Two Days' Fight.

Warsaw, Sept. 12.—With an armed guard, an Associated Press correspondent visited Siedice yesterday.

Shops were closed, and the people were panic-stricken fearing slaughter. Soldiers were everywhere.

By actual count, 140 corpses were picked up in the streets, and it is stated that as many more bodies are hidden in cellars.

Only one Christian is known to have been killed, and so far as can be learned, no soldier was killed.

Trainloads of fugitives are leaving Siedice for the south.

Soldiers Very Brutal.

The undisciplined soldiery acted with the utmost brutality all through the troubles.

Here in Warsaw there are some fears of an outbreak.

Soldiers last night searched the Jewish quarter. Several conflicts resulted, and two Jews were killed and eleven seriously wounded.

Forty-two supposed revolutionists have been arrested here, and will be tried by a field court-martial.

A military officer was killed here last night by terrorists.

Children Terrorists Agents.

Warsaw, Sept. 12.—In a search for terrorists, made here Monday night, some 200 houses located in different parts of Warsaw were ransacked by troops. About 1,000 arrests were made, and most of the prisoners are Jews.

Many children were taken into custody. They are employed by the terrorists to execute attempts upon Government officials because the movements of children do not awaken suspicion, and they are not liable to capital punishment.

Bombarded by Artillery.

Stavropol, Sept. 12.—It is reported here by telegraph that the Village of Shulgati has been bombarded by artillery in consequence of disorders, which commenced there following the arrest of M. Onipko, the peasant leader of the outlawed Parliament, who is to be tried by court-martial for complicity in the rising at Cronstadt last July. The inhabitants of the village fled, and their houses were destroyed. The artillery, according to report, is now moving against the Village of Petroffskaia.

Revolutionist Outburst.

Kamyshin, Sept. 12.—The arrival here of the governor and a strong force of troops from Saratov has resulted in the subduing of the uprising.

The town had been given over for two days of fighting between the police and the mob. Taking advantage of the absence of most of the garrison to suppress disorders in Nicholaievke, the revolutionists organized a revolt on Sunday. They freed a number of political prisoners and threw barricades across streets, which they held with success against the police.

Dundas Traveler Runs Amuck.

Detroit, Sept. 12.—Without any warning or provocation Wallace Cameron, a young man from Beamsville, Ont., traveler for a Dundas, Ont., firm, buried the blade of his pocket knife in the back of William Lucking, who was walking off the Windsor ferry boat on the Detroit side Monday night. Cameron had raised his arm to strike again when he was placed under arrest on the charge of assault with intent to go great bodily harm. Lucking was able to go home after having the wound, a cut two and a half inches deep, and an inch long, dressed.

What the Cuban Rebels Proposed to the Government.

Havana, Sept. 12.—On Sept. 14 congress will take up a stringent bill for the enforcement of public order.

It is learned that the proposition submitted to the Government by the rebels was that half of the Senators and half the representatives resign, and that new elections be held to fill these vacancies. President Palma and the members of the Cabinet were to hold their positions. New general elections also were to be held and new municipal laws were to be provided for.

All the men remaining in the towns of San Jose and Las Ojas, near Cienfuegos, have joined the rebels.

Baldomero Acosta, a prominent resident of Havana, whose loyalty to the Government has been questioned at various times, and who denied his disloyalty, joined the rebels yesterday with 100 followers.

The rebels under Guzman have been breaking telegraph apparatus in railroad stations in Santa Clara Province. They have also seized a train of foodstuffs.

So far as war developments went, yesterday was one of the quietest since the outbreak of the insurrection. The Government's outright declaration that the war will be prosecuted to a finish was everywhere the sole topic of conversation.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the city yards since last Friday as reported by the railways were, 60 car loads, composed of 924 cattle, 174 hogs, 1287 sheep and lambs, with 72 calves.

Exporters.

Trade was dull for shipping cattle. One load was on sale, which averaged about 1300 lbs. each. The owner was offered $4.60 per cwt., but refused to accept, and they were unsold at the close of the market. Notwithstanding all the reports to the contrary about shipping cattle being worth and selling from $4.75 to $4.90, which was published in an evening paper, no such prices were paid.

Butchers.

Choice picked lots were worth $4.50 to $4.80, the latter price being bid for one choice steer, and the bid was refused by the drover; loads of good at $4.25 to $4.45; medium to good at $3.90 to $4.20; common, $3.50 to $3.65; cows, $2.50 to $3.50; canners, $1.50 to $2.25.

Feeders and Stockers.

Harry Murby reports that there were few stockers and feeders of any kind offered, altho a few well-bred steers of fair weights would find a market. Mr. Murby reports prices steady at following quotations: Best feeders, 900 to 1100 lbs., at $3.90 to $4; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., at $3.40 to $3.65; best stockers, 600 to 800 lbs., at $3.25 to $3.50; medium stockers, 600 to 900 lbs., at $2.75 to $3.25; common stockers, 600 to 900 lbs., at $2.25 to $2.50.

Milch Cows.

A limited number sold at steady prices ranging all the way from $30 to $63 each.

Veal Calves.

Trade good for the right kind, but inferior were slow of sale. Prices ranged from $3.50 for inferior to $5 and $6 for medium to good and $7.25 was paid for 3 prime calves by J. H. Dingle of Hamilton.

Sheep and Lambs.

Trade was good considering the bulk of the offerings, which were made up of the culls and the bucks that are culled out of consignments going to Buffalo. Export ewes, $4 to $4.40 per cwt.; bucks, $3 to $3.50 per cwt.; choice yearlings for butcher purposes sold as high as $5 per cwt.; lambs at $5.50 to $6.25 per cwt. for the bulk, but a few selected lots sold as high as $6.60 per cwt.

Hogs.

The run of hogs was light, but prices were quoted unchanged at $6.40 for selects and $6.15 for light fats.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET

East Buffalo, Sept. 11.—Cattle—Receipts slow and barely steady; prime steers, $5.90 to $6.25; shipping, $5 to $5.65; butchers', $4.25 to $5.25.

New York, Sept. 11.—Beeves—Receipts, 290; no trading, feeling steady; exports today, 960 cattle and 2600 quarters of beef; to-morrow, 201 cattle, 25 sheep and 4200 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 428; veals steady; no trading in western calves or grassers; common to prime veals sold at $5 to $8.75 per 100 lbs.; fed calves at $4.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2024; sheep steady; choice lambs steady; others 15c to 25c lower; sheep sold at $4 to $5.25; culls at $2.50; lambs at $6.50 to $8.27½; one car at $8.75; culls, $5.

Hogs—Receipts, 2245; market steady; state and Pennsylvania hogs, $6.90 to $7 per 100 lbs.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 12,000; steady, but slow; common to prime steers, $3.75 to $6.80; cows, $2.70 to $4.75; heifers, $2.60 to $5.35; bulls, $2.25 to $4.50; calves, $3 to $8; stockers and feeders, $2.00 to $4.35.

Hogs—Receipts, 22,000; market 10c lower; choice to prime, heavy, $6.20 to $6.30; medium to good, heavy, $6 to $6.15; butchers' weights, $6.25 to $6.40; good to choice, heavy, mixed, $6 to $6.25; packing, $5.50 to $6.20; pigs, $5.00 to $6.55.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 22,000; steady; sheep, $4.25 to $5.75; yearlings, $5.00 to $6.40; lambs, $6.50 to $8.

Great Methodist Conference.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Three hundred and four delegates, and Dr. Carman, general superintendent, constitute the seventh general quadrennial Methodist conference, which convenes in St. James' Church here to-day. The reception committee state that the attendance will be complete.

Wheat On the Move.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—The grain receipts along the C. P. R. were very heavy yesterday, the total quantities marketed being 429,000 bushels of wheat and 18,000 of other grains.

THE $80,000 DIVISION

Former Manager of Home Life Retained $62,000 of It.

Mr. John Firstbrook Received $11,500—Other Directors Sold Their Stock at Par and Received Bonuses in Addition — Mr. Pattison Thought Mr. Stratton Would Be Recouped by the Increasing Value of Stock.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—The examination of Mr. A. J. Pattison, former manager of the Home Life, was continued before the Royal Insurance Commission yesterday, and Mr. Tilley questioned him at some length to show the difference between the various contracts which Mr. Pattison had as manager with the Home Life Co. He insisted that he had in 1898 given up a contract which brought him $2,600 a year for one which only returned him $1,200 per annum, because he thought the company, having changed to a level premium system, could not afford more, and that it would be better for them to revise the contract, so that the salary would be larger in subsequent years when the company's business and revenue were greater. Mr. Tilley next tried to obtain some idea as to the monetary value which Mr. Pattison placed on his contract in 1898, when it was made, but witness said he had not counted it. The change in the contract with the manager and the appointment of a permanent chairman were made by the directors, and the contracts with them were approved by the directors on Nov. 12, 1898.

Recommended by Committee.

These contracts were made on the recommendation of a committee composed of Messrs. John Phillips, Fred. Diver and John S. King, who recommended that the officials in question be appointed for life. It was, Mr. Pattison presumed, the intention of the committee to bind the company for the period of witness' life, but the contract was made for fifteen years. The minutes indicated that there were five directors present at the meeting at which the contracts were confirmed, including the manager and permanent chairman, with whom the contracts were made. Dr. John S. King and Mr. Hillock were the others present.

The first consideration he had given to the question of the value of the contract to him was when approached to sell his interest in the company. The question of amalgamation of the People's Life was first discussed with Hon. J. R. Stratton, who came to see him about it.

How $80,000 Was Fixed.

Coming down to the manner in which the $80,000 paid him to surrender his contract, Mr. Pattison said that he had computed the probable revenues of the company for the balance of the term of the contract, and found that he would receive approximately $80,000. He also referred the matter to the actuary of the Home Life, whose estimate of value was a little more than his own. It was based upon a certain percentage of growth annually, which might or might not have been realized. Mr. Pattison said that the probability of an extension of his own contract with the company was also a consideration.

Mr. Firstbrook Got $11,500.

Mr. Firstbrook, who, Mr. Pattison said, received $11,500 cash for the surrender of his contract, in addition to the sale of his stock for $3,375 out of the $80,000, complained that he did not get full value for his contract.

What Stock Was Worth.

Taking up the question of the value of the capital stock of the Home Life at the time of the amalgamation of the two companies, Mr. Tilley suggested that stock of the Home Life Co. could be obtained on the market at $20 per share or less, but Mr. Pattison could not agree with that suggestion because he did not know it was a fact. He admitted that in any large amount it could be obtained at some depreciation from the actual cost. In reply to further questions Mr. Pattison admitted he had never paid more than par value of the stock, and the premium paid for it for any stock he held and some he had bought for less. The annual reports to the Government, which were produced by Mr. Tilley, indicated a large impairment of capital up to the date of the amalgamation.

Mr. Stratton Obtained Control.

Mr. Pattison said he gave money to the directors for their stock, but it was not obligatory on them to sell the stock, and they were not necessarily to pass off the directorate. Mr. Stratton, in negotiating with witness, did not make any stipulation except that he was to receive a certain amount of stock, and that there would be room made on the board for certain directors of the People's Life. The arrangement was that he was to sell his own stock and to deliver the stock of all the Toronto directors, which would enable him to constitute the board as he desired. The question of reinsuring the business of the People's Life was discussed at three or four meetings, and witness informed them of Mr. Stratton's proposition, but did not mention that he was to receive $80,000 for surrendering his contract.

Directors Sold Their Stock.

Mr. Tilley suggested that the directors might have retired from the board, retaining their shares because they would have then been just as well off as their fellow-shareholders, but Mr. Pattison said he would not like to approach a director who had been on the board for 12 or 15 years, with the suggestion that he retire and make way for a new man unless he disposed of his interest in the company at the same time. The directors enquired the terms proposed by Mr. Stratton, and they learned there were some willing to sell their stock. The price which Mr. Stratton paid for their stock was the highest price at which it had been sold. Mr. Pattison produced a schedule showing the amounts he paid to the various directors who sold stock he delivered to Mr. Stratton.

Schedule In Two Parts.

The schedule contained two columns, the second being the amount paid for the stock itself at the price paid by Mr. Stratton to him for delivery, and the first column represented amount which he paid out of the $80,000 he received, as a consideration for services rendered the company as directors for which they had received no consideration:

Thos. R. Wood	$500	$1,250
Dr. J. S. King	500	1,250
Fred. Diver	1,250	1,250
Dr. Briggs	500	1,250
J. S. King	750	1,250
W. A. Firstbrook	250	1,625
J. Firstbrook	...	3,375
J. W. Curry, K. C.	500	1,250
N. F. Dupuis	250	1,000
T. Elliott	625	1,875
	$5,125	$16,625
J. Firstbrook	11,500
A. J. Pattison	...	12,475
J. Hillock	....	200
	$16,625	$29,320

Directors Got Bonuses.

Mr. Tilley enquired in detail into the transactions covered by the schedule. Mr. Pattison explained that the amounts mentioned in the first column were arrived at by negotiation with each individual separately. The figure which Mr. Stratton gave for the stock as set forth in the second column, was the highest price at which he had ever known it to be sold. Mr. E. R. Wood had held his stock for five or six years, and had received no dividends, hence the payment of $500. Dr. John S. King's transaction was a similar one; there was in addition in his case a desire to be continued as medical referee of the company. Although he ceased to be a director, Dr. King is still medical referee. In Mr. Diver's case there was, Mr. Pattison said, a misunderstanding. When he came to settle up, Mr. Diver, who had been connected with the company for 13 or 14 years without receiving director's fees, claimed that it had been arranged he should receive $2,500. Mr. Pattison said his impression had been that Mr. Diver was to get $25 per share, but Mr. Diver had convinced him that he had misunderstood that gentleman's proposition.

Press Told Him First.

Rev. Dr. Briggs, in answer to Mr. Tilley, said that he did not know anything about the $80,000 deal with Pattison until it came out in the morning paper.

"Did you think that it was worth $80,000 to cancel the contract?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"No. It was not in my mind. I said to a friend that these brethren should get $20,000 for their services, and my friends said: 'They would not get that much.' Nor did I know about the $11,000 deal with McCutcheon. It was an item that never came before the directors, and was an astounding thing to me. Although it appears in the minutes, it never passed under my eye."

Commissioner Kent wanted to know if some times the minutes were not read at the directors' meetings, and Dr. Briggs answered that at times they were not.

John S. King, vice-president of the Home Life, sworn, knew that Pattison had a contract, and also that Firstbrook had one. He knew that Pattison was going to get some financial benefit for himself, and thought of it entirely as a personal matter.

Commissioner Langmuir broke in: "You were a vice-president of this company, and you did not enquire what was going on?"

"I did not enquire."

Witness told how he received $2,000 for his fifty shares in the company, $1,200 for his actual stock and $750 as a bonus for his services as director.

A Bigger Slice.

Mr. Tilley asked witness if he had known Pattison got $80,000 would he have been after a bigger slice, and witness answered in the affirmative.

Witness understood that the McCutcheon contract was just an assignment of Pattison's agreement. As far as the stock itself, it was not worth $25 per share as an investment.

Fred. Diver, another director of the old Home Life, had fifty shares, which he sold for $2,500 to Pattison. He knew nothing of the $80,000 deal.

Dr. John S. King knew of the two contracts. Pattison had told witness that there were doings, but he would explain them later.

Witness thought that Pattison was getting $500 instead of $80,000, just the same bonus as the rest of the directors.

"There was some transaction going on," said Dr. King, "that was kept quiet from the rest of us. We realized that fully."

J. Walter Curry, K. C., was next. He knew nothing of the negotiations with the People's Life.

Mr. Curry's Understanding.

As to the transfer of Mr. Curry's stock, that was done by Mr. Pattison, with the understanding that the money was to come from Mr. Stratton.

Witness did not have anything to do with the McCutcheon agreement, although he seconded the resolution.

"Did you know that McCutcheon was getting $11,500 more than the $5,000?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"I don't know it yet," answered Mr. Curry. "I never saw that clause of the agreement."

John Firstbrook knew there was a deal going on, but as to the $80,000 transaction Pattison never told him anything about that. He thought if he had finished his contract with the Home Life for fifteen years he would have received $25,000.

In answer to the question: "Where did the money come from to pay you $11,000 and Mr. Pattison besides?" Mr. Firstbrook answered: "I thought it was to come from Mr. Stratton, who was a wealthy man."

The inner workings of the Canadian Homestead Co., of which witness was president and Pattison manager were enquired into by Mr. Tilley just before adjournment.

Jury Accuses Grandmother.

St. Thomas, Sept. 12.—After being out forty minutes, the jury in the inquest into the cause of the death of the infant daughter of Lizzie Smith brought in the following verdict:

"We find that the cause of death of the infant child of Lizzie Smith, between the hours of 3 and 4 o'clock Friday morning, Sept. 7, in Mrs. Smith's rooms, to be strangulation, done by its grandmother, Mrs. Smith."

Embezzled Lodge Funds.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Harry E. Griffiths, formerly secretary of the Ancient Order of Foresters, from whom it is charged that he has appropriated over $1,000. Griffiths has been missing since last Tuesday, and the police are trying locate him.

Ind. Liberal Candidate In Brome County Withdraws From Contest.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—Le Canada publishes a Knowlton despatch announcing the retirement of N. W. Westover, the Independent Liberal candidate in the Brome County provincial bye-election, thus giving the seat to W. F. Vilas, the regular Liberal nominee, by acclamation.

This was the seat held by Hon. J. C. McCorkill, translated to the bench, and Vilas only got the nomination by a majority of four votes. Failing the regular party nomination, Westover decided to run anyhow, but pressure was brought to bear on him to obviate the necessity of a contest.

Bye-Elections Writs Issued.

Ottawa, Sept. 13.—Writs were issued yesterday for the bye-elections in East Elgin and North Renfrew. The date of polling is Oct. 4; nomination a week earlier.

Yesterday the Government telegraphed for the North Renfrew writ to be returned. Beachburg Fair, the greatest annual event in the constituency, will be held from Oct. 3 to Oct. 5, and the Government had overlooked this all-important fact. The election will take place Oct. 9.

Bartender Fined and Warned.

Ottawa, Sept. 13.—The first conviction under the new license law, whereby the bartender is held liable with the hotelkeeper, was made in Ottawa yesterday. C. M. Whelan of the Dominion House was fined $50 and costs for selling in prohibited hours, and his bartender was fined $5 and costs, with a warning that a repetition would mean the cancelation of his license.

Mr. Aylesworth Pardons.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Thomas Hiram Lloyd, the Newmarket barrister who pleaded guilty at the December sessions last to stealing large sums of trust moneys and was sentenced to eighteen months in the Central Prison by Judge Winchester, has been pardoned by the Minister of Justice, Hon. A. B. Aylesworth. Lloyd served about half his time.

A Terrible C.P.R. Wreck.

Atlantic and Pacific Express Trains Meet Near Sudbury.

Twelve Excursionists of Harvesters' Train, Which Left Toronto Tuesday, Killed Outright, and Three Score Injured—Forty of These Are Seriously Injured And Some of Them May Die—List of Dead and Injured.

Sudbury, Sept. 13.—Twelve dead and three-score injured, many of them seriously, and some, perhaps, fatally, is the toll of a collision on the C. P. R. early yesterday morning near Azilda station, six and one-half miles west of Sudbury.

Failure of the brakes on the fast-going express bound east is held to be responsible for the collision which caused the first colonist car of the third section of harvester train No. 1 to be telescoped. All the dead and injured were in this car.

The accident occurred about 7.15 yesterday morning. The third section of train No. 1 going west, which left Toronto yesterday afternoon, and the second section of No. 2, coming east, had orders to cross at Azilda station.

The harvester train was to take the siding and had slowed up within 75 yards of the switch when the express plunged into it.

A Tremendous Crash.

There was a tremendous crash, a rendering of metal and wood, the hissing of stream, and then the air filled with the cries, shrieks and groans of passengers of both trains.

There were fifteen coaches on the harvester train with over 900 people on board. The eastbound train was also well-filled, but these passengers suffered only from the severe shaking up.

Luckily, fire did not break out among the wreckage, and the work of rescue was facilitated considerably. Those who were unhurt joined in the task of removing the injured and dead. Word was sent to Sudbury and four doctors were soon attending the wounded, who were later brought here and taken to the hospital and to local hotels.

The dead were also brought here, and preparations for an inquest are under way.

The Dead.

As announced by the C. P. R. officials at Montreal:

F. Blackwell, policeman, 55 Bellevue avenue, Toronto.

Charles Palmer, Toronto.

J. J. Noble, Barrie.

Thos. Puddicomb, Haysville (probably Hagersville, Ont.)

Louis Pfaff, New Hamburg, Ont.

Percy Baker, Stayner, Ont.

S. F. Milne, N. W. T.

William Puddicomb, New Hamburg, Ont.

Viola Schade and Olive Schade, Monkton, Ont. These were two children, 12 and 10 years of age, respectively. Their parents were also very seriously injured, and are now in the hospital at Sudbury.

Besides these there is still one body which has not been recognized.

Dead, as Given in Despatches.

Mrs. Schade, severely cut and bruised.

E. Walt, Stockdale, Ont., seriously injured.

Samuel Kingston, Frankfort, Ont., leg broken and internally injured.

Besides these about a score of other passengers were slightly injured, with broken fingers, bruises, cuts, etc.

Reported in the Despatches.

William Rowe, Frankfort, feet and internal injuries.

Herbert Williams, Toronto, cuts and bruises; doing well.

Sheldon Moran, Frankfort, fractured leg.

Seymour Chapman, Maple View, Ont., cut and bruised.

Mrs. Willoughby, Tennison, London, Eng., seriously injured.

John Stewart, Edgin Grove, Ont., seriously injured.

George Jarat, Essex, Ont., cut and bruised.

J. Walt, Stockdale, Ont., severely injured.

William Alexander, Parkhead, Ont., cut and bruised.

George Reis, Hanover, Ont., seven ribs broken and other injuries; doing well.

Samuel Kingston, Frankfort, legs and body badly cut; condition critical.

David Martin, Warsenberg, slightly injured.

Jacob Meisenger, Hanover, arms and head injured; not seriously.

C. Hamilton, Harper's Corners, Ont., slightly injured.

George Rose, Frankfort, slightly injured.

THE OFFICIAL ACCOUNT.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—Last night General Manager McNicoll of the C. P. R. gave out the following report of the wreck at Sudbury:

"As far as the meagre despatches we have of the accident go to show, it was caused by the failure of the brakes on the express to act. The harvesters' train was standing on the main line, waiting, while the brakeman ran ahead to turn the switch, so that it might be sidetracked to allow the passage of the east-bound express. Before he could get the switch in position the express arrived and plunged head-on into the train, smashing the first colonist to fragments and killing or injuring over half the people in it.

"The engineer of the east-bound express was not killed, and he later claimed that the accident was caused through the failure of the brakes on his train. A hasty examination of the train proved the correctness of this assertion. A little back of the middle of the express an 'angle cock' on the air brake tubes had been turned, which shut off the latter half of the train, where the heavy sleepers and diner were, from the front end. The result was that when the engineer applied the brakes from the front, half of the train was affected, and the weight of the latter half forced it on into the standing train.

"Had the brakes not been applied at all there would have been a much greater accident, as the harvesters' train was crowded with passengers."

A Drastic Investigation.

Regina, Sasks., Sept. 13.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., and the annual inspecting party of directors of the line, arrived in the city shortly after 6 o'clock last evening. They had already heard of the terrible accident near Sudbury, by which 12 harvesters are reported killed.

The president and individual members of the party expressed themselves as greatly shocked at the deplorable catastrophe, and the president said: "You may rest assured that the most Dairy Methods in Western Ontario.

We are told, says the London Free Press, of milk-fed pumpkins out west, how the fluid is absorbed and nourishes the fruit enormously. It is not a new idea, but as old as the hills.

A variation or extension of the plan consists of inoculating plants with curative and nutritive substances. Exhausted fruit trees are given sulphate of iron as a tonic. Colored injections have been used by Monryetski, a Russian, to show something of the penetration of the liquid into the cell. It rose to the top of the tree and passed deeply into the root.

In disease of stone fruits solutions of oxalic acid, creosote citric acid and salicylic acid have been tried, and the last named had particularly good effect. It is expected that suitable drugs will have influence in producing variations and new plants as well as in supplying food and medicine.

It is a long step from this to the drink of our dairy cattle, but the principle holds good in either case.

The charge is made that cattle owners in many instances fail to provide pure water for their beasts, which are driven to slake their thirst in stagnant pools, into which all sorts of filth are drained.

The question is not one of humanity to the cows alone. It comes home to every consumer of milk. Can pure milk come from such impure conditions? Surely not.

We have inspectors paid by Government to look after the sanitary state of the dairies. Are they doing their duty?

It is said all the inspectors of the western district of Ontario were assembled at a meeting of cheesemen where the filthy conditions of the trade formed the subject of a strong, even startling paper, read by a Montreal dealer in cheese, and not one of them rose in contradiction of what was said.

If in addition to foul stabling, lack of ablutions at milking, both of man and animal, and carelessness at the factories, there is the initial neglect to provide the cattle with pure water, what are the people to think of the product that comes to them for daily consumption?

We have experiments constantly going on to test the amount of butterfat in milk. It seems to be assumed by our experts that the degree of richness is everything. If there is 4 per cent. of butter fat it is a high and satisfactory test. Nothing else need be thought of.

Of far more consequence than a fraction in the percentage of fat, we imagine, is the general cleanliness of the conditions under which the milk is yielded, and sent to market. There is every testimony that reform is urgently called for in these matters.

Pure water for the cattle is a prime factor in good milk. Whatever is impure in the water drank from a stagnant slough, into which filth is drained, finds its way through the beast, as the chemicals do through the tree inoculated with them. You cannot get clean milk from the use of unclean water, whether it is drank by the cow or added to the milk pail.

If the inspectors are good for anything they should pay attention to this far-reaching complaint.

Borden in Nova Scotia

The Leader of the Opposition has addressed several meetings in Nova Scotia this week and will speak in other provinces before Parliament assembles. Though his own province sends a solid delegation of government supporters to parliament the Conservative party was sufficiently strong there to poll some 45 per cent. of the total vote in spite of the corrupt use of money and patronage to a greater extent perhaps than in any other group of eighteen constituencies.

Election trials in Halifax and Shelburne - Queen's partly disclose the methods employed. It is certain that both of Mr. Borden's opponents in Halifax would have been unseated and probably both would have been disqualified, if the proceedings had not been brought to an end by the decision of the Judges that they had deprived themselves of jurisdiction by their own act in fixing the date of the trial. But neither bribery nor patronage, nor the peculiar conclusions of election judges, can detach from Mr. Borden and his party the confidence and support of the majority of the independent and uncorruptible electors of Nova Scotia.

The meetings are said to have been full of enthusiasm. The events and disclosures of last session will be laid before the electors not only by the Opposition leader, but by other members and cannot fail to produce a strong impression on the minds of right thinking people.

The Peterboro authorities are determined to see that people behave themselves in the cemetery after this. Is it possible there have been such carryings on in Peterboro's Necropolis as are recorded by Dickens in Pickwick, when the grouty sexton, Gabriel Grubb, had the time of his life?

The Montreal Gazette takes an extremely practical view of the Toronto flag incident, with which everybody will not agree. The Gazette would stamp out sentiment altogether, apparently, but that is impossible, for, as some wise man has said, "It is sentiment that bowls this old world along." This is how The Gazette views the matter;

> "Besides sundry visitors, members of the Toronto City Council have raised their voices in anger because U. S. flags were hoisted over some of the exhibition buildings. No country, it is evident, has a monopoly of foolish people. It could be wished, though, that residents of Canada would not so often, by their conduct, impress the fact on the minds of their countrymen. There are proper as well as improper times and places for flying a foreign flag. An exhibition building on a day on which foreigners are especially invited to be present, comes easily within the category of proper place and time. This would be understood even in the United States."

The good old Gazette surely is an unconscious humorist. Observe the irony of the last sentence quoted above! The understanding might be there, but how long would it be, in the average U. S. City, if a British flag were hoisted, before a howling mob would be demanding its removal, threatening violence in case it were not done?

Like that other lovely creature, the peacock, she had a most dismal croak.

The Toronto Telegram thinks the O.H.A. will continue to play "amateur" hockey this coming winter, and that Toronto hockey athletes are too good and pure to be mixed up with people who play for money. Anyhow, the Telegram says, if there were open professionalism Belleville would have no chance, as the best players would be scooped in by the big places. Belleville is, therefore, advised to stick to amateurism. The Telegram's advice, of course, is quite disinterested, and it seems to think that a continuance of the present system of hypocrisy is a foregone conclusion. But we shall see what we shall see. The "amateur" farce is about played out in Montreal, and Toronto may soon be up against the same state of affairs. Honesty will eventually prevail in hockey, even as it has in baseball and lacrosse.

Millionaire milkmen is what Dr. Laberge, the chief medical health officer of Montreal, dubs those who have been selling milk which contains as many as eleven million bacteria per cubic centimeter — or about a seventeenth of a cubic inch. Bacteriology has to be thanked for many reforms concerning health, says the Montreal Witness. It has taught among other things, that where microbes abound in milk, above a certain maximum, the cause is dirt. An educational campaign in the cause of clean and nutritious milk has been in progress in Montreal for several years now. Offenders against the by-law have had their milk seized by the milk inspectors, and have been prosecuted and fined. Nevertheless, wilfully or ignorantly, the law continues to be broken, and a good deal of poor and filthy milk is still sold. Several milkmen are to be prosecuted in the Recorder's Court for alleged uncleanliness of their milk, the allegation in one case being that the milk is allowed to stand in a stable after being drawn. In the nature of things such milk draws and absorbs the odors around it, and is so far poisoned — yet the charge is made that it has been sold and fed to infants. The time may come when such offenders will be forbidden again to handle milk for sale. At all events, the publicity of such a conviction will come to have as in the case of the Chicago meat packers, the same effect.

"I think he got just what he deserved. The trouble is that he thinks his parents will encourage him in his rebellion against the teacher's authority. The case will be dismissed."

In the above words, Toronto's magistrate dismissed a case of assault against a pedagogue, who was alleged to have unduly punished a pupil. The words quoted might well be pasted in the hats of members of different Boards of Education, to be pondered over when complaints of a like nature come to them. As a general thing, a boy in a public school gets just what is coming to him. If he behaves himself in a proper way he is properly treated; if he goes looking for trouble, he generally finds it. That's the experience of an old boy who has been to a public school himself.

Eye Strain

(Brain Strain)

By far the commonest cause of NERVOUSNESS.

The actual underlying cause of many ills, which the thousands of sufferers are vainly trying to relieve by drugs. Really the most dangerous evil that now exists, because it gives rise to brain irritation of so many different degrees. The most unsuspected, and therefore, neglected menace to the general health, because the very brain-strain enables the person to "see alright."

Very often completely changes the person's disposition, by the intense irritation of nerve-centers in the brain.

Some very remarkable CURES have followed the correction of hidden eye defects by our expert Optician.

Acts as a Bar to Profitable Employment.

You cannot afford to grow old.

In these days of strenuous competition it is necessary to maintain, as long as possible, one's youthful appearance.

It is impossible to do this without retaining a luxurious growth of hair.

The presence of Dandruff indicates the presence of a burrowing germ which lives and thrives on the roots of the hair until it causes total baldness.

Newbro's Herpicide is the only known destroyer of this pest, and it is as effective as it is delightful to use.

Herpicide makes an elegant hair dressing as well as Dandruff cure.

Dog Rescued Tourist From Face of a Cliff.

(London Express.)

A spaniel was chiefly responsible for saving the life of a man who had climbed the precipitous cliffs at Ilfracombe on Wednesday night and was unable to return.

The reckless climber was William Amery of Bath, who was staying at Ilfracombe. About 7.30 on Wednesday evening he went out on Torrs Cliff, and climbed down to the beach. As the tide was rising rapidly he tried to ascend the cliff, but when he had reached a point about 200 feet above the beach he lost his nerve and was unable either to ascend or descend.

His shouts for help were heard by some young women, who were strolling on top of the cliff, and they raised an alarm. Several boats were put off to the rescue and as the first boat left the quay the dog, which belonged to one of the rescuing party, jumped on board when it was 12 feet away from the quay.

It was put on board a boat moored alongside the quay, but again jumped on the rescuing boat and was allowed this time to stay.

By the time the rescuers arrived Amery was too exhausted to shout, and he tried to indicate his position by burning matches. These were insufficient, however, but the dog was put ashore and he led the rescuers up the cliff to where the young man was clinging.

The problem then arose of how to get him down in the darkness and the dog again proved of invaluable assistance. He led the little party from ledge to ledge along the face of the cliff until the shore was reached in safety. Had it not been for the dog's guidance it would have been impossible for the men to find the footholds in the cliff in the dark.

The dog, which is named Dash, is about five years old, and of no particular pedigree.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Coal Will Be Cheaper Under New Rate Law

U. S. RAILROADS CANNOT, AFTER MAY, 1, 1908, PREVENT COMPETITION IN COAL.

Within the next twenty months the railroads of the United States must divest themselves of all ownership, either direct or indirect, in coal properties, says the Washington correspondent of The Brooklyn Eagle, May 1, 1908, is the date by which they must be out of the coal business. Many things can be accomplished in twenty months, but, according to railroad officials, the time is none too long in which to accomplish the task Congress has put upon them. Just now the railroad lawyers, traffic managers and other officials are busy with affairs that have to do with the going into effect of most of the provisions of the new rate law, two weeks from next Tuesday, but the directorates of the great railroad systems are not overlooking the provision of the law relating to the alliance between their roads and coal concerns.

About the time Congress adjourned there was a good deal of quiet talk that the roads would not make any effort to dispose of their fuel properties for a year or more. The impression went out that the roads had some sort of secret understanding with influential members of Congress, that the so-called "coal" section of the rate law would be repealed before 1908; that it was inserted in the law to appease public sentiment, and that the railroads need not worry about it. Of course, there never was any foundation for such a report, and the fact that the railroads that are heavy owners in coal properties are now preparing to dispose of them is the best evidence that the managers of the railroads understand pretty well that Congress has put the provision into the law to stay.

In the estimation of many persons this fifth paragraph of section 1 of the new rate law is the most important provision in the law. Unless they are mistaken, it will work a greater commercial change than other provisions of the act. They will be disappointed if it does not bring more direct benefits to the public than the section relating to just and equitable rates or any other section. It is evident that the provision is the one that hits the railroads the hardest. With some of them it means a complete reorganization of their business.

It is pretty well understood that for the last ten or fifteen years the coal business of the country has been gradually passing into the control of the railroads. If Congress had not interfered, a few years more would have brought absolute control of the product by the great railroad systems. The interstate commerce commission has no record of the exact coal holdings of the roads, but it has information showing that it is extensive. An accurate statement of the relationship of the railroads to the coal output would be practically impossible, because so much of the coal business is controlled by the roads indirectly. Between now and May 1, 1908, the commission will endeavor to obtain all the facts available on the subject, so that it may be prepared to prosecute roads that have not divested themselves of coal holdings by the time the law takes effect.

Only a few of the roads own coal properties outright. Practically every road that does a large coal carrying business indirectly owns or controls the mines from which it draws its shipments. If the roads had exercised their ownership or control of the coal business with discretion congress probably would not have disturbed them.

It was the constant complaint from every coal producing state that independent operators were being discriminated against that led the legislators to take up the subject. Naturally, if a railroad owned, directly or indirectly, a coal mine along the line of its road which was able to supply the demand of the market for coal from that locality, it favored its own mine to the disadvantage of the mine of an independent owner in the same territory. It was not human nature, but business, that the road's own mine should be favored in the matter of cars, switching facilities, rates and everything else that enters into the business of transporting coal from the mine to the market.

For years this form of discrimination has been practiced in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and every other state that furnishes large qauntities of coal. If the letter of the law is carried out—and the interstate commerce commission will undoubtedly see that it is—the coal business will be revolutionized within the next two or three years. Unless the law is violated, the coal mines must all fall into the hands of private owners and the old order of competition restored. There will be no more closing down of five or six mines so that large profits may be made from a single plant owned by the railroad company or controlled by some of the officers of the company for the benefit of the company.

The enforcement of the law ought to bring prices down. Men who have been in the business of mining and marketing coal for years say it will. With the railroads eliminated from the business except as common carriers, coal will, as a rule, it is pointed out, be marketed at the nearest available market. With the railroads interested in the business it has frequently been the rule to make consumers pay for "long haul" coal simply because the railroads could, by enforcing the rule, get more out of the business. It has been alleged, for instance, that the railroads penetrating the West Virginian field and also crossing Ohio and Indiana force customers to buy West Virginia coal in preference to the Indiana product near at hand.

If the allegation is true, the railroads accomplish this feat by refusing to supply cars to move the Indiana output, while they could find plenty of cars to haul the coal from the mines in West Virginia, in which they were interested. After they have divested themselves of all interest in coal properties, the roads will probably not be so anxious to crowd local coal out of the market for products of faraway mines. Whatever their attitude may be, they will not be able to control the situation. The local mines will be able to get cars in which to market their product, and that alone will solve the problem.

It will be interesting to see how the capitalists solve the situation in the anthracite region. Evidently they have a nice problem ahead of them there. It will also be worth while watching to see whether the price of anthracite comes down after the railroads are divorced from the business.

It is pretty well understood that the railroad coal combination in the anthracite region was formed by J. Pierpont Morgan and George F. Baer. It is assumed that the capitalists who control this rich combination will do their utmost to hold the coal properties together. They have what the street calls "a good thing," and they are not likely to let loose of it. The general impression in financial circles is that the anthracite properties now owned by the railroad-coal combination will all be turned over to the Temple Iron Company, a Pennsylvania corporation formed in 1872 with very broad powers, and that the company will be put in a voting trust for a long term of years.

The railroad companies that are interested financially in the anthracite mines are the Lehigh Valley, New Jersey, Central, Erie, Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, Ontario and Western and the Reading. It may be said that the Reading has always claimed, as has the Pennsylvania, that it has no interest in the coal business except as a transportation company. The Reading's coal interests are vested in the Philadelphia Coal and Iron Company. Perhaps the interstate commerce commission will take the views that the stock in the Reading Coal and Iron Company is owned by the Reading Railroad Co. and that that company, after all, takes the profits on anthracite coal. This is one of the questions that will probably have to be settled before the provisions of the law go into effect.

According to recent stories from Pittsburg, capitalists of that city have formed an $8,000,000 company to take over the coal lands owned by the Pennsylvania. No one is more interested in the enforcement of this new legislation than John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America. He has been pointing out for several years that the coal properties of the country were falling into the hands of the railroads. Year by year, it is said, his organization found it more difficult to make wage agreements with the operators because of the railroad influence behind the operator's organization.

In some quarters the belief is expressed that railroad influence will come up to Congress at the next session, asking for the repeal of this provision of the rate law or for its modification; but the general impression is that the legislation will stick and that railroad managers, realizing this, are arranging to meet the requirements of the law.

Politics in the Militia

(Hamilton Herald, Ind.)

Major Shannon, it appears, must not be made paymaster of the eastern military district because Liberals have protested against his appointment, he being a Conservative. Thus official recognition is given to the principle that militia appointments go by political favor, and that the favors are to be extended only to supporters of the party in power.

The spoils system is bad enough in its application to the civil service. It is very much worse, it is positively dangerous, when applied to the military service. In the civil service it may cause dissatisfaction and bitterness and perhaps impaired efficiency; but very rarely does a civil servant resign for having been passed over because he is not of the right party stripe. Most of them can't afford to resign. Bread-and-butter considerations compel them to swallow their resentment as best they can.

But our militia system is based on the voluntary principle. No officer enters the military service to make money. Most of them do so through a sense of duty or because they like soldiering. In many cases they remain in the service at considerable financial sacrifice. They can get out of it when they want to. It would be a bad thing for the efficiency of the Canadian militia if it were to become a settled principle that no officers who don't belong to the party in power can hope for appointment even to positions for which they are specially trained and fitted.

Suppose Conservative officers were to say to the government; "Very well, if you are going to run the militia for the benefit of your own supporters, let them do their work, since they are to enjoy the emoluments and honors." and should hand in their commissions.

THE OLD VIOLINIST.

(By George T. Pardy.)

That low, minor strain of music,
 thrilling o'er the violin strings,
Dying slowly in the shadows—back my vagrant memory brings
To that golden summer season,
 many, many years ago,
When I taught a favorite pupil
 how to wield the magic bow.

Eyes of brown that smiled a welcome
 when the anxious teacher came;
Gravely smiling lips of crimson,
 whispering shyly, who could blame
If the lesson half forgotten we had merely tried to prove,
In the glamour of the twilight,
 music is akin to love?

But those little white hands faltered, dropped for evermore the bow,
Life's long lesson uncompleted, for the Master willed it so,
And the songs of love and triumph
 in the twilight gray and dim
Changed into the sad, majestic measure of a funeral hymn.

Yet to-night her gentle spirit haunts
 the old familiar room,
And the strings of the Cremona speak their message through the gloom,
And I listen, dreaming, dreaming,
 while my shadow sweetheart plays,
Quaint and pleading, mournful, mystic melodies of other days.

The comment of the English press on the verdict upon the loss of H.M.S. Montagu, by which the two chief officers of the vessel have been "broken," suggests the interesting possibility that too much scientific training in a naval officer may be incompatible with the essential requirements of practical seamanship. Captain Adair was intensely interested in certain scientific work connected with his vessel, on which he was engaged when the accident happened which sank seven million dollars in the sea, and imperilled hundreds of lives. If he had been a mere captain and not a scientist, it would probably not have happened. Is it another case of "frills?"

A THRILLING MINUTE.

It Made Up In Intensity of Terror What It Lacked In Time.

The adventure of a contributor to Science lasted but a minute, but it made up in intensity of terror what it lacked in duration of time. The writer tells his own story:

Some years ago while I was making researches in an excavation near Frankfort, O., the center wall of the mound was undermined by the workmen, and I was struck by a mass of falling earth. I had just stooped to examine a small bone which had been uncovered when earth to the amount of several cart loads dropped on me. No one else was in the excavation, the men having gone to the top of the mound.

The falling mass knocked me backward, and I fell with my head and shoulders on a small heap of earth. The falling wall of earth looked black to me, and I well remember the rush of wind it brought.

At first I felt little pain, only intense pressure, which forced the buttons of my costume partly inside my flesh. My watch was pressed tight against two ribs which were broken. The skin on my forehead seemed cut, but it was the pressure of my hat forcing the flesh between the straw. The knife in my pocket seemed burning hot. Just under the small of my back was a large clod which gave me unendurable pain, as if my spine were slowly breaking. Then it stopped, and I felt nothing.

Thoughts raced through my head like lightning, thoughts of the past, present and future. I remember trying in vain to move a hand or a finger. I was perfectly motionless. My chest could not be inflated, and the downward pressure had forced the air out of my lungs. I could move my chin and open and shut my mouth. I tried to keep my mouth closed to prevent its being filled, but it instinctively opened, and the earth fell in. Then the assurance of strangling came to me, but I did not much care.

It was just sixty seconds, the surveyor said, before the men reached me and I felt the earth move slightly. A shovel struck my scalp and cut me. It felt like redhot iron. When my head was uncovered the pressure on my body was so great the blood was forced to my head until my rescuers feared my veins would burst.

I observed everything, but could not move. The partial paralysis lasted several days. I have never wholly recovered from the effects of my adventure. I cannot enter a cave or stand near a bank of earth without terrible sensations.

Rewards of Literature.

A very talented and well known writer—successful, too, in the popular estimation—tells me: "I know a man who spent fifteen years' leisure in getting the material for his best book and writing it over three times, then offered it to almost every publisher in America, meeting with refusal by all, and finally sold it to a London publisher for £50, had it republished in America some years afterward, got a few dollars before the publishers failed and as his last royalty received just 2 cents, which was exactly 10 per cent of the last sum due him. I am the man, but I don't publish the fact nor feel inclined to brag about it nor to complain, for that would be useless and would only cheapen my wares in the literary market. The book paid me, by accurate calculation, 33½ cents a week for the fifteen years' work."—Papyrus.

Birds Have Favorite Plants.

Like man, birds have their favorite plants. It has been discovered that the goldfinch is passionately fond of apple blossom. This may be because its favorite building site is in the lichen covered forks of apple trees, but apart from such attachment the bright little finch frequently spends hours tearing the petals into tiny fragments. Though the nightingale never builds in the thorn boughs, it loves to sing on may laden branches, often in the very midst of the fragrant blossoms. It is somewhat peculiar that most birds avoid the cow parsnip, owing, no doubt, to the unpleasant greenish smell emitted by this umbelliferous plant. Small birds very often build in less secure places, but the parsnip, gigantic and strong as it is, is left severely alone.

Common ranges make the coal man smile.

The Pandora Range makes the thrifty housewife smile.

Pandora Range
It is comparatively easy to build a range that will make a lot of heat, but it requires the exact science of Pandora Range building to produce a range that will use all the heat in the coal without waste.
A common range may burn twice the coal that a Pandora will, and yet do only half the work.
If you use a Pandora Range you can be certain that your coal money is not wasted, but used.

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

"Captain," he said, "if I may give you a friendly hint, slip away now and go to your quarters."

"I fancy, sir," said Capt. Kettle, "that Miss La Touche has employment to offer me."

"If she has," retorted Silva, "which I doubt, it will not be employment you will care about."

"I am what they call here 'on the beach,'" said Kettle, "and I cannot afford to miss chances. I am a married man, Mr. Silva, with children to think about."

"Ah!" the Chilian murmured thoughtfully. "I wonder if she knows he's married? Well, captain, if you will go up, come along, and I'm sure I wish you luck."

The flat roof of the cafe of the Lion d'Or is set out as a garden, with orange trees growing against the parapets, and elephants' ears and other tropical foliage plants stand here and there in round green tubs. Around it are the other roofs of the city, which, with the streets between, look like some white rocky plain cut up by steep canons. A glow comes from these depths below, and with it the blurred hum of people. But nothing articulate gets up to the Lion d'Or, and in the very mistiness of the noise there is something indescribably fascinating.

Moreover, it is a place where the fireflies of Valparaiso most do congregate. Saving for the lamps of heaven, they have no other lighting on that roof. The owners (who are Israelites) pride themselves on this; it gives the garden an air of mystery; it has made it the natural birthplace of plots above numbering, and it has brought them profits almost beyond belief. Your true plotter, when his ecstacy comes upon him, is not the man to be niggardly with the purse. He is alive and glowing then; he may very possibly be dead tomorrow, and in the meanwhile money is useless and the things money can buy—and the very best of their sort—are most desirable.

One more whispered hint did Mr. Silva give to Capt. Kettle as they made their way together up the white stone steps.

"Do you know who and what our hostess is?" he asked.

"A very nice young lady," replied the mariner promptly, "with a fine taste in suppers."

"She is all that," said Silva; "but she also happens to be the richest woman in Chile. Her father owned mines innumerable, and when he came by his end in our last revolution, he left every dollar he had at Donna Clotilde's entire disposal. By some unfortunate oversight, personal fear has been left out of her composition, and she seems anxious to add it to the list of her acquirements."

Capt. Kettle puckered his brows. "I don't seem to understand you," he said.

"I say this," Silva murmured, "because there seems no other way to explain the keenness with which she hunts after personal danger. At present she is intriguing against President Quijarra's government. Well, we all know that Quijarra is a brigand, just as his predecessor was before him. The man who succeeds him in the Presidency of Chile will be a brigand also. It is the custom of my country. But interfering with brigandage is a ticklish operation, and Quijarra is always scrupulous to wring the necks of anyone whom he thinks at all likely to interfere with his peculiar methods."

"I should say that from his point of view," said Kettle, "he was acting quite rightly, sir."

"I thought you'd look at it sensibly," said Silva. "Well, captain, here we are at the top of the stair. Don't you think you had better change your mind and slip away now and go back to your quarters?"

"Why, no sir," said Capt. Kettle. "From what you tell me it seems possible that Miss La Touche may shortly be seeing trouble, and it would give me pleasure to be near and ready to bear a hand. She is a lady for whom I have got considerable regard. That supper, sir, which we have just eaten, and the wine are things which will live in my memory."

He stepped out on to the roof, and Donna Clotilde came to meet him. She linked her fingers upon his arm and led him apart from the rest. At the further angle of the gardens they leaned their elbows upon the parapet and talked, whilst the glow from the street below faintly lit their faces and the fireflies winked behind their backs.

"I thank you, captain, for your offer," she said at length, "and I accept it as freely as it was given. I have had proposals of similar service before, but they came from the wrong sort. I wanted a man, and I found out that you were that before you had been at the dinner table five minutes."

Capt. Kettle bowed to the compliment. "But," said he, "if I am that, I have all a man's failings."

"I like them better," said the lady, "than a half-man's virtues. And as a proof I offer you command of my navy."

"Your navy, miss?"

"It has yet to be formed," said Donna Clotilde, "and you must form it. But, once we make the nucleus, other ships of the existing force will desert to us, and with those we must fight and beat the rest. Once we have the navy, we can bombard the ports into submission till the country thrusts out Pres Quijarra of its own accord, and sets me up in his place."

"O," said Kettle, "I didn't understand. Then you want to be queen of Chili?"

"President."

"But a president is a man, isn't he?"

"Why? Answer me that."

"Because, well, because they always have been, Miss."

"Because men up to now have always taken the best things to themselves. Well, captain, all that is changing; the world is moving on; and women are forcing their way in, and taking their proper place. You say that no state has had a woman president. You are quite right. I shall be the first."

Capt. Kettle frowned a little, and looked thoughtfully down into the lighted street beneath. But presently he made up his mind, and spoke again.

"I'll accept your offer, miss, to command the navy, and I'll do the work well. You may rely on that. Although I say it myself, you'd find it hard to get a better man. I know the kind of brutes one has to ship as seamen along this South American coast, and I'm the sort of brute to handle them. By James, yes, and you shall see me make them do most things short of miracles.

"But there's one other thing, Miss, I ought to say, and I must apologize for mentioning it, seeing that you're not a business person. I must have my £12 a month and all found. I know it's a lot, and I know you'll tell me wages are down just now. But I couldn't do it for less, Miss. Commanding a navy's a strong order, and, besides, there's considerable risk to be counted in as well."

Donna Clotilde took his hand in both hers.

"I thank you, Captain," she said, "for your offer, and I begin to see success ahead from this moment. You need have no fear on the question of remuneration."

"I hope you didn't mind my mentioning it," said Kettle nervously. "I know it's not a thing generally spoken of to ladies. But you see, Miss, I'm a poor man and feel the need of money sometimes. Of course, £12 a month is high, but—"

"My dear captain," the lady broke in, "what you ask is moderation itself; and, believe me, I respect you for it, and will not forget. Knowing who I am, no other man in Chili would have hesitated to ask"—she had on her tongue to say "a hundred times as much," but suppressed that and said—"more. But in the meantime," said she, "will you accept this £100 note for any current expenses which may occur to you?"

A little old green-painted bark lay hove to under sail, disseminating the scent of guano through the sweet tropical day. Under her square counter the name El Almirante Cochrane appeared in clean white lettering. The long South Pacific swells lifted her lazily from hill to valley of the blue water, to the accompaniment of squealing gear and a certain groaning of fabric. The Chillian coast lay afar off, as a white feathery line against one fragment of the sea-rim.

The green-painted bark was old. For many a weary year had she carried guano from rainless Chilian islands to the ports of Europe, and though none of that unsavory cargo at present festered beneath her hatches, though, indeed, she was in shingle ballast and had her holds scrubbed down and fitted with bunks for men, the aroma of it had entered into the very soul of her fabric, and not all the washings of the sea could remove it.

A white whaleboat lay astern, riding to a grass rope painter, and Senor Carlos Silva, whom the whaleboat had brought off from the Chilian beach, sat in the bark's deckhouse talking to Capt. Kettle.

"The senorita will be very disappointed," said Silva.

"I can imagine her disappointment," returned the sailor. "I can measure it by my own. I can tell you, sir, when I saw this filthy, stinking, old windjammer waiting for me in Callao, I could have sat down right where I was and cried. I'd got my men together, and I guess I'd talked big about El Almirante Cochrane, the fine new armored cruiser we were to do wonders in. The only thing I knew about her was her name, but Miss La Touche had promised me the finest ship that could be got, and I only described what I thought a really fine ship would be. And, then, when the agent stuck out his finger and pointed out this foul old violet bed, I tell you it was a bit of a let down."

"There's been some desperate robbery somewhere," said Silva.

"It didn't take me long to guess that," said Kettle, "and I concluded the agent was the thief, and started in to take it out of him without further talk. He hadn't a pistol, so I only used my hands to him, but I guess I fingered him enough in three minutes to stop his dancing for another month. He swore by all the saints he was innocent, and that he was only the tool of other men; and perhaps that was so. But he deserved what he got for being in such shady employment."

"Still, that didn't procure you another ship?"

"Hammering the agent couldn't make him do an impossibility, sir. There wasn't such a vessel as I wanted in all the ports of Peru. So I just took this nosegay that was offered, lured my crew aboard, and put out past San Lorenzo island, and to sea. It's a bit of a come down, sir, for a steamer-sailor like me," the little man added with a sigh, "to put an old wind-jammer through her gymnastics again. I thought I'd done with 'mainsail haul' and rawhide chafing gear, and all the white wings nonsense, for good and always."

"But, captain, what did you come out for? What earthly good can you do with an old wreck like this?"

"Why, sir, I shall carry out what was arranged with Miss La Touche. I shall come up with one of President Quijarra's government vessels, capture her and then start in to collar the rest. There's no alteration in the program. It's only made more difficult, that's all."

"I rowed out here to the rendezvous to tell you the Cancelario is at moorings in Tampique bay, and that the senorita would like to see you make your beginning upon her. But what's the good of that news, now? The Cancelario is a fine new warship of 3,000 tons. She's fitted with everything modern in guns and machinery, she's 300 men of a crew, and she lays always with steam up and an armed watch set. To go near her in this clumsy little barque would be to make yourself a laughing-stock. Why, your English Cochrane wouldn't have done it."

"I know nothing about Lord Cochrane, Mr. Silva. He was dead before my time. But whatever people may have done to him, I can tell anyone who cares to hear, that the man who's talking to you now is a bit of an awkward handful to laugh at. No, sir, I expect there'll be trouble over it, but you may tell Miss La Touche we shall have the Cancelario, if she'll stay in Tampique bay till I can drive this old lavender-box up to her."

For a minute Silva stared in silent wonder.

"Then, Captain," said he, "all I can think is, that you must have enormous trust in your crew."

Capt. Kettle bit the end from a fresh cigar. "You should go and look at them for yourself," said he, "and hear their talk, and then you'd know. The beasts are fit to eat me already."

"How did you get them on board?"

"Well, you see, sir, I collected them by promises—fine pay, fine ship, fine cruise, fine chances, and so on; and, when I'd only this smelling bottle here to show them, they hung back a bit. If there'd been only 20 of them, I don't say but what I could have hustled them on board with a gun and some ugly words. But 60 were too many to tackle; so I just said to them that El Almirante Cochrane was only a ferry to take us across to a fine war steamer that was lying out of sight elsewhere; and they swallowed the yarn, and stepped in over the side.

"I can't say they've behaved like lambs since. The grub's not been to their fancy, and I must say the biscuit was crawling; and it seems that as a bedroom the hold hurt their delicate noses; and, between one thing and another, I've had to shoot six of them before they understood I was skipper here. You see, sir, they were most of them living in Callao before they shipped, because there's no extradition there; and so they're rather a toughish crowd to handle."

"What a horrible time you must have had!"

"There has been no kid-glove work for me, sir, since I got to sea with this rose garden; and I must say it would have knocked the poetry right out of most men. But, personally, I can't say it has done that to me. You'd hardly believe it, sir; but once or twice, when the whole lot of the brutes have been raging against me, I've been very nearly happy. And afterward, when I've got a spell of rest, I've picked up pen and paper and knocked off one or two of the prettiest sonnets a man could wish to see in print. If you like, sir, I'll read you a couple before you go back to you whaleboat."

"I thank you, skipper, but not now. Time is on the move and Donna Clotilde is waiting for me. What am I to tell her?"

"Say, of course, that her orders are being carried out, and her pay being earned."

"My poor fellow," said Silva, with a sudden gush of remorse, "you are only sacrificing yourself uselessly. What can you, in a small sailing vessel like this, do with your rifles against a splendidly armed vessel like the Cancelario?"

"Not much in the shooting line, that's certain," said Kettle cheerfully. "That beautiful agent sold us even over the ammunition. There were kegs put on board marked 'cartridges,' but when I came to break one or two so as to serve out a little ammunition for practice, be hanged if the kegs weren't full of powder. And it wasn't the stuff for guns even; it was blasting powder, same as they use in the mines. O, sir, that agent was the holiest kind of fraud."

Silva wrung his hands. "Captain," he cried, "you must not go on with this mad cruise. It would be sheer suicide for you to find the Cancelario."

"You shall give me news of it again after I've met her," said Capt. Kettle. "For the present, sir, I follow out Miss La Touche's orders, and earn my £12 a month. But if you're my friend, Mr. Silva, and want to do me a good turn, you might hint that if things go well, I could do with a rise to £14 a month when I'm sailing the Cancelario for her."

The outline of Tampique bay stood out clearly in bright moonshine, and the sea down the path of the moon's rays showed a canal of silver, cut through rolling fields of purple. The green-painted bark was heading into the bay on the port tack; and at moorings, before the town, in the curve of the shore, the grotesque spars of a modern warship showed in black silhouette against the moonbeams. A slate-colored naphtha launch was sliding out over the swells toward the bark.

Capt. Kettle came up from below and watched the naphtha launch with throbbing interest. He had hatched a scheme for capturing the Cancelario, and had made his preparations; and here was an interruption coming which might very well upset everything most ruinously. Nor was he alone in his regard. The bark's topgallant rail was lined with faces; all her complement were wondering who these folk might be who were so confidently coming out to meet them.

A Jacob's ladder was thrown over the side; the slate-colored launch swept up, and emitted—a woman. Capt. Kettle started, and went down into the waist to meet her. A minute later he was wondering whether he dreamed, or whether he was really walking his quarterdeck in company with Donna Clotilde la Touche. But meanwhile the bark, held steadily along her course.

The talk between them was not for long.

"I must beseech you, miss, to go back from where you came," said Kettle. "You must trust me to carry out this business without your supervision."

"Is your method very dangerous?" she asked.

"I couldn't recommend it to an insurance company," said Kettle thoughtfully.

"Tell me your scheme."

Kettle did so in some 40 words. He was pithy, and Donna Clotilde was cool. She heard him without change of color.

"Ah," she said, "I think you will do it."

"You will know one way or another within an hour from now, Miss. But I must ask you to take your launch to a distance. As I tell you, I have made all my own boats so that they won't swim; but, if your little craft was handy, my crew would jump overboard and risk the sharks, and try to reach her in spite of all I could do to stop them. They won't be anxious to fight that Cancelario when the time comes, if there's any way of wriggling out of it."

"You are quite right, captain; the launch must go; only I do not. I must be your guest here till you can put me on the Cancelario."

Capt. Kettle frowned. "What's coming is no job for a woman to be in at, Miss."

"You must leave me to my own opinion about that. You see, we differ upon what a woman should do, captain. You say a woman should not be president of a republic; you think a woman should not be sharer in a fight; I am going to show you how a woman can be both." She leant her shoulders over the rail, and hailed the naphtha launch with a sharp command. A man in the bows cast off the line with which it towed; the man aft put over his tiller and set the engines a-going; and, like a slim, grey ghost, the launch slid quietly away in the gloom. "You see," she said, I am bound to stay with you now." And she looked upon him with a burning glance.

But Kettle replied coldly. "You are my owner, Miss," he said, "and can do as you wish. It is not for me now to say that you are foolish. Do I understand you still wish me to carry out my original plan?"

"Yes," she said curtly.

"Very well, Miss, then we shall be aboard of that war-steamer in less than 15 minutes." He bade his second mate call aft the crew; but instead of remaining to meet them, he took a keen glance at the barque's canvas, another at her wake, another at the moored cruiser ahead, and then, after peering thoughtfully at the clouds which sailed in the sky, he went to the companion-way and dived below. The crew trooped aft and stood at the break of the quarterdeck waiting for him. And in the meanwhile they feasted their eyes with many different thoughts on Donna Clotilde La Touche.

Presently Capt. Kettle returned to deck, aggressive and cheerful, and faced the men with hands in his jacket pockets. Each pocket bulged with something heavy, and the men, who by this time had to come to understand Capt. Kettle's ways, began to grow quiet and nervous. He came to the point without any showy oratory.

"Now, my lads," said he, "I told you when you shipped aboard this lavender-box in Callao, that she was merely a ferry to carry you to a fine war-steamer which was lying elsewhere. Well, there's the steamer, just off the starboard bow yonder. Her name's the Cancelario, and at present she seems to belong to Pres Quijarra's government. But Miss La Touche here (who is employing both me and you, just for the present) intends to set up a government of her own; and, as a preliminary, she wants that ship. We've got to grab it for her."

Capt. Kettle broke off, and for a full minute there was silence. Then some one amongst the men laughed.

"That right," said Kettle. "Cackle away, you scum. You'd be singing a different tune if you knew what was beneath you."

A voice from the gloom—an educated voice—answered him, "Don't be foolish, skipper. We're not going to ram our heads against a brick wall like that. We set some value on our lives."

"Do you?" said Kettle. "Then pray that this breeze doesn't drop (as it seems likely to do), or you'll lose them. Shall I tell you what I was up to below just now? You remember those kegs of blasting powder? Well, they're in the lazaret, where some of you stowed them; but they're all of them unheaded, and one of them carries the end of a fuse. That fuse is cut to burn just 20 minutes, and the end's lighted.

"Wait a bit. It's no use going to try and douse it. There's a pistol fixed to the lazaret hatch and if you try to lift it that pistol will shoot into the powder, we'll all go up together without further palaver. Steady now, there, and hear me out. You can't lower away boats and get clear that way. The boat's bottoms will tumble away so soon as you try to hoist them off the skids. I saw to that last night. And you can't require any telling to know there are far too many sharks about to make a swim healthy exercise."

The men began to rustle and talk.

"Now, don't spoil your only chance," said Kettle, "by singing out. If on the cruiser yonder they think there's anything wrong, they'll run out a gun or two and blow us out of the water before we can come near them. I've got no arms to give you; but you have your knives, and I guess you shouldn't want more. Get in the shadow of the rail there, and keep hid till you hear her bump. Then jump on board, knock everybody you see over the side, and ...ed the rest below."

"They'll see us coming," whimpered a voice. "They'll never let us board."

"They'll hear us," the captain retorted, "if you gallows ornaments bellow that that, and then all we'll have to do will be to sit tight where we are till that powder blows us like a thin kind of spray up against the stars. Now, get to cover with you, all hands, and not another sound. It's your only chance."

The men crept away, shaking, and Capt. Kettle himself took the wheel and appeared to drowse over it. He gave her half a spoke at a time, and by invisible degrees the bark fell off till she headed dead on for the cruiser. Save for the faint creaking of her gear no sound came from her, and she slunk on through the night like some patched and tattered phantom. Far down in her lazaret the glowing end of the fuse crept nearer to the powder barrels, and in imagination every man on board was following its race.

Nearer and nearer she drew to the Cancelario, and ever nearer. The waiting men felt as though the hearts of them would leap from their breasts. Two of them fainted. Then came a hail from the cruiser: "Bark ahoy! Are you all asleep there?"

Capt. Kettle drowsed on over the wheel. Donna Clotilde, from the shadow of the house, could see him nodding like a man in deep sleep.

"Carrajo! you bark, there! Put down your helm. You'll be aboard of us in a minute."

Kettle made no reply; his hands sawed automatically at the spokes and the glow from the binnacle fell upon close-shut eyes. It was a fine bit of acting.

The Chilians shouted, but they could not prevent the collision, and when it came there broke out a yell as though the gates of the pit had been suddenly unlocked.

The bark's crew of human refuse, mad with terror, rose up in a flock from behind the bulwarks. As one man they clambered over the cruiser's side and spread about her decks.

Ill provided with weapons though they might be the Chilians were scarcely better armed. A sentry squibbed off his rifle, but that was the only shot fired. Knives did the greater part of the work—knives and belaying pins and whatever else came to hand. Those of the watch on deck who did not run below were cleared into the sea; the berth deck was stormed and the waking men surrendered to the pistol nose.

A couple of desperate fellows went below, and cowed the firemen and engineer on watch. The mooring was slipped, steam was given to the engines, and whilst her former crew were being drafted down into an empty hold, the Cancelario was standing out at a 16-knot speed toward the open sea under full command of the raiders. Then from behind came the roar of an explosion and a spurt of dazzling light, and the men shuddered to think of what they had so narrowly missed. And as it was some smelling fragments of the old guano bark lit upon the afterdeck, as they fell headlong from the dark sky above.

Donna Clotilde went on to the upper bridge, and took Capt. Kettle by the hand.

"My friend," she said, "I shall never forget this." And she looked at him with eyes that spoke of more than admiration for his success.

"I am earning my pay," said Kettle.

"Pah!" she said, "don't let money come between us. I cannot bear to think of you in connection with sordid things like that. I put you on a higher plane. Captain," she said, and turned her head away, "I shall choose a man like you for a husband."

"Heaven mend your taste, Miss," said Kettle; "but—there may be others like me."

"There are not."

"Then you must be content with the nearest you can get."

Donna Clotilde stamped her foot upon the planking of the bridge.

"You are dull," she cried.

"No," he said, "I have got clear sight, Miss. Won't you go below now and get a spell of sleep? Or will you give me your orders first?"

"No," she answered, "I will not. We must settle this matter first. You have a wife in England, I know, but that is nothing. Divorce is simple here. I have influence with the church; you could be set free in a day. Am I not the woman you would choose?"

"Miss La Touche, you are my employer."

"Answer my question."

"Then, Miss, if you will have it, you are not."

"But why? Why? Give me your reasons? You are brave. Surely I have shown courage too? Surely you must admire that?"

"I like men for men's work, Miss."

"But that is an exploded notion. Women have got to take their place. They must show themselves the equals of men in everything."

"But you see, Miss," said Kettle, "I prefer to be linked to a lady who is my superior—as I am linked at present. If it pleases you, we had better end this talk."

"No," said Donna Clotilde, "it has got to be settled one way or the other. You know what I want. Marry me as soon as you are set free, and there shall be no end of your power. I will make you rich; I will make you famous. Chili shall be at our feet; the world shall bow to us."

"It could be done," said Kettle with a sigh.

"Then marry me."

"With due respect, I will not," said the little man.

"You know you are speaking to a woman who is not accustomed to be thwarted?"

Capt. Kettle bowed.

"Then you will either do as I wish, or leave this ship. I give you an hour to consider it in."

"You will find my second mate the best navigating officer left," said Kettle, and Donna Clotilde, without further words, left the bridge.

The little shipmaster waited for a decent interval, and then sighed, and gave orders. The men on deck obeyed him with quickness. A pair of boat davits were swung outboard, and the boat plentifully victualled and its water-breakers filled. The Cancelario's engines were stopped, and the tackles screamed as the boat was lowered to the water, and rode there, at the end of its painter. Capt. Kettle left the bridge in charge of its first officer, and went below. He found the lady sitting in the commander's cabin, with head pillowed upon her arms.

To Be continued.

Marriage Made Easy.

Anna Thompson, of Philadelphia, solved a great problem for herself the other day, and incidentally set an example which many of her sisters may follow with profit should occasion require.

Anna's young man was so bashful that he could not bring himself to the point of standing up long enough before witnesses to be married. He was a young man of the best possible intentions and wanted to do right, but time and time again he had disappointed her at the altar. She knew his failing but also recognized his virtues, and because she felt that he would be a good husband, could she ever get him, she was determined ed to be patient, even at the cost of embarrassment with no small amount of humiliation.

Mrs. Thompson had made at least a dozen wedding cakes that were never used. The best room had been decorated for the happy event at least a dozen times. Friends were invited to be present at the ceremony so often that they came to regard the invitations as the order of the day. All the arrangements for the wedding were made over and over again, and every detail was attended to, but at the last moment the expected bridegroom was absent. He just could not screw his courage up to the ordeal, and it was his practice to start for parts unknown on his wedding day.

A few days ago he turned up at the young woman's house again and once more asked her to name the wedding day. This time she simply put on her hat, took him by the arm, marched him to the marriage license office, then to the minister and before he realized what she was doing the thing was done, and, of course, he was the happiest young man in Philadelphia.

There were no cards, no flowers, no witnesses, beyond those required by law. There was no cake, no music, no dance. The young woman conducted everything on purely business lines. She had reached the point where sentiment had to be dispensed with for the sake of all concerned and everybody in Philadelphia is of the opinion that if she had not taken this course some other girl would sooner or later have picked up her young man and taken him away from her by doing with him precisely as she has done.

Young men, as a rule, keep their wedding engagements, but young men, as a rule, fear the wedlock ordeal. It is no secret in the sext that many young men who are now single would be only too glad to get married if the young women in whom they are interested would only be willing to wed on the Anna Thompson plan.

A Temperance Lesson.

New York, Sept. 12.—Before 10-year-old Rose Ann Walsh finished her story yesterday of how she had seen her father, Thomas Walsh, strike down and kill her mother on August 23, Coroner Acritelli, the twelve men who sat as jurors at the inquest, practically everybody else were wiping their eyes.

Thomas Walsh is a plasterer's laborer, and he killed his wife in their home at 1923 Second avenue. He used an axe. The principal witness against the man is Rose Ann, his only child.

The girl is exceedingly bright, and told her story straightforwardly.

"My papa did not work that afternoon," she said. "He came home and slept most of the time, and then got up and sent me for a pint of beer. Mamma refused to drink any of it; she never would drink anything. She was very busy getting supper ready for the boarders. You know papa did not work regularly, and we had to take boarders.

"Then he waked up and called for mamma. She was hard of hearing and did not know he wanted her until I ran to tell her. The next minute he rushed into the kitchen. He grabbed mamma by the hair and knocked her head against the wall."

At this point the little witness began to cry, softly, and looked at her father, a great big, rough-looking man, who sat at the table with his counsel gazing stupidly into space. He looked as if he might have just entered the court room straight from his job.

"Mamma began to cry and say, 'Tom, dear, please don't.' This made him mad again, and he grabbed the axe from behind the table and hit her on the head. Sh cried out, 'Oh, Tom, for God's sake! Oh!' But he hit her again and she fell and when he hit her a third time she never moved, and blood came from her nose and ears.

"I ran out and called the neighbors. They made me go to bed, and I had only one shoe off, and when I waked up poor mamma was gone, and I haven't seen her since."

The child's testimony, with that given by the police and neighbors, made the verdict a mere formality, and the jurors held Walsh for the grand jury.

As she started to leave the court room the little girl walked up to her father, and throwing her tiny arms about his neck, kissed him.

"Don't cry, papa," she said, as he broke into a loud sob. "It will be all right."

Old Chronic Sores

As a dressing for old chronic sores there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Salve. While it is not desirable to heal old sores entirely, they should be kept in a good condition for which this salve is especially valuable. For sore nipples Chamberlain's Salve has no superior. Hastings County Marble In Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Tom Morrison, the man with the clear blue eyes and the Aberdonian brogue, is in the city with his partner, Archie Riddell, the best-known and best-liked man in Hastings County. Bancroft and neighborhood hold them as residents, but generally speaking they are gentlemen of the world, at home in any and every spot.

They come to Toronto with marble and play the game as boys with marbles. They are the Princess Quarry Company and have 800 acres of the finest marble ever marbled, just two miles from Bancroft, on a spur line of the Central Ontario Railway Company. One quarry of pink marble that would have done the heart of an ancient Athenian good, has a sheer dip of 95 feet, and another of yellow and brown marble runs 125 feet. White marble they have also—all in unexhaustible deposits. And this is in Ontario.

Tom and Archie have samples of this marble on exhibition at the offices of Darling & Pearson and T. H. Lennox. And from all appearances the marble is the stuff. Mr. Pearson says that the yellow sample is the finest he has ever seen, and really grows enthusiastic over the find. It is not limey like the Italian marble, but has a hardness that makes it a rarity.

Tom Morrison declares that this marble is a unique find. It is the nearest deposit for Toronto builders and has the durability of granite.

Tom and Archie issue a general invitation to all interested to go down to Bancroft and look over the quarries.

And something is doing in Hastings County. My old friend Ritchie, of Akron, Ohio, has a white marble quarry near Tom's quarry. He has put up a $60,000 plant and has run a spur of the Central Ontario Railway to his deposits.

In no place are the natural resources of a more pronounced character than in Hastings County.

Postage Stamps and Red Tape.

Some months ago there was an agitation — says the Toronto Star—for the removal of restrictions on the sale of postage stamps, and it was urged that the privilege of sale be given to any reputable merchant who asked for it. The Postoffice Department yielded to the pressure to a certain extent, but with fear and trembling, as of one entering upon a wicked and dangerous career. The regulations enforced by the department read as if they might have been framed for the sale of dynamite. The merchant desiring the privilege must undertake not to sell stamps at more or less than their face value. We do not know that the price of stamps fluctuated, and that the fluctuations made gambling in stamps a fashionable vice; but let that pass; the regulation can do no harm. The merchants must agree not to sell stamps obtained through unauthorized channels. He must write to his customers warning them not to use stamps for remittances, the object being to induce them to use postal notes. He must send to the department monthly a record of persons offering stamps in payment to an amount more than twenty cents; the department apparently wants to keep track of these dangerous characters. They might be photographed, or subjected to the Bertillon system of measurement, or have their thumb-prints kept on record. All these provisions bear the mark of red tape. What is the danger against which the department is guarding? It is quite right to try to encourage the use of postal notes; a good plan would be to supply them free. The object is not to raise revenue, but to serve the public convenience and if the public prefer postage stamps, what harm is come? The advantage of allowing the use of stamps for remittances is that it encourages the merchants who receive the remittances to sell the stamps, and thus increases the number of places where stamps may be obtained. The most hopeful feature of the department's action is the last clause in the agreement The department reserves to itself the right to cancel the permit and make provision for selling stamps by automatic machines. An automatic machine near a letter-box would be an immense convenience. Until it is ready, why not consult the public convenience by allowing the sale of stamps by merchants without such absurd requirements.

LAKE SHORE SPIRIT.

Throughout the entire length and breadth of the great Lake Shore Railway System there is a spirit of co-operation and personal responsibility on the part of employees from the highest to the lowest that is reflected in every detail of the road's operation. The traveller feels that the great army of trained workers have his welfare and comfort at heart as much as though he were the only patron of the road. This spirit—the Lake Shore spirit—is one of the features that have made this line so popular among experienced travellers. Comfort, speed, safety and punctuality here have reached their highest development. Write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O.; or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, and tell the agent to have your ticket read "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway."

There is a Danish proverb which runs: "No man is so tall that he need ever stretch; and none so small that he need never stoop." It might be added that no one is so rich that he need not read the advertisements.

CANADIAN TOWN WHICH NEEDS NO TAXES TO RUN IT.

Washington Correspondent Gives Some Luminous Figures Showing What Port Arthur Is Doing to Make Public Ownership a Success—Mayor Expects to See Day When Citizens Will Get Profits In Individual Cheques.

With what emotions would a property holder receive an official statement from the assessor's office that he would not be required to pay taxes thereafter? asks a correspondent of The Washington Star writing from Port Arthur, Canada. And the same citizen would probably not survive the shock of later being requested to call at the district building to receive a cheque as his share of the profits of the Municipal Government. This state of affairs is about to be realized in Port Arthur.

Every stranger who drops into this hospitable little city at the head of Lake Superior, on the Canadian side, is forced to become familiar with the town's method and manner of doing business before he can make any sort of headway at all in any other direction. He may not be interested, but that matters not a whit. He must listen! Every citizen of the town is loaded to the guards with information about municipal ownership and carries around with him the last quarterly statement of the railway and light commission. He knows to a cent just how much profit there was in the operation of the waterworks and can tell you to a mill the profits of the last quarter from the telephone system. Incidentally he will explain between grins and chortles that the rival town of Fort William, six miles away, is helping to pay the taxes due on Port Arthur's real estate, because the street railroad which connects the two towns of approximately the same population is owned by the municipality of Port Arthur. Therefore, when a Fort William resident pays five cents to the street car conductor he contributes a mite to every individual taxpayer in the rival town. That fact seems to tickle the Port Arthurians to death. If you are with a Port Arthur resident for half an hour and he doesn't mention the above conditions thirteen times it is considered remarkable by the natives.

Cheap 'Phones.

Although the street railroad doesn't give the citizens any reduction in car tickets which other cities do not enjoy, the telephone service is much cheaper. The enthusiastic advocate of municipal ownership in this town—and every citizen is in this class—will not forget to explain that the Bell Co. used to charge $36 a year for a business telephone which is now supplied for $24, and that a residence telephone now costs only $12 a year. He knows, too, that Port Arthur is the only town on the American continent which owns and operates all of its utilities, and is very fond of explaining how all this came about.

The most conspicuous citizen of this town is a member of the railway and light commission. The membership of the commission is restricted to three, and one member is elected each year. It is by far a greater honor to be a member of the commission than it is to be a mayor or alderman. As member of the board the citizen who has been so honored by the municipality must serve without pay.

Nobody rides on passes in this town, and perhaps that is one of the reasons why municipal ownership is possible; but there are even better reasons than that, for the falls of the Current River are almost in the city itself, and all the power necessary for electrical operation of any kind, including manufacturing, is supplied by this kindly and convenient stream. The city has appropriated everything and the manufacturer must do business with it, but the terms are easy and no one seems to have a kick.

Serve Without Pay.

The controlling officials, serving without pay, saves all of the salaries which go to eat up the profits of public utilities elsewhere, and because of these and other reasons one would hardly be justified in pointing to this town of 10,000 people as proof positive that municipal ownership is justifiable in all American cities.

One-half of the taxes of Port Arthur are paid from the revenues derived from its waterworks, lighting plant, street railway and telephone. The total investment by the municipality was $150,000, and last year the net income was $36,000. Of course it would be impossible to continue these proportional figures if the city should grow to a larger population, and it would be likewise impossible in a city where millions were involved to have the officials devote their entire time to enterprises without compensation. Just now the members of the railway and light commission meet only after business hours and perhaps not oftener than twice a week.

Port Arthur and Fort William are the lake shipping points for the western Canada wheat belt. Each has a magnificent harbor and gigantic elevators. Port Arthur and the Canadian Pacific Railway have been for years and are now at war with each other. If there had never been a quarrel between the two there would never have been a story to tell about municipal ownership under a Port Arthur date line.

Both at Fault.

Disinterested persons say that both the town and the road were at fault and that a hot-headed and chesty person of importance to each made their differences grow and finally become irreconcilable. Port Arthur concluded that the railway was trying to dodge the payment of taxes on property the title to which was under dispute, and a very self-assertive mayor caused a passenger train to be attached and held—like the elephant of the bankrupt circus—until payment was enforced. This little courtesy naturally made the Canadian Pacific Railroad officials feel kindly toward Port Arthur.

Sir William Van Horne, president of the Canadian Pacific, is pretty quick on [illegible] trigger anyhow, and his wrath on [illegible] particular occasion was something [illegible]erful to see. After the power of [illegible] had returned Sir William is reported to have waved his carefully maintained Smithfield over his head and declared that he would "make the grass grow in the streets of Port Arthur." The development of the rival town of Fort William began with a rush, and for a while it looked very much as if Sir William would make his threat good.

But the good folks of Port Arthur are not of the Micawber family. They began to sit up and take notice. They had a harbor, an ideal location for a city and a splendid waterfall just outside the city limits. If the railroad would not bring its tracks to Port Arthur they were determined to make their town getatable by means of an electric railway, and so the municipal ownership proposition had its inception. From the very beginning the system was enough of a success to demonstrate that ultimately it would be a pronounced success, and the story which tells the tale most eloquently is the statement of income and expenditures issued by the corporation of the Town of Port Arthur. It shows that from the street railroads the gross income was last year $42,000, the cost of administration $2,800 and the profit $10,180; from the electric lighting plant the same relative figures were $36,228, $2,100 and $11,840, and from the telephone system $8,571, $1,100 and $2,201.

The figures given under "cost of administration" include the salary for superintendence and the clerical staff required for the operation of these industries. The street railroad is carrying charges on some $156,000 worth of bonds. Of these $12,000 were devoted to improvement of the Current River. The lighting and telephone systems are bonded proportionately. The Mayor of Port Arthur revelwed the figures for me and remarked.

"I expect to see the day when the property-owner of this town will walk up to the auditor's office and receive a cheque as his proportional share of the profits from the operation of our public utilities."

LITTLE DEED OF KINDNESS.

How Two Brokers' Clerks Helped a Boy With Sore Foot.

An example of real human kindness and true philanthropy was witnessed on Colborne street, near Yonge, on Tuesday when a barefooted seven-year-old newsboy crippling along calling his wares between sobs was stopped by John Flannery, a clerk in the employ of Lorne Campbell & Co., says The Toronto World. Mr. Flannery, noticing the little fellow suffering and sobbing, coaxed him into Wm. Watt's office at No. 8 Colborne street, where the superfluous dirt was washed from the lad's foot and the head of a big rusty pin revealed to view. The ball of the foot was swollen and inflamed and the newsboy pleaded with them not to touch it.

"It's too sore, mister, don't touch it, will you?"

Gently soothing the foot with the fingers Flannery worked closer and closer to the ugly pin till soon he got his fingers in position to grasp it in a clinch, then, with a quick hard jerk he extracted the inch and a quarter poisonous sting much like a dentist pulling a four pronged molar. The little fellow let a shriek of pain escape him, and then a stream of blood spurted out carrying with it much of the fast forming pus. The two men then bathed the wound, and Mr. Watt tied his handkerchief around the boy's foot gave him some money and directed him to a drug store with a note for an antiseptic to apply to the afflicted part.

"But I has to sell my papahs," sobbed the lad.

"Go and get this first and then you can sell your papers," urged the two young men.

"All right, it feels better now. Tanks, mister."

And the little follow brushed the tear-stained face with his dirty hand, rose, and hobbled off with only the heel of the injured foot touching the ground. And in his puerile mind there was then and there implanted a gratitude which in itself will beget pity and true charity for those in distress with whom this young man meets in years to come. Here in a simple form was the milk of human kindness imbued into the heart of a boy in a manner that can never be forgotten, and the kindly acts of the two young men will surely be recorded on the pages of their souls' history.

Would Change the Name.

The people of Western New Ontario, not satisfied with having transformed Rat Portage into Kenora, now want to change the name of Rainy River to the Queen River. As a matter of fact that was the stream's original name. The intrepid French explorer, who first penetrated the wilderness in that section, called the stream "La Riviere Reine." That, in course of time, was Anglicized into River Rainy, and so into Rainy River. It is claimed that the present name gives a false impression to the outside world, in that the district is more apt to be associated with the raising of umbrellas than with the raising of crops. As a matter of fact the rainfall along the Rainy is less considerable than in many other parts of the province, and that a crop failure has never been known in this district is the best evidence of the kind of weather that is served out there. The death rate, too, is one of the lowest in the whole country. But these facts are not known, owing to the desultory manner in which the Ontario Government has advertised the district. The changing of the name is a question which could well be taken up on this side of the river (says The Fort Frances Times), and then if the legislators at Toronto could be induced to do some real advertising in spreading the simple facts concerning the district, a wonderful change would soon take place.

Didn't Know Montreal.

A lady applied the other day for tickets for the Royal Enclosure at Ascot for self, daughters and for a Miss "X.," of Montreal. She received tickets for herself and daughters, with a communication that Miss "X.," of Montreal, should apply for a ticket through the American ambassador. The only parallel The London Globe could think of to this grip of geography on the part of the Powers that Be was the reply of the celebrated Duke of Newcastle, who, on being informed that Newfoundland was an island, shook hands warmly with his informant, and said, "Thank you, thank you. You always bring us good news."

IN COOKING MEAT.

Care Should Be Taken to Preserve the Juices.

Except for soup stock, meat should be cooked in a way to preserve its juices. In the first few minutes of boiling it should be subjected to a temperature higher than boiling point, so that a crust will form and keep in the juices. Then the temperature should be lowered and the meat merely simmered till done.

In roasting and broiling the same principle is followed. The meat is put directly into an extremely hot oven or over the flames and allowed to become seared over the surface, after which the temperature is lowered.

For soup stock meat should be put into cold stock or water and gradually brought to the boiling point in order that the juices may flow from it, adding strength to the stock.

When roasting beef some housewives to give it flavor rub the surface with an onion or place an onion on top of it.

A certain housewife who prepares delicious roasts says that she never bastes her meat with water, but uses the drippings instead.

THE BEDROOM.

It Should Have as Little Furniture In It as Possible.

Decorations and hangings for a bedroom should be of the daintiest material both in color and design.

Printed dimity is quite the prettiest and most inexpensive to use in furnishing a sleeping apartment. Curtains, bedspread, dresser covers and chair cushions may be made of it, though for the latter chintz in the same design is heavier and more desirable.

In the properly appointed modern bedroom as little furniture as possible is used. This insures proper sanitary conditions, for the less there is to collect dust the better.

The floor should be either plain varnished wood, with a few rugs on it, or a denim carpet tacked close to the wall.

The bed is best of iron or brass, as it is less apt to collect dust or dirt. A pretty cover can be made for it of dimity, with ruffles at the edge, hanging well over the sides, but clearing the floor by several inches.

DON'TS FOR THIN WOMEN.

Don't walk to excess. A short walk will be beneficial, but long walks are flesh reducing.

Don't strive for long waisted effects. The longer you make yourself look the thinner you will appear.

Don't wear black. Black has a tendency to make any one look slender. Light clothes are the most becoming.

Don't stay up late at night. Get at least nine hours' good sleep. A woman needs more sleep than a man, and nothing keeps her in good condition like lots of sleep.

Don't wear stripes. Checks, plaids and horizontal effects are better for thin women. They should strive for becoming, deceiving effects if they study art in dressing at all.

Don't forget that a well rounded figure makes you look younger and is considered a mark of beauty. Starchy foods, massage, moderate exercise, rest and sleep should produce this.

Children and Manners.

Did you ever stop to think that children, as a rule, know each other far better than their parents and teachers do? Boys and girls show their real characters at play, when they have not the restraint of the presence of their elders or any incentive to appear at their best. So when you tell your boy you wish he would be as gentlemanly and polite as Harry Lee your viewpoint is that of Harry's conduct in your house when he comes on an errand or to play with your boy. Your son knows him as he is when off guard on the playground—selfish, rude, sly, perhaps—and he resents being asked to copy such a character, says a writer in the Mother's Magazine. Quite likely your boy has on his company manners, too, when away to an extent you would hardly believe. Children have pride in their behavior, and it is an old saying, well proved, that they often behave better when their parents are not around.

Brush Your Eyebrows.

Do you ever brush your eyebrows? You look after your hair and hands with religious care. But perhaps it never occurs to you that your eyebrows might be improved by a little attention. Buy a soft little eyebrow brush, made especially for this purpose, and night and morning brush the brows in the way they should go. If they aren't going the right way then train them to. Suppose they are too thin. Then keep handy a little sweet almond oil and before brushing put a few drops of this on the finger tip and gently rub it into the eyebrow. If the lashes are short and scanty do the same thing to them. Treatment of this sort ought to make a noticeable difference in a few months. A very simple tonic for the eyebrows is composed of red vaseline and boric acid, five grains of the former to five of the latter. Make into a smooth paste and apply at night.

Oilcloth.

When oilcloth begins to lose its shiny surface it can be improved in appearance and made to last much longer by being varnished with glue. Wash the oilcloth thoroughly and let it dry. At night when the traffic of the day is done go over it with a piece of flannel dipped in glue water. Choose a nice dry day for this, and then the glue will be quite hard by morning, and the oilcloth will look like new. The glue water must be prepared some time before it is needed by putting a small quantity of glue in a pint or so of water and letting it stand on the stove till dissolved.

WORK FOR NIMBLE FINGERS

How to Make Pretty Little Boxes Out of Stiff Paper.

Do you know how to make a paper box? Not the cardboard kind in which things come from the store, but pretty little toy boxes. If you do not know how, here are the directions for making a neat box:

Cut a piece of stiff colored paper eight inches square. Fold the paper diagonally from corner to corner, making creases in every direction. Then fold each corner in turn to the center, creasing the paper well along the folds. Then fold each corner into the new creases until your paper is creased like Fig. 1.

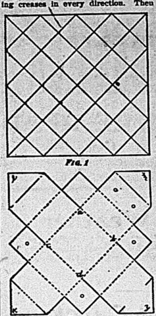

FIG. 1

HOW TO MAKE THE BOX.

Now cut out corners until the paper looks like Fig. 2. Cut little slits along the lines marked in heavy ink. The square a, b, c, d, forms the bottom of the box. Fold the loose squares marked o inside of the box. Fold the points x and m and stick them through the slits cut in l and y, and the box will be finished. To fill it with candy will be an easy matter, provided you have the candy.

CHEMICAL CURIOSITIES.

Some Interesting Experiments For Our Boys and Girls to Make.

Wet a large piece of blotting paper with red litmus water and throw on to it a small piece of potassium. The potassium will run about the paper, and wherever it touches it will leave a blue track behind it, which is caused by the formation of potash.

Cut a block of ice about six inches square and bore a hole in it half an inch wide and two inches deep. Enlarge the bottom of the hole to form a sort of cavity and drop into it a piece of potassium about the size of a pea. The potassium will instantly take fire and will burn beautifully in the ice, making a very pretty sight, especially if the room is otherwise dark. The room should also be warm when you make the experiment.

Would you believe that an icicle can fire a cannon? Try this with a toy one: Load the cannon and on the gunpowder on the touchhole put a piece of potassium no larger than a pinhead. Now touch the speck of potassium with a piece of ice, and it will flare up, setting fire to the gunpowder.

Drop a piece of potassium about the size of a pea into a bowl of water. It will take fire and run around the surface of the water until it is burned up, looking like some fiery serpent in the water by reason of its rapid movement.

Square Numbers.

Every boy knows that a square number is a number produced by the multiplication of any number by itself. Thus 7 multiplied by itself gives 49 as a result; 49 consequently is a square number, 7 being termed the square root from which it springs. In high numbers the extraction of the square root is an affair of time and trouble, and after all the necessary calculations have been made it may perhaps be found that the number is not a square number. This unnecessary trouble may be saved if the following instructions are remembered: Every square number ends with one of the figures 1, 4, 5, 6 or 9, or with two ciphers preceded by one or other of these figures. Again, every square number is equally divisible by 4, or when divided by 4 will have a remainder of 1. Thus, as shown above, the square of 7 is 49, which divided by 4 gives us a quotient 12 and 1 over; 64 again is a square number, and it is exactly divisible by 4.

Poor Little Queen.

The queen of Holland when a child was in consequence of her position shut away from many youthful pleasures and often denied the companionship of those of her own age.

On one occasion she was heard to say to a supposed refractory doll, "Now, be good and quiet, because if you don't I will turn you into a queen, and then you will not have anything to play with at all!"

The Restless Brook.

Do you suppose the babbling brook
Would stop and rest its head
If some one got a scoop and took
The pebbles from its bed?
—John Kendrick Bangs in St. Nicholas.

TOM THUMB SACHETS.

A Way to Use Up Your Little Odds and Ends of Ribbon.

A use has been found for the little odds and ends of ribbon useless heretofore, yet too pretty to throw away. They are now used for Tom Thumb sachets, which are just the thing for birthday tokens, luncheon favors and for pinning into one's gown to impart a delicate fragrance. The tiny pocket which contains the sachet powder, about an inch square, is sewed to the ribbon, the ends of which are brought forward to cover the bag and are shaped to form a dainty flower. Of course upon the morsel of ribbon in hand depends the kind of flower to be made. Thus pale pink makes a charming little wild rose, purple a pansy, yellow a buttercup, white a dogwood, and so on. The shaping of the petals is most important, as upon this as well as the coloring depends much of the naturalness of the flower. The center of the blossom is added by means of a few stitches in floss of the appropriate color, yellow being used for the wild rose, and so forth. When employed as luncheon favors the little sachets are furnished with temporary stems of wire so as to hang upon the edge of the water tumblers.

IMPROVE THE KITCHEN.

Try the Effect of Hanging Up a Picture or Two.

Hang at least one picture in your kitchen in such a place that it will meet your eye a score of times daily. Let it be a landscape or a figure or a picture "that tells a story," only be sure that it is not a scene that reproduces something of the daily routine.

If practicable, change the picture for another once a week or month. Good prints of the best pictures can be had. Take a look at the picture often, seeing what it means, or, rather, realizing each time what it says to you personally.

This will break up the monotony, which is the deadliest thing about housework and some other occupations, and will help to prevent the formation of the "fixed idea," which is the seed of most mental and emotional troubles.

Just try this for a month. You will find this suggestion one to be thankful for, always bearing in mind that "the point of the idea lies in the application of it."—Exchange.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Dry your saucepans before you put them away.

Coffee grounds kept in the sink strainer will catch grease and thus prevent clogging of the pipes.

A cloth dipped in boiling water, wrung out and placed over fish that has been boiled will keep it warm for quite a while.

Sprinkle a little crushed borax on a flannel cloth that has been wet in hot water and well soaped. This will brighten the copper like magic. Rinse and polish.

The odor that clings so persistently to a utensil in which fish or onions have been fried may be dispelled by placing in a hot oven for ten or fifteen minutes after washing and drying.

If a teaspoonful of concentrated lye with a cupful of water be put in a kettle whose contents have burned on the bottom and left to stand for a few hours there will be no trouble in removing the burned substance.

To Clean Jewelry.

A sharp pointed implement should never be employed to clean rings, as it loosens the stones. Soak them in liquid ammonia and the dirt will be loosened. Afterward they should be polished with a soft cloth. It is a good plan to keep rings in sawdust, as it enables the gems to retain their brilliancy. Warm water and a little prepared chalk are all that is required to clean plain or chased rings. Toilet articles, vinaigrettes and other small trinkets may be easily brightened without the use of powder by placing them in an aluminium receptacle and pouring boiling water over them. Polishing should be done by means of a piece of clean chamois leather, but in adopting this treatment it must be remembered that the silver should never be allowed to become tarnished.

Testing Drinking Water.

If your drinking water comes through lead pipes, test it to see whether it contains any lead. Some water acts strongly upon a leaden pipe, and a year or two of using such water will bring on lead poisoning. In rare cases the water will form a coating, which will protect it from further contamination. There is more danger in warm weather than in cold. To be on the safe side, use this simple test occasionally: Boil a quart of water away till only a gill is left. In this put a tablespoonful of a solution of potassium iodide and let it stand overnight. If a yellow deposit has formed, lead is present in the water.

Frumpish Dress.

To be frumpish in dress is self murder as far as appearance goes. It is not necessary to spend a fortune or have a great quantity of garments, but have nothing that does not suit you or that fails to show off your best points. Make a study of yourself. Be certain of your opinions as to yourself and keep to them. If you have not money to squander, follow fashion at a distance. Never be out of fashion or wear what is diametrically opposed to her current whim, but never fall into the latest of her follies, for when she has changed her mind you will be out of it. Dress is the framework of the scheme of personal good looks.

Brain Strain

"In the long history of the past glasses were resorted to for the purpose of correcting imperfect vision only. More especially during the later years it has been observed that glasses now and again have relieved nervous disorders, and the more closely we have studied and observed the effects of properly adjusted glasses in disease, the more convinced we have grown that eyestrain is the cause of many serious disorders, and that its correction will in a great measure relieve troubles that have heretofore baffled the skill of the medical profession. All work connected with the function of vision is done at the base of the brain."—Prentice. We correct Brain Strain by the "Prentice" Lens and System.

Belleville's Big Fair A Grand Success.

TRACK EVENTS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON — SOME LIVELY CONTESTS — CROWDS OF VISITORS THIS AFTERNOON.

That a properly conducted fair will pay in Belleville was proved beyond peradventure this afternoon, when the Driving park held probably the biggest crowd in its history.

You should have seen the smiles on the faces of the directors! To be sure they felt none too jolly this morning, when the rain began to fall, or around about noon, when the thunder was heard. But that all passed over happily, and about 2 o'clock this afternoon, when the band entered the grounds, there was a big attendance of good-natured, perspiring people with a constant stream going through the gates as fast as their tickets could be taken. The fair managers admitted, confidentially that, judging by present appearances this year's fair was going to be the biggest and best-attended in the history of the Association.

The school children of the city had a half-holiday this afternoon, and lent their bright faces and cheerful voices to the happy throng. It really looked like old times, when the Belleville fair was counted one of the best in the province. Perhaps it will be again. Who knows? One thing is sure. The directors of the Belleville and East Hastings fair have been shown that the public will support them in their efforts to give this city and district a creditable exhibition, and we may now confidently expect that the fair is a fixture, and will grow better from year to year.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON'S DOINGS.

The attendance at the Fair yesterday afternoon was good. In fact it was much larger than many of the officials anticipated.

At three o'clock the exhibition of speed events were called, and three of them were concluded during the afternoon. The driving and management of the horses had to be considered by the judges.

SINGLE DRIVERS.

The first event was the single drivers entries, Major Hamburg, owned by H. Ashley; Annetta, owned by R. Rollins. Guy, owned by C. Armstrong, and Frank F., owned by W. T. Fleming. Three half-mile heats were trotted and Major Hamburg was the first to pass under the wire in each heat. Annetta was second in two heats and third in the other. After the first heat had been trotted, Frank F. was withdrawn.

2.30 CLASS.

There were three horses entered for this class, namely, Lady Hamburg, owned by H. Ashley; Jim K., owned by Lee Ketcheson, and Nettie R., owned by R. Rollins. Some excellent exhibitions of speed were to be seen in the four heats which were trotted this number being necessary, as the rule called for the best three out of five heats. Jim K., which was no doubt the favorite horse, won the first two heats, and in the third Lady Hamburg on the home stretch secured the lead and passed under the wire by a slight margin. In the fourth heat Jim K. won handily.

DOUBLE TEAMS.

This event was to some extent the event of the afternoon, owing to the fact that there were four teams entered, which, when abreast, just about filled the track space. The dust created by the horses and buggies, was, to use a common expression, "fierce." The entries were: Major and Lady Hamburg, owned by H. Ashley; Lucy C and Nettie T., owned by A. Dafoe; Milk Maid and Milk Boy, owned by A. Brickman; Mollie C. and Harry Nutgrove, owned by M. Coulter. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting a fair start in the first heat, but they were finally sent off well together. It was nip and tuck for supremacy between Ashley's and Dafoe's teams, but the former came under the wire first. Mr. Dafoe entered a complaint against Gerow, the driver of Ashley's team, alleging that he crowded him and cut him off near the third quarter post. The protest was allowed by the judge, and Dafoe was given first place. Brickman's team finished third and Coulter's fourth. In the next two heats which were trotted the Ashley team proved to be the victors, although they were closely pressed by Dafoe's team. The last heat was run in the dusk of the evening, and patrol judges were sent out at the quarter posts.

These events proved to be most interesting to the spectators. Owing to the fact that the trials were not for speed alone, no time was given out for any of the heats.

The officials were; Dr. Simmons, Frankford; W. Carnew, A. G. Vermilyea, G. M. Campbell, and C. Weese.

At an interval during the events Mr. W. Bensley gave an exhibition of barrel and wheel juggling with his feet, which seemed to please all who saw it.

The I. O. O. F. band was in attendance and during the afternoon rendered a number of selections.

SOME OF THE EXHIBITORS.

As remarked yesterday, the exhibits in the various departments are really excellent, and reflect all sorts of credit, not only on the exhibitors, but on the fair. Following are some of the principal exhibitors in the different classes;

FAIR NOTES.

The prize list of the fair will be published in The Intelligencer so soon as it is ready to leave the directors' hands.

The ladies' fancy work is pronounced extra good this year.

A finer-looking lot of nags than those driven by the farmers of this district it would be hard to find. And as to their wives and sweethearts—well, you've seen them.

A ridiculous report had got abroad that the Mayor was going to make a balloon ascension this afternoon. Nothing doing.

A full report of this afternoon's doings will appear to-morrow.

Young ladies should be most particular about their looks. Don't attire yourself carelessly; be faultlessly dressed, and Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will do the rest. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

Some Frankford Men Severely Injured.

It will be noted in to-day's despatches that three Frankford men were severely injured in the terrible railway accident which took place near Sudbury yesterday, namely, Messrs. George A. Rose, Sheldon Marrin (or Morin) and Mr. Samuel Kingston. The condition of the latter gentleman is critical. The victims have many friends in this district, who will wish them a speedy recovery.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE ARRIVAL OF KITTY."

It was one of the Shubert brothers, Sam, who was killed in a railway wreck a year or so ago, who was responsible for the first appearance of Miss Dunmore, the star in "The Arrival of Kitty," which comes to the Carman next Tuesday night. He had heard her sing at a social gathering, and gave her the part later of Prince Sousa for one night in "A Chinese Honeymoon." She performed it so well that it was hers from that time on. Miss Dunmore is under a five year contract with the C. S. Williams Company, and will be starred next season in "The Varsity Girl," now in preparation.

Henry Simmonds is Wanted By Police.

ALLEGED TO HAVE HIRED A LIVERY RIG AND SOLD IT FOR SIXTY DOLLARS.

On Monday of this week a man representing himself as an apple buyer, secured from Mr. A. Graham, liveryman of this city, a horse and rig for the purpose of driving out in the country. He returned to the city in the evening and paid for the conveyance and secured another which was a rubber-tired runabout. This he took away and, not returning, Mr. Graham become uneasy. Last night, in company with Sergt. Hayes, Mr. Graham went to the residence of a Mrs. Ray, where the outfit was found. Mrs. Ray had bought the horse harness and runabout for $60. The outfit was taken by Mr. Graham.

It was since learned that a man named Henry Simmonds is the party wanted for the offence and a warrant for his arrest has been issued. Simmonds, it will be remembered, was arrested here and taken to Napanee and convicted for stealing a fur coat belonging to Mr. J. C. Moynes of this city. Simmonds is a young man whose record is not of the best. Every effort will be made to locate him.

GONE TO HER REST

MRS. R McCRUDDEN, AFTER ILLNESS OF SIX WEEKS, DIED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

After an illness of some six weeks duration, Mrs. Richard McCrudden, sr., passed away yesterday afternoon at the family residence, Catharine street. Deceased, who was well known, was an estimable lady, beloved by all who knew her. In the year 1841 she was born at Fintona, Tyrone, Ireland, and at an early age came out to this country. She lived in the city of Montreal for some time where she was married. For the past 35 years the deceased had been a resident of this city. Mrs. McCrudden was in every sense of the term a true Christian lady, having been for many years a member of Holloway St. Methodist Church. An aged partner in life and a family of four sons and five daughters are called upon to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted wife and a loving mother. The sons are Richard, of this city; Robert and William, of Toronto, and James, of Buffalo; the daughters are Mrs. E. Ashley, of Cleveland; Mrs. F. B. Climo, of Winnipeg; Misses Sarah, Ida and Lena, at home. To them will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of a large circle of relatives and friends.

Estimable Lady Died Wednesday.

MRS. FRED R. CLARKE PASSED AWAY AT THE FAMILY RESIDENCE, JAMES ST.

An estimable lady passed away about 6 o'clock last evening in the person of Mrs. Fred R. Clarke, at the family residence, James St. The late Mrs. Clarke was a daughter of Mr. John T. Burns, of the D. and D. Institution staff, and was much esteemed by all who knew her. She was a Methodist and an attendant at Bridge St. Church. Mrs. Clarke, with her husband and family came to this city from Peterboro (where she was born), about four years ago, and has since resided in this city. She leaves, besides her sorrowing husband, two children, Horace and Sybil, to mourn the loss of a loving mother.

Colt Broke Its Neck.

Mr. John Crawford, who resides in the Township of Thurlow, near the second overhead bridge, on Tuesday night had the misfortune to lose a valuable colt. The animal was about the barn yard when it broke through the covering of an unused well. In falling the neck of the colt was broken. It was not found until yesterday morning, when it was missed, and a search revealed where it was.

London, Ont., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Hinsley of 356 Dufferin avenue, was killed at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Dundas and Colborne streets, while crossing the street car tracks. Her husband and two children were with her at the time.

Motorman Drowns.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Stewart McInnes, aged 23, a motorman on the Toronto Street Railway, was drowned about 3 p. m. yesterday in the lake near the western gap. McInnes was an excellent swimmer. It is thought that the fact of his going in bathing soon after eating was the cause of cramps. He was about 23 years of age and came from near Guelph, where his sister lives. Two brothers are in the Northwest.

Orders Overlapped—Seven Killed.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 13.—Freight trains Nos. 8 and 13, on the Western and Atlantic Railroad, collided at Ring Gold, Ga., early yesterday and seven trainmen were killed. The accident was due to the overlapping of orders by the engineer of No. 8. The engines were demolished.

Hotel Collapses, Four Killed.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 13.—Four persons were killed and several injured in the collapse of an hotel in Chihuahua, Mexico, Tuesday night.

Woman Nearly Suffocated.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—In a fire that occurred this morning at 1.10, at 34 Wellington avenue, Mrs. George Griffith, a woman of 60, was partly suffocated. She is now in the hospital.

French Ministry Is Firm.

Paris, Sept. 13.—There was an animated discussion in the course of the Cabinet meeting held at Rambouillet, relative to the application of the Separation Law.

The result was that the Ministry decided to enforce the enactment in its entirety, but to pay the greatest degree of respect possible to the conscience of the people. No church will be closed before December, 1907.

The Government believes opposition will subside, thus obviating the danger of a religious conflict.

Expeditions Being Formed.

Brussels, Sept., 13.—At the session of the Polar Congress here yesterday, Dr. Jean Charcot announced that he was organizing an expedition to the south pole, and Charles Benard, president of the Belgian Oceanographic Society, stated that he was organizing an expedition to the north pole. The two expeditions will operate in concert.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Woodstock, Sept. 12.—Offerings on the Woodstock cheese board to-day were 2300 boxes. The highest bid was 12½c, at which price all the cheese were sold.

Picton, Sept. 12.—At the cheese board to-day, 13 factories boarded 1105, all colored. 12 9-16c bid; 905 sold. Buyers, Sexsmith, McCaw, Morgan, Thompson.

SICKENED OF COMPETITION.

British Steel Tube Manufacturers Will Agree on Prices.

Glasgow, Sept. 13.—It is announced that a combination of Scotch and English steel tube manufacturers to regulate the home and export business has been formed, with a view to abolishing the present keen competition.

The industry has suffered incalculably since the previous agreement between the firms in this line was cancelled 18 months ago.

It is understood now that the combine is wider in its scope than the old, taking in all the firms in the United Kingdom except one Clyde-side concern.

It is stated that the American producers are supporting the combine, and that an advance in prices will soon be announced.

McINTOSH BROS.

COMMISSION'S POWERS

Judge MacTavish Clearly Defines Them in Short Address.

Books of Different Companies With Which Hon. Geo. E. Foster Is Connected Ordered to Be Produced—Home Life Investigation Continued—Mr. Pattison Says No Director Has Intimated Propriety of Handing Back Their Bonuses.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Dr. Oronhyatekha, S. C. R. of the I. O. F., and Hon. George E. Foster, formerly of the Union Trust Co., have been subpoenaed to appear before the Royal Commission on Insurance at the City Hall at 10.30 this morning. Yesterday afternoon Hon. George E. Foster and his solicitor, Wallace Nesbitt, K. C., argued that they should not be compelled to bring the books of different companies with which Mr. Foster is connected. Judge MacTavish, however, ordered the books to be handed over. E. E. A. DuVernet, appearing for the syndicate that took over the business of the Union Trust Co. shortly after the Commission was appointed, also made objections. But the powers of the Commission were clearly defined by Judge MacTavish. The matter was put in a nutshell by Mr. LeBeouf, the Quebec counsel, who thought that the Commission had power to follow the money of members of the I. O. F., or of any company, no matter where it went.

Judge MacTavish's Decision.

His Honor Judge MacTavish addressed the counsel.

"There are certain principles that guide the Commission," he said. "We are charged with the duty of tracing if we can, the funds from the pockets of the policyholders, to their ultimate destination. We are required to ascertain whether these funds or any part of them have been wasted or lost by the way, and also investigate the securities that represent the funds so contributed. As far as possible it will be for the Commission to see where the money is when it becomes a liability of the company. It is necessary that the information concerning these subjects must be put at the service of the Commission. I would be exceedingly sorry if the impression rested in any person's mind, at this late date, that the duties of the Commission were prosecuting rather than enquiring. So far we have avoided that, and we will avoid it to the end. It will be necessary for us to see certain books of the trust company, but it may not be necessary to go beyond that."

Mr. Wood Didn't Know.

The investigation of the Home Life was continued yesterday morning with R. A. Wood, one of the directors, in the box. Mr. Wood was also ignorant of the $80,000 deal and had accepted $500 from Pattison at his own valuation of his bonus, for getting out of the company.

James J. Warren, solicitor for the People's Life, conducted the amalgamation proceedings and told the history of the deal.

Witness received $250 for putting through the amalgamation, but denied having got any traveling expenses at any time.

Mr. Tilley, however, showed an entry that witness had received $250, but Mr. Warren could not remember. It was afterwards shown to be a mistake.

Mr. Pattison's Salaries.

A. J. Pattison was recalled. He gave the amounts of his salaries from the Homestead Co. from 1896 as follows: 1896, $1,825; 1897, $1,575; 1898, $1,075; 1899, $1,140; 1900, $900; 1901, $840; 1902, $640; 1903, $565; 1904, $640; 1905, $640. As his Home Life offices were more commodious, he did not spend an hour and a half per diem on the average in the Homestead offices, but was always available.

When questioned as to the cost of his shares in the Home Life, Mr. Pattison stated that they did not cost him more than $20.

Mr. Pattison produced a minute of Feb. 2, 1899, showing that the Home Life shareholders confirmed at their annual meeting the agreement with himself, approved by the directors, which agreement resulted in the $80,000 payment six years later.

Sloss Stock Purchase.

The resolution, moved by Rev. Dr. Briggs, that Sloss stock be purchased, was perfectly correct. Witness thought that the purchase did not come under the scope of insurance companies, but the other directors overruled his objection, and by himself giving a cheque for the amount at the end of the year, the purchase was kept out of the annual report. The loss on Sloss was ordered by the Insurance Department to be paid by the directors.

Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Pattison if any of the directors had been discussing, during the past few days, the propriety of handing back their share of the $80,000, but Mr. Pattison said no.

Advances amounting to $51,000 on Grand Valley bonds were made by the Home Life in 1904. There were similar transactions on the part of the Homestead Co.

Got $10,000 For Getting Out.

The Standard Loan Co. bought out the Homestead. Witness swore that he got $10,000 for getting out of the Homestead Co., above the price of stock. It was divided among the directors; witness got $8,900, Firstbrook $600, Curry $200, John S. King $100.

Pattison received the bulk of the money on the consideration of the sale he put through and not on account of any commutation agreement.

The effect of the amalgamation was to increase the improvement $60,000 at the end of 1905. Witness could not account for this.

The agreement of transfer of the Home Life to the People's was discussed at length. Witness claimed he had nothing very much to do with the agreements. The agreement should have been scrutinized as to the deficiency of premium income.

The Home Life building was bought at $146,000, the payment to be spread over a period of 15 years. The value of the building was written up to $250,000 by Mr. Pattison.

CANADIAN METHODISM

Initial Session of Quadrennial Conference at Montreal.

Rev. T. Albert Moore Elected General Secretary on the Second Ballot—A Day of Routine Business, Barren of Striking Features—Rev. Dr. Carman's Address—The Church of Canada Set Forth in Figures.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—Yesterday's proceedings at the Methodist general conference were singularly barren of striking features, a disposition to get business done in a practical and prosaic fashion, perhaps, being due to the heat which prevails. Consequently the organization of the conference has been of a strictly routine character, and the only approach to the enthusiasm occurred when Rev. S. F. Collier of Manchester, England, fraternal delegate of the British Wesleyan conference, was presented.

Rev. T. A. Moore General Secretary.

There were 228 delegates on the first ballot for general secretary, and Rev. T. Albert Moore got 104. Rev. J. S. Ross, Oakville, 25; James Allen, 13, and George Steel, 12, were next in the running. On the second ballot Mr. Moore received 206 votes. Rev. J. J. Rae, Picton; S. E. Clement, Brandon, and W. B. McCoy, Halifax, were appointed assistants, and Rev. G. H. Cornish, LL.D., journal clerk.

The honors were passed around at the opening service as far as possible. Rev. George Steel read scripture passages, and Rev. Dr. Heartz, Yarmouth, N. S., and Justice MacLaren offered prayer. John Torrance, the Montreal millionaire, welcomed the conference to the city.

Dr. Carman's Address.

Rev. Dr. Carman, general superintendent, delivered his quadrennial address and was attentively listened to. Applause broke out two or three times. This was most marked at a reference to the ministers, who are "allured to secular ventures and pursuits." In the course of his address, Dr. Carman gave the following statistical summary of the quadrennium:

A FIVE-HOURS' FIRE.

Makes a Big Hole in Shawville, Que., Which Was Deserted on Account of Its Civic Holiday.

Ottawa, Sept. 13.—A disastrous fire broke out yesterday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock in the Lucas Bakery at Shawville, Que., about sixty miles from here. It was soon a total loss.

The fire fighters were unable to cope with the flames on account of the scarcity of water and the small number of hands.

This was the civic holiday at Shawville and most of the people had gone to Ottawa to spend the day, with the result that the conflagration spread rapidly.

The Methodist Church took fire and was completely destroyed, as were the houses of W. A. Armisten, R. B. Armitage, W. Wilson, A. Richardson, Mrs. McCreadie, J. Brownlee, J. M. Hodgins, J. H. Horner, George Horner and Robert McCreadie, the house and planing mill of G. F. Hodgins and the houses of J. Eades and G. A. Howard.

There are no fire appliances in Shawville and the task of controlling the flames was almost a hopeless one.

However, by 8.30 last night the fire had practically worn itself out.

Thirteen families are homeless.

The loss is estimated at $100,000.

TERRORIST LEADER CAUGHT.

Mazury, Youthful But Dangerous, Begged For Instant Death.

Terrorist Leader Caught.

Moscow, Sept. 13.—Vladimir Mazury, the leader of the Moscow section of the "Flying Group," and his principal lieutenant, have been captured after a running fight with agents of the secret police, in the course of which Mazury was wounded.

Mazury is a mere youth, and when he was caught he begged the officers to kill him immediately. He is one of the most important leaders of the entire terrorist group.

Manifest Great Brutality.

Warsaw, Sept. 13.—The soldiers on duty here, enraged at the continuance of murders by the terrorists, are acting with great brutality. Governor-General Skallon is taking energetic steps to prevent an attack on the Jews, who are in a state of panic.

To Grapple With Terrorists.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 13.—Gen. Moeller-Sakomelsky, who subdued the mutiny at Sevastopol, has been appointed commander of the fifth army corps, the headquarters of which are at Warsaw, having been selected as the best officer in the army to grapple with the task of making life in Warsaw safe.

Governor-General Skallon's mind has been affected by the bomb outrages and the constant threats against his life.

Quiet at Siedlce.

Siedlce, Sept. 13.—The town was comparatively quiet yesterday. People are beginning to move about on the streets and the shops are opening again, although occasional shots lead to temporary renewals of the alarm.

Some revolver shots, fired from a garret yesterday morning, caused a volley from troops below, but no casualties resulted.

CHARIVARIED, WERE SHOT.

Young Married Man Wounds Three Undesirable Callers.

Snowflake, Man., Sept 13.—Wm. Wallace of Jurvis was married on Saturday, and a number of young men paid him a visit Tuesday night, forming a charivari party. Mr. Wallace, not liking the noise, fired shots from a shotgun, wounding three of the company.

Charles Phipps was shot below the knee, and is under the doctor's care here now. Thirty grains of shot were extracted from his body.

Percy Dixon was shot in the thigh and another young man received a few grains in the shoulder.

They will all recover.

SMOKE WRECKS ROSEMOUNT.

Big Steamer Runs Ashore—Will Have to Lighter Cargo.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—The Canadian Rosemount, coal-laden for Fort William, is on the rocks about 12 miles below the Detour lighthouse.

The accident was caused by the thick smoke from forest fires in the vicinity, which covers the surface of Lake Huron.

Juries Find Two Guilty.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Robert Morrison, over 60 years of ago, was yesterday found guilty of attempting to assault Violent Skinner, aged 7. Morrison was tried before Judge Winchester in the general sessions. The jury brought in a strong recommendation for mercy. Accused was a G. T. R. watchman at the Eastern avenue crossing. The crime took place on July 4.

William Maynard, charged with "shooting with intent," also faced his honor and a jury. The jury returned a verdict of wounding without intent, with a strong recommendation to mercy. Maynard and his wife had been on bad terms for some time. She went to live with her father, James Sheard. Maynard went to see her, there was a quarrel, and it is then the shooting took place. The accused admitted firing the revolver, but did not intend to shoot his father-in-law.

Rockefeller Denies Guilt.

Findlay, O., Sept. 13.—A plea of not guilty has been entered in the Probate Court here by John D. Rockefeller on the charge of violating the anti-trust law through the Standard Oil Co. Mr. Rockefeller was not personally in court, but pleaded through an attorney.

Tomato Farmer Robbed.

Windsor, Sept. 13.—William Pare was set upon by men who jumped into his wagon Tuesday night, beat him severely and probably robbed him. Pare was on his way home from the Sandwich Cannery, where he had taken a load of tomatoes.

Smallpox at Ingersoll.

Ingersoll, Sept. 13.—This town has a case of smallpox. The victim is Mrs. Martin (colored), who resides with her father, Joseph Henderson, at the west part of the town, near the outskirts. The Provincial Board of Health has been notified.

A MINUTE'S DELAY.

May Have Been Responsible For Death of 14 People and the Injury of 75 More.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—James F. Kennedy, a farmer, and his daughter Eva residing near Lindsay, reached the city last night. They were among the excursionists bound for the Northwest who were in the train wreck, and although seven coaches back from the colonist, which was hit, received a bad shaking up.

Mr. Kennedy made a statement which may have an important bearing on the causes of the wreck. It is stated that had there been one minute's more time at the switch the accident would not have occurred.

Mr. Kennedy says that a man and his son, who had ridden near him and talked with him, had intended to get off at Sudbury, but somehow missed getting off at that depot. When a couple miles or so beyond the place, the man appealed to the conductor to let them off. The train was stopped, and it seemed that it had hardly gotten up full speed again, when the crash came.

The arrival here last night of a number of passengers on the special gave information to show that a drizzling rain, which caused slipping rails, was partly responsible for the inability of the engines on the eastbound train to check its speed sufficiently to avert dreadful consequences, while the official statement of the railway sets forth that but for a defect in the air-brake valve there would have been no collision independent of the condition of the rails.

One more death was added to the list yesterday — Samuel Kingston of Frankford.

The last of the unknown victims has been tentatively identified as E. May of Winfield, Ont.

In Control Of Rebels

All the Smaller Towns In the Province of Santa Clara.

Insurgents Are Very Active and Are Continually Receiving Reinforcements — Yankee Sailors With Guns Were Landed In Havana, But Received Prompt Order From Washington To Rejoin Their Ship at Once.

Havana, Sept. 14.—The rebellion looms stronger to-day than ever.

All the smaller towns in Santa Clara Province appear to be absolutely in the control of the insurgents. Cienfuegos is in a state of alarm. Railroad, river and steamboat communication has been stopped. The rebels outside of Cienfuegos continue to receive reinforcements. Things are more normal at Santa Clara city. Trains over the lines of the united companies are running without interruption, except occasional held-ups. Both Santa Clara and Cienfuegos are prepared to resist invasion, but the number of rebels before these cities is vastly superior to the Government forces.

Marching Towards Havana.

Reports that the force under Pino Guerra is marching toward Havana, coupled with the very much increased concentration of rebels outside the city, is causing uneasiness here. All the troops which can possibly be spared from duty in Havana Province are being brought into the city proper.

Depredations along the lines of the Western and Cuban Central Railroads continue. Trains on other lines are not molested, other than to be fired upon by small bands of rebels.

Insurgents Active.

Cienfuegos, Sept. 14.—After destroying the bridge on the line of the Cuban Central, near Las Lajas Wednesday, the insurgents captured a train, burned a railroad station and destroyed the telegraph instruments. They then went on to Cruces, where they took the cash in the municipal treasury. Rebels are seizing American property at Manicaragua, Santa Clara Province.

A Prophecy.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The Journal des Debats, in a discussion of the Cuban situation, says:

"Should the insurgents not disarm, or not be disarmed after the arrival of American cruisers, we will see American soldiers going to Cuba, and after that numerous and plausible reasons will arise to postpone the re-embarkation as these foreign preservers of order in the island."

More Vessels Ready.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 14.—In conformity with plans put in execution several days ago, the United States navy department is quietly preparing several other vessels to join those already ordered to Cuba.

While the navy is preparing its ships, the army is being carefully studied by the responsible ranking officers with the view to quick, sharp and effective action in case its services are needed.

Yankee Sailors Land With Guns.

It was officially announced here late last night that 120 sailors, who, with artillery, landed at Havana from the American cruiser Denver, have been ordered to immediately return to their vessel, save for a small guard which will be left at the American legation.

Fight With Machetes.

Havana, Sept. 14.—In a fight near Ranchuelo, in Santa Clara Province, Capt. May, in command of 80 rural guardsmen and 140 militiamen, led a machete charge against a rebel force under Sabine Caballero. Three rebels were killed and one was wounded. Seven prisoners were taken.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Report Only, No Debate Being Reached On Church Union Question.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—It was fully believed yesterday morning that the church union question would come before the Methodist general conference during the afternoon. The committee were working upon a report, and the way seemed clear. The friends of the movement, however, knew it is prudent to go slow and its opponents, too, are for delay. So instead of a debate the report was received merely for information. No action was taken, and the forenoon was devoted to the ladies of the Women's Missionary Society.

The church union committee's report presents a field either for work or delay, but if the overwhelming sense of it can get itself materialized it is in favor of doing something directly towards union.

A vast amount of routine matter, in the shape of memorials, reports and notices of motion, were disposed of by the general superintendent, who drives through the business with considerable despatch and a humor as grim as that of Red Riding Hood's pseudo grandmother.

.TWO HOURS MAY BRING LIFE.

Respiration For Apparently Drowned Should Extend That Time.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—Before the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States, Surgeon Carrington presented a report of two cases of apparent drowning, in one of which the victim was under the water 23 minutes, and was resuscitated after two hours of artificial respiration.

He argued that no case of drowning should be pronounced hopeless until artificial respiration has been applied for at least two hours.

"Kingfisher" Wrecked.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—The power boat Kingfisher, owned at Binghamton, N.Y., has gone to the bottom of Lake Ontario. In a storm off Big Sandy the crew abandoned the boat, getting ashore in a dinghy.

Richest Prince Is Dead.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—Albrect, Prince of Prussia, regent of the Duchy of Brunswick, and the richest prince in Germany, died yesterday. Death followed a stroke of apoplexy.

Mrs. Bigley Is Dead.

Woodstock, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Bigley, mother of the notorious Cassie Chadwick, died at her home here last evening.

CANADA GROWING SOM...

Prairie Provinces Have Population of Nearly a Million Now.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The census-taking of the past summer in the three prairie provinces shows that Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta together represent a population of about 805,000, almost double the census showing of five years ago.

Manitoba returns are not quite complete, but will show something over 360,000 as compared with 255,211 in 1901, and 152,506 in 1891.

Saskatchewan and Alberta both show more rapid gain. The former contains a population of about 260,000, and the latter of 185,000.

Five years ago the census of the same district, portions of what were then the Northwest Territories, gave a population of 165,551.

In 1891 this same region had a population of 66,799.

Meddlesome Mr. Churchill

The note of resentment which has greeted Mr. Winston Churchill's patronising message to the Canadian people is by no means cynical. It is very properly called a new thing in British politics for an under secretary to take such a task upon himself.

As an exchange points out, when a message of state is called for it is due to the dignity of the Dominion that it should emanate not from an associate Minister, but from the minister himself. The message in question has too strong a smack of the self-consciousness of Downing St. to be relished by a people who have once for all shaken off the meddling interference of that office.

Lord Elgin, as the Chief Secretary for the Colonies, has more natural affinity with Canada that this scion of the house of Marlboro. It is an unpleasant sign that the noble Lord should abdicate his functions, when Canadians are to be addressed, or relegate them to a junior who prefers to make his communications through a still further diminished official channel.

An assurance given to Canadians that the Liberals are as much, or more concerned for their welfare than the Conservatives were, that "Codlin's the friend, not Short," savors of an official misconception of our dependence upon partyism in British politics. It matters little to Canadians which party is in power, so long as the rulers "think imperially" and uphold the cause of Empire.

What Canada has to gain from one party or the other is not the concern of under secretaries and their messengers. The message in question, addressed to Canadians, is specially inopportune in view of the coming meeting of the Colonial Premiers in London, where pending questions will require to be handled with the greatest tact and discretion.

At a time when the proposal that the Colonial Secretary himself should preside over that august assembly is repudiated as giving too great a semblance of Downing street influence, this young gentleman, Mr. Churchill, an under secretary, of only a few months' experience, and no acquired standing as a statesman, chooses to "butt in" with formal deliverances for Canadian information and guidance.

We say the note of resentment that has already been heard regarding this action is well warranted. The young gentleman has undertaken a duty at which the most mature experience would hesitate.

As the Canadian Gazette, of London, expressed itself in its issue of March 29 last, British Ministers cannot be surprised if, after the Alaskan fiasco, Canadian Ministers and the Canadian people keep a close watch upon Downing street. It said that British Ministers had "made themselves suspect" by their dealings with the Transvaal, and the New Hebrides. "There are troublous times before the British Empire," the Canadian Gazette went on to say. "If the cardinal principles of colonial nationhood are not fully grasped by British political parties. It is at least a consolation that among the few who seem to realize the true perspective of things is Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, one of the shrewdest and best-informed of the new British Labor M. P.'s. It is by him that the ministry has been advised to 'muzzle' Mr. Winston Churchill with his light-headed efforts 'to put the colonies in their place' and treat them to 'a little wholesome neglect.'"

This was the tone applied to the youthful under secretary by the Canadian representative journal in London in March last. The man who spoke slightingly of "the colonies" as deserving of the wholesome correction of studied 'neglect,' now presumes to lecture Canadians as "colonists," and to teach them their duty and their place in the imperial fabric.

Such infantile meddling is calculated to be only mischievous. It warrants the criticism which appeared in the London Standard of the latest date received, when it observed that the Government is stricken by an incurable malady, and that "if its existence be prolonged there is too much reason to fear that it will materially impair the good relations between the mother country and the colonies, while it will dangerously reduce the efficiency of our defensive armaments."

Premier Roblin of Manitoba says that every public school in that province must fly the Union Jack during school hours, and that every school which neglects to do so will forfeit its right to the school grant. Mr. Roblin gives the following reason for his order, and no sensible man will say it is not a good one:

"I trust in making this move we will not be misunderstood. We welcome the various peoples that come to our province, who are born under foreign flags, who speak a different tongue, and we give them the benefit of our civil laws; endow them with civil rights; the benefit of our criminal law; the free education of the schools, all of which are the outcome of the civilizations and benefits that follows the Union Jack, and I think the man who comes from a foreign country in order to better his circumstances, and objects to perpetuating the glories of our flag, who declines to have his children infused with British patriotism, is a man that is undesirable."

There are eight vacancies in the House of Commons. For six of them the elections might and should be held at once and altogether. The Government has decided to bring them on in batches. The papers of many towns and cities, these days, are advising their readers to boil their drinking water. It is just as well to be on the safe side, especially when the cost is small, and typhoid cases are heard of.

Kingston had a celebration on Victoria day, and the balance on the right side of the ledger turns out to be $445. Not too bad, that. Besides the profit, a lot of people did not go out of town to spend their money, as they might have done had there been no celebration. There seems to be a lesson in this for Belleville

Those Kingston soreheads, whose mouthpiece, the Whig, has been frothing at the mouth recently over the Shannon appointment, may find something to interest them in the following, which we clip from that staunch Grit paper, the Brantford Expositor, whose editor and proprietor is an M.P.P.:

"It is said Major Shannon of Kingston will not be given the military paymastership for which he was at one time slated, but debarred from by the protest of Kingston Reformers. This is unfortunate. It is a matter of little importance, in one sense, whether Mr. Shannon steps up or not, but it is a matter of great importance if his political leanings have deprived him of an office to which he was otherwise entitled. Let politics be kept out of the militia."

Rev. Dr. Carman

(Toronto Telegram.)

Canadian Methodism was saved by its General Superintendent, Rev. Dr. Carman, from the sin and shame of apostacy on the school question such as silenced all the voices of leadership in Canadian Presbyterianism.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church, assembled at Montreal, is largely made up of prominent laymen.

The great characteristic of the prominent layman in every Protestant denomination is his tendency to care more for the interests of his party than for the ideals of his church,

It may be that Rev. Dr. Carman will not be rated at his true value in the General Conference. The smooth apostacy of official Presbyterianism and of official Methodism, apart from Dr. Carman, is modern and "up-to-date." The rugged power and eloquence displayed by Dr. Carman in his denunciation of the Laurier surrender to clericalism was not "up-to-date" There was nothing modern about the courage that enabled Rev. Dr. Carman to plead for national schools before western congregations bossed by graft-hungry Coercionist office-holders.

Eye Strain
(Brain Strain)

By far the commonest cause of NERVOUSNESS.
The actual underlying cause of many ills, which the thousands of sufferers are vainly trying to relieve by drugs. Really the most dangerous evil that now exists, because it gives rise to brain irritation of so many different degrees. The most unsuspected, and therefore, neglected menace to the general health, because the very brain-strain enables the person to "see alright."
Very often completely changes the person's disposition, by the intense irritation of nerve-centers in the brain.

A BALD NEWSPAPER MAN.

Getting a New Crop of Hair, And Has No More Dandruff.

Everybody in the Northwest knows Col. Daniel Searles, the veteran journalist and publicist of Butte. Jan. 10, 1906, the Colonel writes: "I used a couple of bottles of Newbro's Herpicide with marvellous results. The dandruff disappeared; a new crop of hair has taken root, and the bald spot is rapidly being covered." Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ that digs up the scalp in scales as it burrows its way to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

General Conference Of Methodist Church.

DR. CARMAN'S ABLE ADDRESS—MONEY GRUBBING PREACHERS DENOUNCED— RITUAL IN THE METHODIST CHURCH.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—The General Conference was organized and got ready for the season's work yesterday. Under the practiced hand of Dr. Carman order and arrangement were soon instituted. Heads of the numerous committees were appointed without delay and last night nearly every committee had a preliminary sitting.

His eighty-four years finds the General Superintendent's ardor not abated. His address was delivered in his old-time fiery eloquence and many of his observations were met with applauding assent.

MONEY-GRUBBING PREACHERS.

Strong was his condemnation of men in the pulpit who used their connection and by virtue of it embarked on enterprises that were failures and in the ruin destroyed other people's fortunes.

"In this age of restlessness and haste and strife, materialism and doubt," said he, "who is to stand firm if the pillars in the temple of the King are shaky and untrustworthy? What are we to rely on in the social fabric, if there is no security or stability in the city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God? We have heard it said by laymen, sometimes by those who were ready to shift off their responsibilities upon other shoulders, that ministers have little or no competency for tact or business. And then we have seen ministers go into what is called business, and so far over-reach laymen and get the advantage of them as to open their eyes and change their tune. What a betrayal of trust, what a degradation of sacred honor must be here, my countrymen?"

In his remarks on church union, the superintendent interjected: "We ought not to slacken our efforts. If we go into union we should take in as much as we can.

SERVICE LITURGICAL.

The growing tendency of the service of the Methodist church to become liturgical is indicated by the remarks of the Commission on Ritual in the Agenda. The report states that the "commissioners have felt under obligations to retain, with such changes only as seemed highly expedient, the forms which have come down to us by inheritance from the early church." All changes have been made in a conservative manner, "the chief alteration recommended being in the ritual for the administration of the Lord's Supper, where a full morning service, quarterly, for this holy sacrament is proposed." The passages of scripture quoted are from the revised version.

ELEVEN COLLEGES.

The church has now eleven colleges, not including mission schools, with 157 professors and instructors and 3,130 students in attendance. The buildings and equipment are worth $1,623,434.07 and the endowments total $1,069,432.

VICTORIA'S FINANCES.

The income and expenditure of Victoria University have steadily increased during each year of the quadrennium. The increase for 1906 includes: Interest received and accrued, $33,712.25; educational society grant, $5,986.10; fees, $7,862; total, $48,485.35. The total expenditure is $44,985.96.

The college building and grounds are valued at $300,000, Annesley Hall and grounds at $95,000, Drynan residence $22,000, Czar street property (campus) $29,960.03, president's residence $8,000, three Manitoba farms $1,590.

THE ENDOWMENT.

The endowment consists of real estate, mortgages and cash held by the National Trust Company, $107,838.

These bonds and debentures:—Sao Paulo, $81,420; Imperial Rolling Stock, $49,671.60; British Columbia Electric Railway, $15,114.55; Ottawa Electric Light, $4,000; Toronto and York Radial, $51,330; Toronto Savings & Loan Co., $40,000; Mexican Light and Power, $1,000.

The following stocks:— National Trust Co., $24,960; Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., $51,576; Bank of Hamilton, $13,032; Merchants' Bank, $316; Carter Crume, $10,400; Bradley-Garrettson, $1,000; Dominion Permanent, $94.30; Western Union Telegraph Co., $500; Gurney Foundry Co., $1,000.

The total endowment is $526,456.32, and the total assets $1,017,237.36. In addition to these assets there is $150,000, subscriptions re special endowment, now bearing interest.

RECOGNIZE YOUNG MEN.

The recognition by the church authorities of young men's associations on its sites, in Toronto termed the Y. M. M. A., is the subject of a memorial.

DR. CARMAN'S ADDRESS.

Rev. Dr. Carman, the General Superintendent, opened his address by an expression of gratitude that St. James' church had been retained and was available for the conference. As Methodists, they felt assured, from Holy Scripture and from the experience of multitudes, that the doctrines they held and taught were in the interests of the kingdom of Christ. The general conference stood for unity. Dr. Carman referred, in feeling terms, to the brethren that had answered the last earthly call since the general conference in Winnipeg four years ago. He then gave the following statistical summary of the quadrennium:

CHURCH'S PROGRESS.

The membership of the Church is now 317,717, an increase of 25,822. There are now, 1,811 ministers, an increase of 19. Class leaders number 5,611, which is a decrease of 1,180. This is the only decrease shown by the statistics. There are now 3,552 Sunday schools, an increase of 127. The schools contains 274,306 scholars, an increase of 1,740. The total force of the Church numbers 323,729, an increase of 13,030. The Sunday schools raised $222,434, an increase of $30,077 Young people's societies and leagues now number 1,864, an increase of 55. These raised $313,170, an increase of $68,162. Their membership is 75,845, an increase of 6,443. The churches number 3,616, an increase of 203. The total value of church property is $21,129,768, an increase of $4,327,330. The debt upon churches and parsonages has decreased by $91,375. The amount raised for all purposes was $13,720,650, an increase of $2,809,379. The amount raised for connexional purposes was $2,620,995, an increase of $916,366. The missionary contributions amounted to $1,466,400, an increase of $348,190.

CHURCH OFF ITS BASE.

Speaking of the history of the Church, and of the conflicts of the past, Mr. Carman said; "And our day, so far along, is yet raging and blazing with conflict. What is the trouble? Perhaps the directest, correctest answer is, 'The Church has been and is yet too far off its base,"

The "heartless conflict of labor and capital," the "tears and blood in woe-stricken Russia," the "turmoil in France"—what did all these mean but that the Church was off its base. What meaneth this clamor and bitter strife in our own British Isles? It is again that the Church crowds around off her base and claims ground that, as matters stand, belongs indisputedly to other organizations and other interests.

Dr. Carman deplored the dearth of candidates for the ministry, and said one of the most harmful influences was the example of ministers who were allured to secular ventures.

FAVORS CHURCH UNION.

In speaking on church union, Dr. Carman said; "Personally, I have much satisfaction in the course adopted by the Presbyterian General Assembly in simply sending on to the Presbyterian people, without note or comment, the action of the Union Committee, thus affording their Church full opportunity for calm review. If a union is to be effected we must all carry, let us say, all our people with us. We must not sever or weaken bonds, but extend and strengthen them. We must not have more denominations when done than we have now. This would be a greater evil than to fail in effecting the proposed union."

RACE SUICIDE.

"I hear it when we pronounce upon temperance and moral reform; when an Imperial medical association brands race suicide as infamous, and proclaims its sense of obligation to frown upon vice and encourage and maintain social virtue. I hear it when we enact advanced Sunday laws and anti-gambling and anti-usury laws, and seek their vigorous enforcement. This is patriotism. This is working towards a healthful religious and social atmosphere, and this is the kingdom of God, whose advancement we are here to promote, that He, whose right it is, may reign in human hearts and in human society and institutions throughout the world."

Cassie Chadwick's Mother is Dead.

Woodstock, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Mary A. Bigley, one of the pioneers of this district, passed away at 6.30 this evening at her home, 676 Dundas street. Deceased came to this country many years ago, and resided with her husband at the crossing of the G.T.R. and the Governor's road, near Eastwood. Her husband was section boss for the G.T.R. at this point for some years before he resigned and moved with his family to a farm near Eastwood. There he died, and the mother and family came to Woodstock over fifteen years ago. Deceased was 76 years of age, and was highly esteemed by many friends She is survived by one son, Dan, of Cleveland, and two daughters, Mrs. Campbell, at home, and Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick.

The Rules of the Road

(Montreal Witness.)

Walkers on the streets since the advent of automobiles have been divided into the quick and the dead. The insolent indifference of drivers in Montreal to pedestrians often raises strong feelings in the mind of citizens put to inconvenience by some lout lolling on a cart. Drivers have to be taught their duties by the police or they will never learn them. In Montreal the police either do not know the duties of drivers to foot passengers or never enforce them. Judge Choquet has now let us know what our rights are. In the case of the chauffeur who struck and killed a citizen quietly crossing St. Catherine street, with his family, His Honor finds the accused guilty of the very serious crime of manslaughter and makes a few forcible remarks that will agreeably surprise pedestrians who had come to believe that in Montreal they had no rights on the streets and that the roadway belonged to butcher boys, coal cart drivers, drunken cabmen and aristocratic automobilists. The pedestrian says, the judge, has every right to walk on the roadway, and if the driver of a vehicle comes along and the pedestrian does not get out of the way that driver must stop his vehicle. This statement of the law will surely bring new light, not only to drivers but to the police. All such are now informed from the Bench that the law requires any and every driver of vehicle, cart, automobile or what not, not only to keep his vehicle sufficiently under command not to run over anybody, but to stop to allow a pedestrian to pass. These sentences should be printed in large type in all future editions of the police manual.

WEIRD CANADIAN STORY.

A Murderer Appears to a Man Who Smote Him After Death.

Writing in the illustrated weekly "Canada," "A Habitant" says: The incident that I am now going to relate happened in the same parish wherein is situated the Sault au Recollet. Soon after the arrival of the English in Canada, the custom of gibbeting criminals by the roadside came in. There was a very famous one at Pointe Levis, and a habitant named Valliquet was driving past on the day appointed for the christening of a child of his; there was to be a great supper and rejoicing at his house that night to celebrate the occasion, and Valliquet, feeling recklessly happy, drove close to the gibbet where hung the body of a man who had been guilty of a very brutal murder, and caught it a smart crack with his whip saying, "I invite you to supper at my house to-night." A friend of Valliquet's who was driving with him, shuddered, saying: "The man has been a criminal, but he has paid his penalty before men, and if he repented at the last he may be a saint in heaven to-day." But the happy father was light at heart, and thought only of the joy-making of the christening feast. Evening came, and with it the guests, and they sat down to table, excepting the new mother, who was unable to rise from her bed. Hardly had supper commenced, when there were three knocks at the door, and, without waiting for it to be opened, in walked the gibbeted murderer, carrying his iron cage under his arm; he put the latter behind the door and stood facing the host.

Kept His Appointment.

It is needless to describe the terror of the assembly, or how Valliquet's knees trembled as he gathered his wits and courage together. "What do you want?" asked he. "If you want suffrages, I will say a Libra for your soul and some other prayers." The figure replied, "You invited me to supper, and I have come." Valliquet feared greatly for his wife's health, so he begged the apparition to depart, promising his prayers. The ghost, who at first insisted on waiting for the dance and taking part therein, finally promised to go on condition that Valliquet would come the following night to his gibbet at the stroke of midnight and dance. This being agreed, the ghost picked up his cage and walked out. Everyone, of course, tried to persuade their host to break his promise, but he would not hear of such a thing. Woman's wit provided the best expedient. A baptised baby was supposed, and is still supposed by some people, to be an angel from heaven, and the anxious mother suggested that her husband should take the child in his arms when he went to redeem his word. Accordingly Valliquet went the following night at the stroke of twelve to the gibbet, carrying his child in his arms. "What!" said the murderer, "you come thus provided? I came last night alone, but you only come with an angel to guard you. Put down the child, for I have a splendid dance to propose, and the time is measured by the strokes of a whip." "No," said Valliquet. "I have kept my promise to meet you here, and I will say the prayers I offered to say, but I will not put my child out of my arms." "You are at any rate brave, even though you are thoughless," answered the murderer. "Henceforth you will respect the dead, and remember the dead, like the living, can keep appointments."

A Too Amorous Bear.

Among the attractions of the Cavanagh House at Peterborough are a bevy of good-looking girls, and a half-tamed bear. Whether it was the weather, or whatever the cause, Mr. Bruin became amorous one day last week and when Bridget went out with his dinner he at once stood upon his hind feet, and with his arms embraced Bridget. The girl screamed for help, and then started to battle for life against the too affectionate bear. The other girls in the kitchen heard the screams and rushed to her assistance. The cook was the first to arrive. She caught hold of the girl and started to pull her out of the bear's embrace. Almost immediately all the girls in the house were on the scene, and were lined up, all pulling against Bruin. By this time many of the men around the place had arrived and took a hand in the combat. It was a difficult task for the men, because by the time they arrived Bridget was partially disrobed, and every now and then another garment was torn in shreads and dropped off, until finally, the poor girl was almost without any covering. At this point the men retreated and the bear gave up the fight. It was a close call for Bridget, and had it not been for the cook she would have been well hugged. As it was, she got off with a number of scratches and the loss of her clothing.

A Cure That Didn't Work.

It is rumored, says The Fernie, B. C., Ledger, that a certain married man who had invested too much of his monthly pay in Seagram last Saturday night, and in consequence wended his way home rather deviously, met with an unexpected experience. His wife, having had this kind of experience upon many other pay nights past and gone, concluded to give her husband of the devious gait habit a lesson which would lead him to improve his gait. Dame rumor adds zest to this unvarnished tale by relating that this much-troubled woman arrayed herself in black tights, trimmed in red rings, long pointed slippers turned up at the toes, decorated her face after the fashion of an Indian warrior, let her long black hair fall loosely down over her bare shoulders, and as the limber-jointed hubby staggered into the room, she said in a voice full of smoke and sulphur: "Come in here, you brute, I'm a she devil." Imagine her surprise when he staggered up to her, reached out his hand and stammered: "Ish-zat-so? Shake, ol' girl. I'm your brother-in-law; my wif-shur sister."

Plan of Siege of Quebec.

Provincial Archivist Alex. Fraser has received a copy of a military map of the St. Lawrence River, from Sillery to the Fall of Montmorence, with the operations of the siege of Quebec, under command of Vice-Admiral Saunders and Major-General Wolf, in 1759. The map shows the positions of the fleets, the British encampments and armies. The plan was presented to Mr. Fraser by Alexander Cadenhead, of Toronto.

FIVE YOUNG PEOPLE DROWN.

Berry Pickers Upset From Old Boat and Only One is Saved.

White Head, N.S., Sept. 14.—A drowning accident occurred at Port Felix yesterday, by which five young people lost their lives—Minnie, aged 15; John, aged 11, and Maggie, aged 9, children of Frank Fougere, postmaster, of East Port Felix. Accompanied by their three cousins Clara, aged 18; Maggie, aged 14, and Martin, aged 12, children of Joseph King, Port Felix, they left their homes yesterday morning to pick blueberries, and about six miles back of Port Felix they attempted to cross a lake in an old, leaky, flat-bottomed boat.

They succeeded in reaching a small island in the lake by going two at a time in the boat, but on returning the six got in, and when about two-thirds of the way across the boat filled and turned bottom up.

Minnie Fougere caught the boat and managed to paddle ashore, and was the only survivor of the party of six.

Put up a good front and you won't be talked about behind your back.

Temper may be a troublesome thing, but you never mend matters by losing it.

The hold-up man's rule of three is "Put up, give up and shut up."

BOOKBINDING.

Orders for bookbinding should be left at The Intelligencer Office. It is surprising how attractive and satisfactory a volume can be made of these magazines. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books with any kind of ruling, made to order.

There is nothing more pleasing than praise if it is honest and you believe you have earned it.

To the woman who has to plan all of the expenditures for the home, the store-ads. are the most important—as they should be most interesting—reading matter in the newspaper.

While it may be just and right that no man should be humiliated, no right feeling man will rejoice at it.

Talk about public speakers mesmerizing people. The greatest is the mesmerism of plain truth plainly and earnestly told.

There may be some "reading matter" in this newspaper to-day which will be WORTH A DOLLAR A LINE to you. And the chances are that it is to be found in the want ads. column.

Going To School

Going to school is the most important part of a boy or girl's life and they should have durable, good fitting shoes.

We're schooled in the art of providing Boys' and Girls' Shoes—we've learned our lesson by practical experience. We have the largest stock of School Shoes in this district to choose from.

SEPTEMBER DAYS.

(The Khan.)

If I had my choice, I would die in June,
When the earth is warm and the air is sweet;
I'd hear the fiddling crickets croon
In the grasses growing above my feet.
They'd fiddle and chirp when the stars were out;
I'd know by the birds when the dawn would peep;
And the dew-wet weeds would whisper soft;
"Don't make any noise—he is fast asleep."

But the winter time, how hard 'twould be
To die when the earth and sky had gloomed!
I fancy I'd shudder and try to shriek
When the frozen clods on my coffin boomed.
The snow would smother; the searching frost
Would dig and burrow and find me soon.
If I had my choice I will humbly ask
To sleep my sleep in lap of June.

But what's the matter with being alive
On a sweet September day like this?
When morn and eve and noontide strive
To drench the world with every bliss.
Look at the mist o'er yonder woods,
The crow's cotillion in yonder sky;
Rich September has the goods
And taunts you thus: "How dare you die?"

How dare you die when the barns are full
And the hives are rich with their honeyed store,
And the big red apples are ready to pull,
And the seeds are ripe in the punkin core—
When the purpling grapes that love the sky
Are coaxing her just for another kiss,
And I hear my sweet September cry;
"How dare you die on a day like this?"

How much earlier the western harvest is this year than last is demonstrated by the fact that wheat receipts at points along the C.P.R. for one day in Manitoba and Saskatchewan totalled 311,000 bushels, as against 13,000 bushels for the same day last year. Of course the earlier the harvest the safer, and the sooner the money circulates the better for fall business.

The practical joker has his place—a small one at that—but he should not attempt to trifle with banking institutions. A man in St. Catharines, Ontario, shouted out that "The Sovereign bank is busted," on noticing ground being broken for the vault of the bank's new premises. It was not long till the story spread, and people were incredulous enough to believe it. There was a run on the bank for a day and it was some time before confidence was restored.

All lovers of Dickens will be interested to learn that the original of "Little Dorritt" is still alive. She is Mrs. Cooper, the sister of Dickens' school chum, and his playmate in the days when she was Mary Ann Milton. She has lived for more than half a century in the south of England and, though now more than ninety years of age, she still retains full possession of all her faculties.

Young women in New York with a desire to help humanity have hit upon a beneficent plan. They have constituted themselves visiting housekeepers. Going into the homes of the poor, they sweep rooms, wash clothes, dress the children and nurse the feeble and sick. The work is often strenuous and requires a high degree of courage, but those who have watched its progress say that no philanthropic efforts have ever yielded more practical and immediate results.

The Ottawa Free Press says: The prices of lumber are exceedingly high. The quotations of last spring when United States and British buyers were outbidding each other to secure the product of the Ottawa mills have been maintained right up to the present time. Those familiar with the trade will realize what a handsome figure is $56 a thousand for two inch pine sidings. The best white cedar shingles are selling from $4 to $5 a thousand and lath has eclipsed them all for expensiveness. The price is from $4.50 to $5.50 a thousand, twice last year's figure. These are the quotations given the wholesaler by the manufacturer so that the man who wants to build a house must go a little higher to make up the retailer's profit,

A SHORT COURSE IN ANATOMY.

How many bones in the human face?
Fourteen, when they're all in place.
How many bones in the human head?
Eight my child, as I've often said.
How many bones in the human ear?
Four in each, and they help to hear.
How many bones in the human spine?
Twenty-four, like a climbing vine.
How many bones in the human chest?
Twenty-four ribs, and two of the rest
How many bones the shoulder bind?
Two in each—one before, one behind.
How many bones in the human arm?
In each arm one; two in each forearm
How many bones in the human wrist?
Eight in each if none are missed.
How many bones in the palm of the hand?
Five in each, with many a band.
How many bones in the fingers ten?
Twenty-eight, and by joints they bend.
How many bones in the human hip?
One in each, like a dish they dip.
How many bones in the human thigh?
One in each and deep they lie.
How many bones in the human knees?
One in each, the kneepan, please.
How many bones in the leg from the knee?
Two in each, we can plainly see.
How many bones in the ankle strong?
Seven in each, but none are long.
How many bones in the ball of the foot?
Five in each, as the palms are put.
How many bones in the toes half a score?
Twenty-eight and there are no more.
And now altogether these bones may wait.

The Children to Consider.

A clergyman, recently returned from the West, brought this story. He was the guest of one of the pillars of the church in a rural community. Beefsteak was the piece de resistance, and the guest sawed at it with such energy that its toughness was perfectly obvious. Finally the host thought it necessary to do something to save his reputation for hospitality. "It's fine meat," he remarked; "nice and tender, but, you see, we have to keep the knives very dull on account of the children."

A Fish Story From France.

While fishing in the lake at Geradmer (Vosges) recently a man caught a large pike weighing about thirty pounds, which was subsequently sold to the proprietor of a hotel. In preparing the fish for the table the cook found a purse containing £9 inside, and this was afterward identified by one of the guests at the hotel, says the Radical, who a few days before had dropped it into the lake.—London Chronicle.

Palmerston's Remedy.

Lady B. once told Lord Palmerston that her maid, who had been with her to the Isle of Wight, objected to going thither again because the climate was not "embracing" enough.

"What am I to do with such a woman?" she asked.

"You had better take her to the Isle of Man, next time," said Lord Palmerston.—Tit-Bits.

Hope For South Africa.

A suggestion has been made in Cape Town that the new cathedral in that city should have a poet's corner. One newspaper expresses the hope that if the corner is provided most of the present-day poets of South Africa will soon be laid to rest in it.

Perfectly Safe.

Weary Walker—Say, yer a disgrace ter de profesh. I heard yer tellin' dat woman yer'd saw some wood for her if she gev yer a meal.

Ragson Tatters—G'on! Don't yer s'pose I made sure foist dat she didn't have no wood ter saw?

They Jerk Away.

Molly—I always wear a few pins sticking out around my waist. It's safer.

Her Chaperon—That's poor policy, my dear! You can catch people on barbed wire, but you can't hold them that way!

The Adventures of Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

"You still wish me to go, miss?" he said.

"If you will not accept what is offered."

"I am sorry," said the little sailor, "very sorry. If I'd met you, miss, before I saw Mrs. Kettle, and if you'd been a bit different, I believe I could have liked you. But as it is—"

She leaped to her feet, with eyes that blazed.

"Go!" she cried. "Go, or I will call upon some of those fellows to shoot you."

"They will do it cheerfully if you ask them," said Kettle, and did not budge.

She sank down on the sofa again with a wail.

"O, go," she cried. "If you are a man go, and never let me see you again."

Capt. Kettle bowed, and went on deck.

A little later he was alone in the quarterboat. The Cancelario was drawing fast away from him into the night, and the boat danced in the cream of her wake.

"Ah, well," he said to himself, "there's another good chance gone for good and always. What a cantankerous beggar I am." And for a moment his thoughts went elsewhere, and he got out paper and a stump of pencil, and busily scribbled an elegy to some poppies in a cornfield. The lines had just flitted gracefully across his mind, and they seemed far too comely to be allowed a chance of escape. It was a movement characteristic of his queerly ordered brain. After the more ugly moments of his life. Capt. Kettle always turned to the making of verse as an instinctive relief.

(Copyright by Cutcliffe Hyne.)

THE PILGRIM SHIP.

Even before he left Jeddah, Capt. Kettle was quite aware that by shipping pilgrims on the iron deck of the Saigon for transit across the Red sea, he was transgressing the laws of several nations, especially those of Great Britain and her dependencies. But what else could the poor man do? Situated as he was, with such a tempting opportunity ready to his hand, he would have been less than human if he had neglected to take the bargain which was offered. And though the list of things that has been said against Capt. Owen Kettle is both black and long, I am not aware that anyone has yet alleged that the little sailor was anything more or less than human in all his many frailties.

Cortolvin came to the charthouse and put this matter of illegality to him in plain words when the engines chose to break down two days out of Jeddah, and the Saigon lolled helpless in the blazing Red sea heat.

Cortolvin up to that time had not made himself remarked. He had marched on board from the new Jeddah quay where the railway is, and posed as an Arab of the Sahara who was glorying in the newly-acquired green turban of a Hadji; he was nicked on the mate's tally as a "nigger," along with some 340 dark-skinned followers of the prophet, and he had spent those two days upon an orthodox square of ragged carpet spread on the rusted iron plating of the lower fore deck.

When the pilgrims had mustered for victualling, he had filed in with the rest, and held out a brass lotah for his ration of water, and a tattered square of canvas for his dole of steamed rice. You could count his ribs 20 yards away, but he'd the look of a healthy man, and when on mornings he helped to throw overboard those of his fellow pilgrims who had died during the night, it was plain to see that he was a fellow of more than ordinary muscular strength.

He came to Capt. Kettle in the charthouse to report that the pilgrims contemplated seizing the Saigon so soon as ever the engines were once more put in running order. "They've declared a jehad against you, if you know what that is," said Cortolvin.

"A holy war, or some such skittles, isn't it?" said Kettle.

"That's about the size of it," said the Hadji; you'll have to look out if you intend to remain master of this steamboat."

"I don't require any teaching of my business from passengers," said Kettle stiffly.

"All right," said Cortolvin, "have it your own way. But I think you might be decently grateful. I've risked my life by coming to give you news of what was in the wind. And you can't pretend that the information is not useful. You've a coolie crew, who will be absolutely foolish if trouble comes—these Lascars always are that way. You've just your two white engineers and two white mates to back you up, and the five of you wouldn't have a show. You've 340 fanatics to deal with, who are all fighting bred, and fighting fit. They're all well armed, and they wouldn't a bit object to die scrimmaging in such a case.

"You know it's part of their creed that if they peg out whilst fighting giaours, they go slick to paradise by lightning express. That wily old camel driver of Mecca painted his heaven as just the sort of dandy place to suit this kind of cattle, and as most of them have a beast of a time on this earth, they're anxious to move along upstairs whenever a decent opportunity offers to get there."

"They'll be an ugly crowd to tackle; I grant that."

"They are so, and don't you forget it. I might point out, captain, that, personally speaking, I'd been a lot safer if I'd stayed down on the lower fore deck yonder, and held my tongue. They'd have got you to an absolute certainty if they'd ambushed you as was intended, and I could have kept out of the actual throat-cutting and preserved a sound skin. They've all got profound respect for me; I'm a very holy man."

"And as it is?"

Hadji Cortolvin shrugged his shoulders. "O, I chip in with you."

"Will you tell me why?"

"Cousinship of the skin I suppose. You're white by birth, and I believe I should turn out to be white also if I kept out of the sun for awhile and had several turkish baths. Of course I've a snuff-colored hide on me now, and during this last two years I've been living with men of color, and following their ways, and thinking their thoughts. Funny isn't it? I come across you, I don't know you from Adam. I can't say I particularly like what I've seen of you, and yet here am I, rounding on my former mates and chipping in with you on the clear knowledge that I shall probably get killed during the next few hours for my pains."

"May I ask your name?" said Kettle. "I believe, sir," he added with a bow, "that you are a gentleman."

The Hadji laughed. "So far as I recollect, I was that once, captain. Sorry I haven't a card on me, but my name's W. H. Cortolvin, and I lived near Richmond, in Yorkshire, before I was idiot enough to go wandering off the Cook's tourist routes into the middle of Arabia."

"I'm Welsh myself," said Kettle, "but I've known men from Yorkshire. Shake hands sir, please. Will you have a whiskey peg?"

"Pour it out, Captain. I haven't tasted a Christian drink for 30 weary months. And you've got a chattie hung up in the draught of a port! Cool water, ye gods! Bismillah! But it is good to be alive sometimes."

Captain Kettle looked with distaste at the Hadji's attire.

"Won't you sling that filthy nightgown thing of yours overboard," he asked, "and have a wash? I can rig you out with some pyjamas from the slop chest."

But Cortolvin would not change his dirt and squalor just then. He had worn it too long to be affected by it; "and," said he, "I don't want to advertise the fact that I'm an Englishman just at present. If my dear friends down yonder on the lower deck knew it, they'd not wait for the engines to be repaired. They'd fizzle up just like gunpowder, there and then, and the whole lot of us white men would be pulled into tassels before we'd time to think."

"I don't know about that," said Kettle. "I've faced some of the ugliest crowds that have floated on the seas before this, and they thought they were going to have it all their own way, but they found that when it came to shooting that I could keep my end up very handily."

He waved his guest to a deck chair, placed a box of cheroots hospitably open on the chart table, and then he went outside the charthouse and leant over the bridge deck rail. The awning above him threw a clean-cut shade which swung to and fro as the Saigon rolled over the faint oily swell; and outside its shelter the sun's rays fell like molten brass, and the metal work was hot enough to raise a blister. The air was motionless and stagnant, and greasy with the smell of humanity. The whole fabric of the steamer shimmered in the dancing heat.

For the dense mass of pilgrims below the situation approached the intolerable. Left to itself, the rusted iron deck beneath their bare skins would have grown hot enough to char them. Nothing but a constant sluicing with water made it in any way to be endured. And as the water from alongside came up to them as warm as tea, it did but little to refresh.

The African can withstand most temperatures which are thrown from above onto the face of this planet, but even the African can at times die from heat as glibly as his betters. Even as Kettle watched, one of the pilgrims, a grizzle-headed Hausa from the western Soudan, was contorted with heat apoplexy; breathed stertorously for a minute or so; and then lay still, and immediately became a prey to flies innumerable, two of his nearest comrades bestirred themselves to look at him, pronounced that life was extinct, stood up, and, with an effort, carried the body out of the press and heaved it over the hot iron bulwark into the oily sea beneath. It is not good that the dead should remain with the quick even for minutes in circumstances such as those.

And whilst the bearers carried him away, an old white-haired negro from Sokoto stood upon his feet, swaying to the roll of the ship, and faced the heat-blurred east with bowed head. Aloud he bore witness that God was great; and that Mahomet was the prophet of God; and that of mortals, each man's fate was writ big upon his forehead. And then the rest of the pilgrim's bent their foreheads to the torturing deck plates, and made profession of the faith, following his words.

Capt. Kettle from his stand against the rail of the bridge deck pitied the heathen, and thought with a complacent sigh of a certain obscure chapel in South Shields; but at the same time he could not avoid being impressed by the heathen's constancy. They might die, but they forebore to curse God in doing it, and the omission gave him an insight into the workings of fatalism which made him think more of what Cortolvin had said.

Every man amongst the pilgrims had sword, or spear, or mace, or rifle within grip of his fist; and as a fighting force—with fatalism to back them—he began to realize that they could make a very ugly company to manoeuvre against. A regulation of the pilgrim trade requires that all weapons shall be taken from this class of passengers during the voyage, but Kettle had omitted to disarm them through sheer contempt for what they could do. If they chose to fight among themselves, that was their own concern; it never even occurred to him as they came off Jeddah quay, noisy and odorous that they would dare to contend against his imperial will; but now he sincerely wished that the means of serious offence were not so handy to their fingers.

I do not say that he was afraid, for, knowing him well, I honestly believe that the little ruffian has never yet feared man that was born of woman; but the safety of the Saigon was a matter just then very near to his heart, and he had forebodings as to what might happen to her.

He went back again inside the charthouse, sat himself upon the sofa, and ran a finger round inside the collar of his white drill coat.

"Do you like the cheroots, sir?" he said to his tattered guest.

"Nice cheroots," said Cortolvin; "wonder how many I'll smoke. Those True Believers are a pretty tough crowd, aren't they? There's one Soudanese fellow in a darfur suit of mail. Did you notice him? He's been a big war sheik in his day. He helped to smash up Hicks Pasha's army, and commanded a thousand men at the storming of Khartoum; but he got sick at Mahdiism about a year back, and set out to perform the Hadj. When it comes to fighting, you'll see that man will shine."

"He shall have my first shot," said Kettle.

"It surprises me," said Cortolvin, "that you ever went in for this pilgrim-carrying business at all. You must have been pretty hard pushed, captain."

"Hard wasn't the word for it," said the shipmaster with a sigh. "I met misfortune, sir, in Chile. I disagreed with my employer, who was a lady, and went off cruising in a boat by myself. A tea steamer picked me up and put me in Colombo. I got from there to Bombay as second mate of a tramp, but I couldn't stand the old man's tongue, and went ashore without my wages. I guess, sir, I'm no good except in command; I can't take an order civilly.

"Well, in Bombay I'd a regular nipgut time of it. I bummed round the agents' offices till I almost blushed to look at their punkah-coolies; but I'd no papers to show that would do me any good; and none of them would give me a ship the size of a rice mat.

"At last, when I was getting desperate, and pretty near put to going to sea before the mast, a Cardiff man I once knew came to the lodgings and gave me a tip. He'd been master of a country steamer; he'd been sacked (he didn't deny it) for drunkenness; he'd not drawn a sober breath for months, and didn't see any prospect of changing his habits; and there was the berth vacant, and I might have it for the asking.

"The pay wasn't much; only 100 rupees a month and percentage on profits; and the owner was a Parsee. I'd never been low enough down to sign on under a black man before, but I guess I was past being very nice in my tastes just then. The owner was fat and oldish, and wore a thing on his head like a top hat turned upside down, and I will say I did not give him much politeness. But he knew his place; he sahib'd me quite respectfully; and he said he'd be honored if I'd take his steamer under my charge. 'She was all he'd got,' he said; 'he loved her like his life, and he'd not trust her to anyone except a pukka sahib.'

"Of course he lied a good deal—all natives do that—and he fixed up our bargain so that I'd little to win and he'd a good deal, which is those Parsees' way. But I will say he was always most respectful, and in the matter of victualling he really surprised me. Why, he actually put Bass' ale on board at four annas the bottle!

"We cleared from Bombay in corn and cottons and earthenware, consigned to Jeddah, and the owner told me I'd have no trouble in getting a cargo of dates and coffee to bring back. But the Jeddah merchants seemed to think different. I cut down freights to near vanishing point, but they wouldn't look at them anyhow, I couldn't get a ton of cargo, on board for any spot in the known globe, no, not if I'd offered to carry it for nothing. The Saigon might have swung there at moorings till the bottom rotted out of her, and expenses were running up all the time.

"The climate was sickly, too; I lost my serang before I'd been there a week, and two more of the coolies died in the next 10 days. So when this cargo of pilgrims offered, I tell you I just jumped at it. Of course this old wreck was not fitted for the trade. She's small, she's iron decks, she's only two boats and she's not near enough water tanks. There'd be big penalties if she was caught. But I shipped a second rice steamer and signed that charter party smiling.

"It wasn't as if I'd got to go through the ditch to one of the Morocco ports; the pilgrims had only to be taken across to Kosseir; and squaring an Egyptian custom officer is only a case of how much backshish."

"You do know your trade," said Cortolvin.

"The under side of it," said Kettle, with a sigh. "A man with luck like mine has to. He never gets on with the decent steamboat lines, where everything is square and above-board. He can only get the little hole-and-corner owners, who you've got to make dividends for somehow and no questions asked or else just up and take the dirty sack.

"I'm a man," he added with a frown, "that can do the job well, and they know it, and keep me to it. But I despise myself all the time. It isn't in my nature, Mr. Cortolvin. Put me ashore, give me a farm, and let me bend yellow gaiters and a large-pattern coat, and there wouldn't be a straighter, sweeter-natured man between here and heaven."

The Hadji swept the perspiration from his forehead with the back of a grimy knuckle.

"There's no accounting for taste, captain. I'm the owner of acres near Richmond, and if I chose I could ride about my park and see the farms, and live the life of a country gentleman, just in the way you think you'd like. But I tired of it."

"Perhaps you have no wife, sir," suggested the sailor.

His guest gave a short laugh.

"O, Lord, yes," he said, "I've a wife."

He paused a minute and then threw his half-smoked cheroot savagely out into the sunshine.

"You can take it from me that I've a wife, captain. But—well, you see, I've always been an Arabic scholar, and I thought I'd come out to the Hedjaz to study dialects for a year or so. It would be a pleasant change after the milk and honey of a country life. I don't seem to have got killed, and I think I've liked it on the whole, it's been exciting, and I know more about bastard Arabic than any European living now that poor Palmer's dead, if that's any satisfaction. If I chose to go home now, I could pose as no end of a big boss in that line. The only thing is, I can't quite make up my mind to risk it. By God, yes," he added, with a stare out into the baking sunshine beyond the doorway, "O, yes, I've a wife."

Capt. Kettle did not quite follow all this, so he said politely and vaguely. "Well, of course, you know your own affairs best, sir." Then he took a long and steady look at his guest. "You'll excuse me, sir, but your name seems familiar. I wonder if you'd got that beard and some of your hair off whether I should recognize you."

"I fancy not."

"Cortolvin," the little man mused, "I'm sure I've seen that name before somewhere."

The Hadji laughed. "I'm afraid that neither I nor any of my people have been celebrated enough to have come into public notice, skipper; but we had a namesake some years back who was famous. A horse named Cortolvin won the grand national in '67. That's what you'll have got in your mind."

Capt. Kettle stiffened. "I beg your pardon, sir," he said with acid politeness, "but I don't see you've earned a right to insult me. When I am at sea I am what circumstances make me. When I am ashore in England, I would have you know I am a different person. I am a regular attender at chapel and a man who (outside business matters) tries to keep entirely straight. In England, sir, I take an interest in neither pocket picking, horse racing nor sacrilege, and I have it on the word of a minister I sit under that there is very little to choose between the three."

Cortolvin faced the situation with ready tact. That this truculent little ruffian who could flirt with homicide without a second thought should so strongly resent the imputation of being interested in a horse race did not surprise him much. He had met others of the breed before. And he smoothed down Capt. Kettle's ruffled feelings with the easy glibness of a man of the world. But the needs of the moment were again recurring to him with violence, and he broke off artistically to refer to them.

"Don't you think," he said, "my fellow pilgrims will bear a little attention now, skipper?"

"I will be off and make up a bit of a surprise packet for them," said Kettle. "Excuse me, sir, for two minutes, whilst I go and give instructions to my chief." And he swung on his pith helmet and left the charthouse.

The sun climbed higher into the fleckless sky, and lolled above the Saigon in insolent cruelty. The Red Sea heat grew, if anything, yet more dreadful. The men's veins stood out in ropes upon their streaming bodies, and it scorched them to draw in a breath. Drink, too, was scarce. The Hedaz is a region almost waterless; the desert at the back drains up all the moisture, and the Saigon had left Jeddah with her tanks only half filled. She had to depend upon her condenser, and this was small. And in the tropics, condenser-water must be dealt out in a sparing ration, or a dozen hours may easily lay a whole ship's company down with raging dysentery.

The Saigon carried a spar-deck amidships, and the pilgrims were grouped in two bodies forward and aft of this on the iron plating of the fore and main decks. The spar-deck was officially reached from these lower levels by a couple of slender iron ladders, but it was not unscaleable to a fairly active climber. There was an alley-way passing beneath the spar-deck, but this could easily be closed by the iron doors in the two bulk-heads, which fastened inside with heavy, clamping screws.

The chief engineer came into the charthouse and hitched up his grimy pyjamas, and mopped his face with a wad of cotton waste. He looked meaningly at the whisey bottle, but Kettle ignored his glance.

"Well, Mr. McTodd?" said he.

"I'm a ready for the pagans, sir, when ye're willing to gi' the word."

"What are your engines like now?"

"A wee bittee less fit for the scrap-heap than they were a dozen hours back, but no' very much to boast of." Mr. McTodd spat out into the sunshine. "They're the rottenist engines ever I fingered," said he, "and that's what I think of them. A man ought to have double my pay to be near them. They're just heart-breaking."

"You know she wasn't the P. and O. when you signed on."

"We're neither of us here, Capt Kettle, because we were offered fatter berths."

Kettle frowned. "I'll trouble you, Mr. McTodd, to attend to the matter in hand. You have those steam pipes ranged?"

"Both forrard and aft."

"Commanding both ladders?"

"Just like that."

"And you've plenty of steam?"

"Ye can hear it burring through the escape this minute if ye'll use your ears. It's been vara exhausting work toiling down yonder in that a'ful heat."

"Well, Mr. Cortolvin here assures me that the niggers will begin to play up the minute we get under weigh, so you see we know where we are and must be ready for them. I shall want you and the second engineer on deck, of course, so you must arrange for one of your crew to run the engines till we've got the business settled."

"I've a greaser down yonder who can open the throttle," said McTodd gloomily, "but he's got no notion of nursing sick engines like these, and as like as not he'll drive them off their bedplates in a score of revolutions. Ye'd better let me keep the engine room myself, captain. I'm a sick man, and I'm no' fit for fighting with my throat as dry as it is now."

Capt. Kettle poured out a liberal two fingers of whisky and handed it across. "Now, Mac," said he, "wet your neck, and let's have no more of this nonsense. You'll have to fight for your life inside 10 minutes, and you'll do it better sober."

The engineer eyed the whiskey and poured it slowly down its appointed path.

"Mon," he said, "ye've an a'ful poor opinion o' my capacity. I'll just be off and give yon coolie greaser some instructions, and get my sidearms, and be with you again in 40 clock ticks."

"I pity the nigger that comes to hand grips with McTodd," said Kettle, when the grimy man in the gray pyjamas had left the charthouse. "He's an ugly beggar to handle when he's sober as he is now. We'll get ready now, sir, if you please. You go to the after end of the bridge deck with McTodd and the second mate, and I'll look after the forrard end with the old mate and the second engineer. When they try to rush the ladder, McTodd will give them the steam, and they'll never be able to face it. All you and the second mate have to do is to see they don't climb up over the rail."

"I wish it could be avoided," said Cortolvin sadly. "That high-pressure steam will scald some them horribly."

"It will do more than that," said Kettle. "It will strip the meat clean off their bones."

"I have lived amongst those men, or their sort, for two solid years, and many of them have shown me kindnesses."

"You should have thought of that, sir, before you came to me here in the charthouse."

"I did think of it, but I couldn't be a renegade to my color, and so I came. But, captain, will you let me speak to them? Will you let me tell them that their scheme is known and prepared for? Will you let me explain to them what they will have to face if they start an outbreak?"

Capt. Kettle frowned. "You will understand that I am not frightened at the beasts?" he said.

"I quite know that," said Cortolvin, "and I am sorry to spoil a fight. But it is their lives I am begging for."

"Very well," said Kettle, "you can fire away. I don't speak their bat, and it's as well they should know from someone what they have to look forward to. Here's a life-preserver which you may find useful. It's the only weapon I have to offer you. My own pistol is the only gun we have in the ship."

The pair of them went outside the charthouse and walked to the head of the forward ladder. A newly-fitted steam pipe, with the joints all greasy with white lead, lay on the deck planks, and the second engineer stood beside it with thumbs in his waist strap. On the deck below, the pilgrims no longer squatted on their carpets, but stood together in knots, and talked excitedly. Cortolvin clapped his hands, and the sea of savage faces turned toward him.

There were representatives in that mob from half the Mahometan peoples of Northern Africa. There were lean Arab camel breeders of the desert, jet black farmer from the Great Lakes and the upper Nile, Hausas from the Western Soudan, limp Fellaheen from lower Egypt, and Egba who had served on the British police force at Lagos, merchants from the back of the Barbary states, workers in metal from Sokoto, and weavers from Timbukhtu.

They were not all holders of the title of Hadji; for though by the Mahometan law every male must make the Mecca pilgrimage at least once in a lifetime, unless debarred by poverty or lameness, the journey may be done by deputy. And these deputies, fierce, truculent ruffians, who had lived their lives amongst incessant wars and travel, were perhaps the most dangerous of all the lot.

The black men listened to their late associate with a momentary hush of surprise. He spoke to them in fluent Arabic. He did not appeal to their better feelings; he knew his audience. He said it was written that if they tried this thing, if they attempted to capture the steamer, they should surely fail; that all things were prepared to give them battle; and that a horrible death awaited those who persisted in their design.

And then he tried to point out the nature of the Saigon's defences, but there he failed. It is ill work to explain the properties of high-pressure steam to savages. A murmur rose among them which grew. They let out their voices, and roared defiance. And then the great black mass of them rushed for the iron ladder.

Capt. Kettle clapped a whistle to his lips and blew it shrilly.

"Now, then, Mr. Cortolvin," he cried, "away with you aft to help McTodd. These cattle here want something more than talk, and I'm going to give it them."

In answer to his whistle steam had been turned on from below. The second engineer unhitched his thumbs from his waistbelt, took a lump of waste in each grimy hand, and lifted the iron pipe. It was well jointed and moved easily, and he turned the nozzle of it to sweep the ladder. In that baking air the steam did not condense readily; it traveled three yards from the nozzle of the pipe before it became even thinly visible, and it impinged upon the black naked bodies and burned horribly without being seen.

At first they did not flinch. With a dreadful valor they faced the torment, and fought with each other to be first upon the rungs, and then when those in front would have held back, the mob behind pressed them irresistibly onwards. In a moment or so the first rank began to go down before that withering blast, and then others trod on them and fell also, till the hill of writhing black humanity grew to half the height of the iron ladder.

And in the meantime others of the pilgrims were trying to storm the bridge deck at other points; but on the port side, the gray-headed old man fighting baresark with an axe, and to starboard. Capt. Kettle, with pistol and knuckleduster, battled like wildcats to keep the sacred planking inviolate.

What was going on at the after end of the Saigon they could not tell. From behind them came the roar of the fighting Hauha, and the savage war cries of the desert, just as they rose up from before their faces. But in its first flush the fight was too close for any man's thoughts to wander from his own immediate adversaries.

It seemed, however, that the battle was over first in the after part of the steamer, and whether this was because the attack there was less heartful, or because Mr. McTodd's artillery was more terrible, cannot now be known. The question was debated much afterward without coming to a decision. But, anyway, by the time Capt. Kettle's adversaries had ceased to rage against him, Cortolvin was free to come and stand by his side as interpreter.

The wounded lay sprawling and writhing about the iron decks; below them the survivors—and scarcely one of these was without his scald—huddled against the doors of the forecastle; and the grimy second engineer held the belching steam pipe upward, so that a gray pall hung between the Saigon and the sun.

"Now, sir," said Kettle, "kindly translate for me. Tell those animals to chuck all their hardware over the side or I'll cook the whole lot of them like so many sausages."

Cortolvin lifted up his voice in sonorous Arabic.

"It was written," he cried, "that the giaour should prevail. It is written also that those amongst you having wit shall cast your weapons into the sea. It is written, moreover, that those others of you who do not on this instant disarm shall taste again of the scorching breath of Eblis."

A stream of weapons leapt up through the air and fell into the swells alongside with tinkling splashes.

"It would be a weariness to guard you," Cortolvin went on. "Swear by the beard of the prophet to make no further attempt against this ship, or we shall jail you fast in death."

A forest of trembling black hands shot up before him.

"We swear!" they cried.

"Then it is written that you keep your vow," said Cortolvin. "God is great! See now to your sick." He turned to Kettle and touched his ragged turban, after the manner of an officer reporting. "The mutiny is ended, sir," he said.

Capt. Kettle swung himself lightly on to the upper bridge and telegraphed "Full speed ahead" to the engine room; the propeller splashed in the oily swells, and the Saigon gathered way. Sullen and trembling, the pilgrims began to tend their hurts, and presently McTodd with a large copper kettle in his hand descended among them, and distributed oil and surgical advice.

"There were none actually killed at my end," said Cortolvin.

"I dropped four," said Kettle. "I had to. It was either me or them, And my old mate axed half a dozen before they let him be. We'd a tight time here while it lasted."

"It will require a good lump of backshish to explain it all satisfactorily at Kosseir."

"O, I can't go near there now after this. No custom house for me, sir. I shall just run inshore a dozen miles short of it, and put the beggars on the beach in my boats, and let them get into Kosseir as best they can. I suppose you'll come back with me?"

"I suppose so. Anyway, I can't go on with them. It is the first time any of them have discovered I was not a genuine Arab."

"I can imagine," said Kettle drily, "they'd give you a lively time, if they had you to themselves for five minutes. The sons of the prophet don't admire having Europeans messing about the Kaaba. But I owe you something, sir, and I shall be happy to go out of my way to serve you. I will drop you at Suakim, or at Aden, or at Perim, where I am going to coal, whichever you please."

"But what about yourself?"

"O, I shall be all right. I am seldom in need of a nursery maid, sir."

"But if this affair gets into the newspapers, inquiries will be made, and you'll very possibly find yourself in an ugly hole."

"It won't get in the newspapers," said Kettle, thoughtfully. "The pilgrims can't tell, my officers daren't for their own sakes, and you leave me to see my coolies don't. Newspapers," he repeated dreamily; "queer the hint should have come like that."

"What hint? What are you talking about?"

"I remembered then where I'd seen your name, sir. It was in the Times of India's general news column."

"What was said?"

"Well, sir. I suppose you'd better be told. But you must hold up for a hardish knock. Will you come into the charthouse for a minute, and have a peg?"

"No; get along, man, get along."

"I think it was about your wife, sir. Does she hunt?"

"All the season."

"Then it will be her. I remember now it said Richmond in Yorkshire, and the name was Mrs. W. H. Cortolvin. She's broken her neck, sir."

Cortolvin clutched at the white rail of the bridge. "My God!" he cried, "dead! Julia dead! Is that all, captain?"

"It was only a two-line paragraph. "You'll please understand how sorry I am to carry such sad news, Mr. Cortolvin."

"Thanks, skipper, thanks." He turned away and walked to the end of the bridge and staid there for a while, leaning against an awning stanchion, and staring at the baking levels of the Red sea which were slipping past the Saigon's rusty flanks. And then he came back again and stood at Kettle's side, looking down at the pilgrims anointing their scalds below.

"I have learned to be something of a fatalist, captain," he said, "when I was amongst these people. This is how I sum the situation. It was written that my wife should die whilst I was away. It was written also that I should live. God ordered it all. God is great."

Capt. Kettle gripped his hand in sympathy. "I'm sorry for you, sir," believe me, I am truly sorry. If you think a bit of poetry about the occasion would help you at all, just you say, and I'll do it. I'm in the mood for poetry now. All things put together, we've been through a pretty heavy time during these last few hours."

"Thanks, Skipper, thanks," said Cortolvin. "I know you mean well. And now if you don't mind I'll leave you. I think I'd like to be alone for a bit."

"You do, sir. Go and lie down on my bunk. I'll have you a beautiful elegy written by the time you're back on deck again. It will comfort you."

What People You Know Say About Gin Pills

THE GREAT KIDNEY CURE

TORONTO, June 6th, 1905.

I take great satisfaction in writing to you and telling you of the splendid condition of health that I am now in, which was brought about entirely by taking your Gin Pills.

For years my kidneys have been my weak spot and kept me unhealthy, and although I knew the cause, I could not get relief. Six weeks ago I heard that Gin Pills were being widely sold in Ontario, and I concluded to try them, though I did not believe that they could entirely cure me, but they have, and I am now sure that my kidney trouble has disappeared.

I will always have some of the pills on hand, and will recommend them to my friends who are troubled with ailments due to the defective work of their kidneys.

Yours respectfully,
F. E. BASKERVILLE.

Sold by druggists, 50c a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. We send sample free if you mention this paper.

Many Women have Kidney Trouble and don't know it. They attribute their ill-health to "weakness." Dragging pains in the hips, backache, nervousness, tiredness, headaches—are more often caused by sick kidneys. If your kidneys are not well, the other delicate organs are disturbed and inflamed, bringing on the horrors of female weakness and the serious troubles often attending pregnancy.

Bu-Ju

THE GENTLE KIDNEY PILL

cures these cases of "Female Weakness" because they cure the Kidneys. They promptly restore the Kidneys to health, allay inflammation, take away the pains, and make the delicate organs well and strong.

There is a Danish proverb which runs; "No man is so tall that he need ever stretch; and none so small that he need never stoop." It might be added that no one is so rich that he need not read the advertisements.

FOR THE LAUNDRY.

Have a Separate Bag For Things That Require Delicate Handling.

Almost every woman has felt the need of a separate bag for collars and cuffs, especially if her husband's are sent to the laundry, as they so often are, and must therefore be kept separate from the general family wash, or, if not needed for this purpose, still a small and ornamental bag substantial enough to be thoroughly useful comes in handy for the handkerchiefs and laces that require more delicate handling.

Such a bag may be made out of the fancy Turkish towels to be had anywhere for 25 cents apiece. Those with blue, pink or yellow grounds and a brocaded pattern or raised white upon them are especially pretty. The pink and blue will wash, but the yellow is not so sure. The bags are made by doubling the towel and seaming the edges to within four inches of the top, not including the fringe. These flaps are then turned over so as to make a sort of little lambrequin, and a line of stitching put about a third of an inch from the top, thus forming a hem in which to place the drawstrings.

Next run ribbon through the hem so that it will draw from both sides.

To wash, remove the ribbons and press out the drawstrings. Soak blue towels in strong brine, say half a cup of salt to a quart of water, an hour or two before washing. Do not boil. Pink towels should be soaked at least an hour in vinegar and water, half of each, and enough to cover. If in the soaking any part should be left dry, it will generally be found to have faded. Pink or blue goods of almost any description may be washed without losing color in this manner. For very delicate pink pure vinegar should be used. —Marion Foster Washburne in Cincinnati Enquirer.

TO FILL A CORNER.

Combined Cabinet and Closet For Books and Papers.

A combined closet and bookcase for a corner is shown in the illustration. Make a frame of wood like the design here represented. Four shelves are then fitted into the corner, three in the center, an equal distance apart, leaving a space about two feet deep at the bottom and the same at the top between the third shelf and the fourth, which comes just at the top of the ornamental framework. The curtain inclosing the bottom space may be of art silk or velveteen or some of the pretty colored denims. An ornamental railing across the top shelf of the bookcase is a pretty addition to the scheme. The space between the third and top shelves, which is framed by the arch, should be deep enough to contain a vase or two, while the curtained space at the bottom is convenient for holding magazines and papers. The top shelf is a nice place for photographs and china and a pretty lamp with a silk shade.

CORNER BOOKCASE.

A Law For Mothers.

Mothers should never take their infants to bed with them. Nothing could be more perilous than for a healthy young woman to sleep side by side with a little helpless babe. In Austria this peril is recognized, and if an Austrian mother sleeps with her baby she is sent to prison for it. The law prohibiting babes and their mothers from sleeping together was enacted in Austria at the end of a year when no less than 4,000 mothers in their sleep rolling on their babies killed them. Such a law should be enacted in America. Every physician, every coroner, knows of many tragedies of this kind. The tragedies, as a rule, are not made public, out of pity for the feelings of the mother. Perhaps it would be better if they were made public. Then the danger of mothers and babies sleeping together would be more clearly understood.

Women Money Earners.

Unfortunately the majority of women money earners remain amateurs in their work as well as in their accomplishments and studies. They often work for years without considering if their time and labor could not be spent to better advantage. If a young woman is to earn money at all, why should she not put ambition and energy into her work to accomplish as much as possible? She should not allow herself to be satisfied with doing anything short of her best in whatever she undertakes. It is by no means desirable that all women should be money earners, but it is most important that all should be capable of earning enough to support themselves and those dependent upon them.—American Magazine.

HOME VAPOR BATHS.

Two Ways by Which Effective Results Can Be Obtained.

Sponging with salt water is often recommended as a tonic for delicate persons. A pound of coarse salt is dissolved in four gallons of water and the body well sponged with the solution. After drying brisk friction should be applied over the whole surface.

A vapor bath can be given by seating the person in a cane bottom chair, pinning a blanket around the neck and letting it fall to the ground on all sides. Under the blanket place a large pan two-thirds full of boiling water. Into this plunge hot bricks, one at a time (two or three will be enough). In a short time the patient will be in a perspiration. Dry with warm towels and put her to bed. This is effectual treatment for a bad cold if the sufferer can be kept warm the next day.

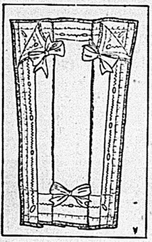
A vapor bath can be given in bed with the aid of a teakettle, a spirit lamp and two chairs. Substitute blankets for the cotton sheets, then make a tent of the bedclothes by raising them over the chairs, laid sideways on the bed, and introduce the spout of the teakettle under the tent. The kettle can be kept boiling by placing the lighted lamp underneath it.

A bath should not be given immediately after a full meal; but, if the strength is much reduced, some light refreshment before it will help the invalid to bear the fatigue with less exhaustion. Baths are an active remedial agency, and for that reason can easily be misapplied. They should never be given in serious illness without the sanction of the doctor in charge of the case, and his directions should be asked and followed in the matter of temperature and duration.

WASHABLE BRUSH BAG

A Dressing Table Convenience Made of Two Handkerchiefs.

From two fancy handkerchiefs, about thirteen inches square, a nice little washable brush bag to lie on the dressing table may be constructed. Fold in the middle of each a box plait about two inches wide, and at both sides another plait, so that the width is reduced to about six inches. If you pass an iron over the plaits they will stay in till you get the stitching done.



BRUSH BAG OF HANDKERCHIEFS.

Take each handkerchief separately and stitch across the box plait only at one end, about an inch from the edge. The end where this is done is for the opening. Now lay the handkerchiefs exactly over each other, right sides out. Commence about two inches from the opening end and an inch or so within the edge and sew down the side across the plaited end and to a corresponding point at the opposite side. Arrange your seam so as not to spoil the embroidery or printed pattern. For instance, it may run almost invisibly along a row of hemstitching. Turn back the top corners with a bow of ribbon and add another bow at the bottom of the bag. The opening spreads a little owing to the outer plaits being left unstitched.

Time Saving Kitchen Utensils.

Among the many useful and time saving kitchen utensils that cause the old fashioned housekeeper to open her eyes in amazement are olive stoners, potato and orange peelers, pea shellers, almond grinders, ice shavers and crushers, cheese toasters, corn scrapers, pineapple snips (for taking out the eyes of pineapples, which every housekeeper knows is a difficult process with an ordinary knife), flower scissors, alarm bell egg boilers, salad oil droppers (an arrangement for pouring oil in dressing drop by drop), clothes sprinklers, pie and cake lifters, fruit jar holders (for holding hot glass jars when preserving), sandwich cutters (these are for various fancy shapes), etc. To these are added odorless stewing pots and frying pans, which are said to prevent turnips, cabbage and other vegetables from giving odors while cooking; self wringing mops and knee rests for use when scrubbing floors.—New York Post.

For Tapering Fingers.

Frenchwomen have always taken great pride in tapering finger tips, and to this is probably due the invention of little devices for training them in the way they should go. They are little things, like steel thimbles, and are lined with soft felt. There are different sizes for the various fingers, and these are adjusted by pressing them to the desired size. The pressure should not be hard enough to cause any discomfort. Of course, results are not at once visible, but by continually wearing these little devices at night and as often during the day as convenient even very thick finger ends may be trained into a much more tapering effect.

REGULAR LIVING.

What Nature Demands In Return For Good Health.

First of all, one thing that nature won't stand is irregularity. We cannot safely bottle up sleep tonight for tomorrow night's use, nor force our stomachs one meal because we expect to eat sparingly the next, nor become exhausted in working night and day, expecting to make it up later.

Nature does nothing before her appointed time, and any attempt to hurry her invariably means ultimate disaster. She takes note of all our transactions, physical, mental and moral, and places every item to our credit.

There is no such thing as cheating nature. She may not present her bill on the day we violate her law, but if we overdraw our account at her bank and give her a mortgage on our minds and bodies she will surely foreclose. She may lend us all we want today, but tomorrow, like Shylock, she will demand the last ounce of flesh. Nature does not excuse man for weakness, incompetence or ignorance. She demands that he be at the top of his condition.

Nature's machinery, as it exists in the human body, is most complicated and delicately adjusted. No machinery constructed by man can compare with it in the perfection and proportion of all its working parts. Every machinist knows that his wheels and cams and gearing must run absolutely true and with uniformity or they will soon break down. It is the same with the machine that keeps the human body going.

CAUSE OF THE DELUGE.

Queer Tradition of the Aboriginal Blacks of Australia.

The aboriginal blacks of Australia have a queer tradition about the flood. They say that at one time there was no water on the earth at all, except in the body of an immense frog, where men and women could not get it. There was a great council on the subject, and it was found out that if the frog could be made to laugh the waters would run out of his mouth and the drought be ended.

So several animals were made to dance and caper before the frog to induce him to laugh, but he did not even smile, and so the waters remained in his body. Then some one happened to think of the queer contortions into which the eel could twist itself, and it was straightaway brought before the frog. And when the frog saw the wriggling he laughed so loud that the whole earth trembled, and the waters poured out of his mouth in a great flood, in which many people were drowned.

The black people were saved from drowning by the pelican. This thoughtful bird made a big canoe and went with it all among the islands that appeared here and there above the surface of the water and gathered in the black people and saved them.

An Artist's Feat.

One of the most remarkable and most artistic of twenty-four hours' records stands to the credit of Sir Edwin Landseer, who had promised a picture for the spring exhibition of the Royal British institution in 1845. On the day before the opening he was found standing in front of an untouched canvas. "I shall send that to the institution tonight, a finished picture," he declared to the astonished messenger who had been sent by the hanging committee to see if the promised picture was ready, "and have consequently given orders not to be disturbed." True to his word, Landseer put the finishing touch to his canvas and dispatched it to Pall Mall that very evening; and as "The Cavalier's Pets" it was one of the greatest successes of the exhibition.

The Change of a Word.

"Spanking" did not suggest chastisement originally. It was unknown to Johnson in this sense; to him a "spanker" meant "a person who takes long steps with agility." Rapid motion seems to be the root idea of the word "spank," which is not merely representative of the sound of the act, as "slap" and "smack" are. The low German "spakkern," or "spenkern," to run and spring about quickly, is close to the original meaning; hence a "spanking pace," a "spanking breeze" and a "spanker," in the sense of an active and sturdy person.

The Hudson Bay Company.

In 1670 Charles II. granted a charter to the Hudson Bay company, giving to that association the whole and sole trade and commerce on the waters lying within the entrance of the Hudson strait and on the lands adjoining. After the cession of Canada to Great Britain in 1763 the Northwest Fur company of Montreal sprang into existence, and by its competition with the older corporation compelled an amalgamation in 1821.

CURIOUS LAND LAW.

Owners In Belgium Do Not Control Beyond a Certain Depth.

One of the curious phases of the land law in Belgium is that the earth of a landowner beyond a certain depth does not belong to him. Should the owner of the surface discover a coal or gold deposit underlying his property he must first obtain a government concession before he can begin mining operations. The land beyond the prescribed depth in which wealth in the raw has been discovered may be conceded to a person other than the surface owner, who may operate under certain government regulations, one of which is that the owner of the surface is entitled to 3 per cent of the value extracted.

The mine pays to the government an amount determined by the value and importance of the concession, after which it must pay to the government a sum proportioned to the value of the total extraction. The government names the conditions under which the mines as well as other industrial establishments shall be operated and protects and safeguards the health and lives of the workmen as well as provides for the public safety.

The minister of industry and labor appoints a state board of mining engineers, authorized to regulate the working of all mines and all establishments considered dangerous or insanitary, whether shaft or open mines, quarries, factories, coke oven plants or briquette works.

A ZULU LEGEND.

Odd Story of the Origin of This Savage People.

The Zulus account for their origin, says a correspondent of the Country Gentleman (English), by a story of a talking elephant who fed upon children. He met a woman laden with an ax and bundle of fagots, accompanied by her child. Seeing the elephant, she guessed his intention and pleaded, "Spare my child, oh, elephant!" The elephant refused. "Then," said the mother, "if this evil must happen swallow me, too, oh, elephant!" So the elephant swallowed mother and child, and they found themselves with all the other children who were eaten previously. By and by the child grew hungry, and the mother lit a fire with her fagots. She then with her ax cut away the elephant's flesh, cooked it, and they all ate. As the fire burned, its great heat filled the elephant with pain, and he ran and ran and ran till they felt the thunder of his hoofs racing over hill and valley. At length, exhausted, he dropped down dead. Using her ax, the mother chopped and chopped until she made an opening in the elephant's side. After this they crept out and became a new nation in a new country.

Bees as Ventilators.

It is not generally known, but most beekeepers will inform you that such is the case, that each beehive has a corps of what could properly be termed "ventilating bees." During the hot seasons these ventilators station themselves at the entrance of the hive and fan the interior with the incessant motion of their wings. These ventilating corps are usually in relays of from four to a half dozen, and they are relieved at short intervals by fresh workers who keep up the fanning process. They are kept at work by a sort of patrol of bees, which insures incessant activity on the part of the fanners during the time they are at work. This story may sound strange to those who know but little concerning the wonderful intelligence of bees, but it is a scientific fact that has often been authenticated.

Diet and Sickness.

It is a broad rule that boiled milk and puddings made with milk agree more frequently than anything to restore a sick person. When beginning to restore a sick person to more ordinary diet begin with white fish, boiled. Plaice or sole boiled in milk is excellent. Never give potatoes when the digestion is bad. In place of bread give toast. Often there is a craving for acids. In such cases give lemon juice diluted with water and sweetened with sugar when allowable or with saccharin in diabetes. A craving for green stuffs should always be satisfied. Nature herself is crying out. Give water cress, but withhold radishes, as they are difficult to digest.

The Fishing Fleets.

In many localities off the Scotch coasts and the coasts of Norway the fishing grounds lie at some distance from the shore and the start must be made with the ebb tide, sometimes in the middle of the night. All the boats of a single locality generally start together, and to one unaccustomed to the sight the spectacle of 200 to 300 fishing boats putting off from a harbor like Yarmouth is a sight never to be forgotten.—London Graphic.

Bonus.

"Bonus" ought to be "bonum," since it is evidently intended to mean "a good thing" and therefore should be neuter, not masculine. The word is found as early as 1773, but no one knows who was the [illegible] or willful sinner against [illegible] that introduced it, though [illegible] assigns it to the London Stoc[illegible]

Hitting a House Boat

By CLAUDE PANARES

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Harold Strong was a New York artist and had painted the portrait of Ruth Bascomb and fallen in love with her. Whether she returned his love or not was the thing he was worrying over. Harry Stevens was a New York sculptor, and he had desired to bring out a marble bust of Miss Bascomb and also had fallen in love with her. As to whether she would consent to be "sculped" and marry him was a matter that gave him headaches. Both the artist and the sculptor had sisters that were friendly with Ruth Bascomb, and this was the general situation for the playwright to build on.

The present situation was that Ruth Bascomb's mother, who was a fairly wealthy widow, had become possessed of a house boat and had determined to float around Princess bay and up the Shrewsbury river for a month or so. Her guests were to be the artist and his sister and the sculptor and his sister and two or three other persons.
